There was a feeling, however, among those of the International Board that if it was to make the impress upon Canada and the United States which it desired to make, then this was only to be accomplished from an international viewpoint, and not by local, State or Provincial perspective.

Premier Ferguson was to have given an address at last night's banquet. Early last night word was received that Mr. Ferguson was ill and could not come here.

Senator George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., will address the delegates today ,it was announced.

Teach Electors to Vote.

J. Walter C. Taylor, of Montreal, International Vice-president, briefly addressed the delegates yesterday afternoon. He said the International Executive's chief object this year would lie in an attempt to teach the electorate of both Canada and the United States to exercise their franchise.

The apathy of the electors in both countries was alarming to those who pause to reflect. In every election fewer persons were exercising their franchises.

"We who are too lazy or indifferent to go out and vote, but who sit at home and talk of our 'rotten Government,' are responsible for such Governments. If Kiwanis can get the people to the polls there to exercise their franchise as they themselves deem best, then it will be performing one of the first duties of good citizenship. There is a great need for such an effort. If we can get the people as a whole to think 'good government,' we shall have good government," Mr. Taylor said.

Edward G. Tanguay, Kiwanian Governor of Quebec City, who presided, reviewed the work for the past year. It was rich in achievement. The establishment of three new clubs during the year was purported by Mr. Tanguay. He paid special tribute to the Kiwanians of Barrie for having sponsored two of the new clubs.

Create Three Sections.

Delegates approved of the Quebec-Ontario district being divided into three sections. It had been divided into four sections, but this division was not satisfactory. With three sections, it is proposed to place Hull, Pembroke and Ottawa in the Quebec District. Toronto, Peterborough, Orillia, and Timmins will be in Central Ontario, and Hamilton, London and Brantford in Western Ontario.

The question of Bowmanville will be settled to-day.

Hon. Harry Cockshutt, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, made an eloquent appeal for national and Imperial unity at the noon luncheon. His Honour said he appreciated the velop good citizenship and bring out splendid service being performed by Kiwanis Clubs. He knew of no other agency that was doing more to de the best there is in humanity.

George Ross of Toronto introduced His Honour.

With close to 500 delegates registered, the conventioned opened yesterday morning in the Royal Connaught. Rev. W. A. McIlroy pronounced the invocation.

President Thomas Holmes welcomed the delegates. The civic welcome was extended by Acting Mayor Treleaven, who is also a prominent Kiwanian. He gave the city's freedom to the delegates by making Victor M. Johnston, International President, the recipient of a gold key.

NOTED MEN FIGHT

PARIS, Sept. 5. — (Canadian Press.)—San Dunes, near Cabourg, was the scene yesterday of a romantic single combat with swords between Baron Gunsberg, former director of opera at Monte Carlo and Russian Colonel Bezobrazos.

The quarrel arose in William the Conqueror's ancient inn, where the two men were lunching. Bezobrazos gave an expression to unpleasant criticism of the Princely family of Monaco, and Gunsberg, like a knight of old, took up his sword in defence of his former patron.

The challenge was passed and the colonel and impresario repaired to a lonely spot on the sands and there fought until the colonel received a deep wound in the forearm and was forced to acknowledge himself beaten.

SWAINS OF ARGENTINE MUST RUN AWAY WITH BRIDES TO ESCAPE THE RELATIVES

By A. M. EASTERLING.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 6.—(United Press).—Courtship and marriage in Argentine are hedged about by so many troubles and restrictions that a lovelorn swain's only hope of marrying the girl of his desires and living happily alone with her is to run away and never let his whereabouts be known. Otherwise he will find that he not only wedded the senorita, but her senora madre, a few sisters and aunts and perhaps a grandma or two, all of whom take a very personal and active interest in even the most intimate affairs of the newly-weds.

Any man who has tried to court a pretty girl down here after knowing his way around at wooing time in the United States will readily acknowledge that it is a discouraging business. All the conventions would be smashed to smithereens if the loving couple were left alone for five minutes. When the lover appears and asks to see his beloved she sallies forth with her mother and together they sit and chat the evening hours away. Should the mother be unavailable for chaperon an aunt or an older sister may be utilized.

A Pleasant Courtship.

Imagine the unallowed pleasure of courtship which from beginning to end is not only observed but directed by the maternal parent of the girl, who considers it the duty of a mother to re-marry openly and frankly on the methods employed by the young man! If the man slyly takes the hand of the light of his life the movement does not escape the eagle eye of la senora madre, who certainly will make some cutting or allegedly humorous remark, often to the discomforture of the lovers.

After the engagement is announced the polley of watchful waiting is intensified, and the conversations are speckled with pertinent advice, some of which would astonish the North American mother who would consider it a serious breach of etiquette to do more than make bashful suggestions to the engaged pair. During the period of his wooing the man is expected to do some entertaining, take the girl around a bit, to the opera, to dinner, to the movies. And now comes the rub. An uninitiated lover will buy two tickets for the opera—for around 50 pesos—and to his great chagrin will find that he not only is a piker, but a most presuming and impolite speciment of the less deadly of the species.

Must Court Whole Family.

He should buy tickets for the family—not only for the mother, but for the aunts and uncles and any visitors who happen to be lodging in the house.

Having run the gauntlet of the courtship and succeeded in attracting love to him forever with a marriage ring the man's troubles may be said to be fairly under way. He may make suggestions about clothes and little things like that, but if he values peace in his family he dare not suggest anything further—the house, the furniture, the servants—they will be arranged for by the girl's family.

They Live With Couple.

After a house has been obtained and the husband settles down to enjoy a well-earned rest he finds suddenly that he has overlooked the fact that he also married the girl's family. If the girl's relations have not been blest with much money or a sufficiently commodious dwelling the female members migrate to the new abode of the son-in-law and take up their residence. They feel perfectly at home there, and at full liberty to run the whole shebang, which they do without consulting the man who may think he's the head of the house.

The customs in connection with courtship and marriage here are probably responsible for the small percentage of men who consider it worth while to marry.

WORK BEST CURE FOR EUROPEANS

European Countries Should Get Down To Work and Never Mind Loans.

By J. W. T. MASON

Righting European countries by loans instead of by work is beginning to show the unreality of this method of recovery. The recuperation of Austria by means of financial assistance arranged through the influence of the League of Nations, is threatened with failure Austrians are finding that the return to prewar conditions of normal life cannot be made by artificial balancing of budgets. Nor can currencies be permanently stabilized by reliance on foreign loans.

The Austrians have failed to respond with adequate energy to the task of making the loans they have received act as a stimulus to creative production. Austria is now facing a new period of deficits in her annual budget. The help from the League of Nations cannot be indefinitely continued; nor can the Austrian financiers expect further payments from the victors in the World War to be vanquished.

The Time Has Come.

The time has arrived for Austrians to save themselves from going down once more to the depths from which they were rescued by the League of Nations and by the leniency of the allies in co-operating to withhold pressure for an adequate war indemnity. An era of widespread extravagance has been prevalent in Austria for more than a year. Economy has disappeared in representative circles which should have given the lead in the nation. Prices have reached such heights that living in Vienna has been more expensive than in the capitals of the allied nations. Now, however, a slump has occurred. The Austrians have come to the end of their temporary resources. They are abandoning their spree, which undoubtedly was initiated and stimulated by the financial assistance which has given them by the allies.

People having overspent are now undergoing the necessity for severe retrenchment. In consequence, the receipts from taxation have fallen off heavily, and the government at Vienna is, in reality, faced with a deficit in the forthcoming budget, though by various manipulations, the deficit is being concealed.

Must Produce.

The plight into which Austria is falling can be remedied only by an increase in the productivity of the nation. This is the final phase of the reconstruction problem now facing not only Austria but all of continental Europe. Hitherto the progress in Europe's recovery has been predominantly due to the plentiful loans which have been raised by one country after the other since the closing of the war, largely in the American money market. This money has naturally served to stimulate production; but the test of its efficient employment is not in the first stimulus. Unless the money has been used to develop basic industries and to put business on a plane where it can self-create its own progress, the loans will have failed in their purpose.

Austria is the first nation to reach a position where it must show whether it has lived up to this rule. The present indication is that the rule has been, at best, only partly followed. Austria, to some extent, has been living on the principal of the loans, instead of making them go to work to earn the interest on which the country should live. Unless the Austrians are able to remedy this situation, the effect upon Europe's general recovery must be disquieting. The Austrian symptom will have to be accepted as representing the possibility of a general condition of false prosperity instead of the dawn of permanent recovery which it has been believed is appearing in Europe.

With a very large loan about to be raised for Germany, inquiry into Austria's real condition should be made for the purpose of discovering the whole truth. If the continental Europeans are living on their loans instead of making them work, and if Germany intends to do the same, good money is being thrown after bad; and Europe is fooling herself and the world.

FORD TO SEE FARM EXPERT.

He Will Talk With Lord Bledisloe, Noted English Authority.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 5.—Automobiles and politics are not monopolizing the attention of Henry Ford. While he is not in a position to state what scheme is at the back of Mr. Ford's mind, Lord Bledisloe has accepted the invitation, and will meet Mr. Ford in three weeks' time after visiting Salt Lake City, where he wishes to study Mormon farming conditions.

THEY CALLED AUTOS

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Sept. 6.—(United Press).—A party of summer guests recently thought they would revive and old Adirondack custom and take a tallyho ride over Keene mountain.

Four spirited horses took the big, swaying coach over the mountain in really remarkable time. But despite the novelty of the ride and the beauty and coolness of the lovely woods road, the party telephoned for their automobiles when they reached Keene village and returned over the hot macadam of the main trunk line highway. The old order changeth.

Never Before So much for the Price

It is not only in engineering design—in performance—that the good Maxwell now revolutionizes four-cylinder standards.

Never was there a car which gave the owner so much in fine materials and workmanship for anywhere near the price.

We will gladly go over the chassis and body construction with you, as intensively as you may desire, and you can satisfy yourself on that point.

We will particularly emphasize this fact: In every part which wears, or has to do with reliability, the good Maxwell is now actually stronger, pound for pound, than many a car costing four to five times its price.

You can depend upon the good Maxwell to stand up in toughest, day-after-day going—you can drive it with the same assurance you would feel with a costly car.

Indeed, if road conditions are at all possible, you'll never see a Maxwell stopped. Its brute pulling power seems always able to carry it through.

Perhaps the greatest boon to the good Maxwell owner, however, is the consistently care-free service it gives him, day after day and month after month.

There are a host of mechanical reasons why the good Maxwell saves its owners both trouble and expense.

The fact that the good Maxwell motor is practically vibrationless—that vibration in any event is not transmitted to the body—is another long-life feature.

You should ride in the good Maxwell, and talk with owners and learn their disinterested opinion of good Maxwell performance and economy,

(By Henry Wood, United Press Correspondent.

GENEVA, Sept. 6. —Japan to-day notified the league of nations that she appreciated the spirit animating the proposed mutual guarantee pact and accepted the fundamental principle of inter-capability, security and disarmament.

The League assembly resumed discussion of disarmament which will close to-day. Afterwards, the English delegation plans to propose that the question of arbitration be taken up by the Leagues first judicial commission and that of disarmament by the assembly third disarmament commission for the purpose of avoiding linking them up too closely.

GERMAN ACTOR PLAYS REAL HERO

When Attacked by Five Hold - Up Men.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—Leo Peukert, an actor, who plays the hero in a Berlin melodrama and saves the lives of women and children in every act brought his stage training into practical use one night recently. On his way home after the performance he was attacked by five hold-up men.

Peukert, accumstomed to fighting mobs and entire armies every night, on the stage, knocked out two men, broke his wrist on another, and caught one-hold man and led him off to the police station.

BANKERS DEMAND MORAL SECURITY

Airtight Security Demanded on Proposed German Loan.

LONDON, Sept. 6. — (United Press).—International bankers will demand air-tight moral security before they will underwrite the proposed loan for economic reconstruction of Germany, in the opinion of an American financial expert, familiar with the Dawes negotiations and the much-discussed loan.

The most necessary element in guaranteeing security of the German bonds is character—the greatest of the three C's of banking,—the expert said, and for that reason the attitude of the Germans toward the reparations settlement will be watched closely by the financiers.

"What the Germans have to do," he said humorously, "is to say that they like it. That's all. Nobody will believe them but that's not the point. They will be doing the graceful thing instead of the awkward and embarrassing."

The Spirit Counts.

"The Germans must say they are simply thrilled at the idea of paying reparations and rejoice that at last, with the help of the allies, they are in position to do so! As for the French and Belgian troops in the Ruhr, while they are obliged for reasons of State to ask for their removal, as matter of fact, their departure will cause mourning in the German breast.

"Of course, you smile. It is ridiculous, on the face of it. Still there you are. Something like that must, broadly speaking, be the German attitude if the war-time fears, suspicions and hatreds are to be allayed. Much can be accomplished if the Germans show a disposition to work with the Allies."

Bonanza For Middlewest U.S.

The proposed German loan, if it goes through, will be a bonanza for the American Middlewest, the expert believes.

"The Germans want to borrow roughly $200,000,000—say, half from America and half from England. Some people say 6 per cent from the United States and 40 from England; you hear various proportions I doubt if it has been decided what they shall be.

"Well, it is clear that America will provide at least $100,000,000 of the German loan. The Germans will use parts of this in the payment of reparations to the Allies, notably France, Belgium, and they will use the balance in the purchase from the United States of those articles which they most need to carry on their heavy industries, some of which are pledged for the payment of reparations in kind.

"German experts tell us that the American industries most certain to benefit by German purchases in the United States are, as it happens, located pretty much in the Middle West. They are three in number:

"Copper production.

"Sulphur production.

"Portland cement."

JACK THE GRAPPLER

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6. — Fred Link, known on the San Francisco waterfront for nearly half a century as "Jack the Grappler," is back on the job at the age of 75. Three months ago he applied for admission to the city relief home and retired from his labors.

Life in retirement became too monotonous for the active old fellow, however, and now he is back on the bay, plying back and forth in his ancient skiff, making a living by grappling near the piers for goods and articles lost overboard.

PRINCE WINS POLO GAME FOR "WHITES"

Scores Winning Run and Wins Match By Score of 8 To 7.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—(Caandian Press).—For the first time since he came here on his holiday, the Prince of Wales yesterday made a goal at polo. His goal gave the "Whites," on hich he played number 1, at Westbury, L.I., the winning score of 8-7. The last three chukkers of the game were played in a cool drizzle. It seemed that hard rain would come at any moment. It was during the sixth chukker that the Prince caught a ball on his mallet as it flew from a melee. The bobbing tan helmet of the slender figure on horseback charged down the field after the white ball and whipped it nearly through the bars. It gave his team eight points. The Prince jumped from his pony at the end of the game, tossed the reins to the groom and bounded into an automobile, which had posted itself close by the Prince's string of ponies. Most of the crowd had drifted casually toward the big car in which he had arrived. They were surprised and disappointed by his unlooked escape in another car altogether.

This is a new device adopted by the Prince. Of the cars which he has at his command he takes several with him on every trip so he may change cars to avoid inquisitive crowds.

The Prince showed his American admirers he could compete on even terms with American polo'sts. He rode with real dash, leaning far from his saddle, and came down on the ball with his mallet with force and accuracy.

TOURISTS' CAMP WISE MOVE ON PART OF CITY

During Few Weeks Largely Attended and Appreciated By Visitors.

CAN IMPROVE SITE.

Results Indicate That Numerous Tourists Could Be Deflected Here By Signs On Leading Roads.

An innovation in Peterboro this year was the tourists' camping grounds, provided at Exhibition Park, under the supervision of the Parks' committee of the City Council.

Unfortunately, the proposal was not consummated till late in the season. But, since the opening of the grounds on July 20, a good number of tourists have been enticed to stay over at Peterboro for a day, two days and in one instance four days.

There was provided by the City a superviser, who guarded the property of the campers while away from the grounds, and who looked after their welfare, making their sojourn here as pleasant as possible. Accomodation was provided by the City, including water service and sanitary conveniences. It has been roughly estimated that about 75 to 80 tourist partis made use of the grounds.

Alderman M. E. Turner, Chairman of the Parks' Committee thinks that it would be an excellent plan to have signs placed on roads leading to the City directing the tourists here.

The wisdom of this suggestion is substantiated by the opinion of Mr. Leon Frazer secretary of the Chamber of Commerce who is constantly in touch with visiting tourists and who from his observations has learned their requirements.

According to Mr. Frazer there are two lasses of tourists who will not come to a city unless camping grounds are provided. First, there are those who cannot afford an expensive tour and who will not stay at hotels. Then there is the class that prefer the open air. After being boxed up in a stuffy office fifty weeks of the year, they choose to enjoy the fresh air and sunshine as much as possible during their two weeks of freedom. Also, there is the nature loving type of individual, who desires to live close to virgin nature, away from the artifices, characteristic of the city.

With one exception, the Exhibition Park has all the ear marks of a splendid camping site. It is not approximate to water. Other centres have their camping grounds close to some body of water in many cases. Camp life is always associated with some lake or stream. In fact, what is more refreshing than a dip in cool water after travelling for two or three hundred miles over dusty roads?

About two years ago Inverlea Park was suggester as a suitable location for a municipal camping ground for tourists but the proposal met opposition from some members of the city council.

But, apart from that, there should be no paucity of splendid camping sites in and around Peterboro by reason of a lack of water. Along the Otonabee, there are numerous places that could be utilized for this purpose.

CHINA MARKED OUT HER BATTLE FIELD

LONDON, Sept. 6. — (United Press).—The powers have intervened in China, to the extent of sharply warning the combatants that the battle before Shanghai must be kept within certain limits where the foreign colonies will not be jeopardized, according to the Times Shanghai correspondent.

A note was despatched to General Chi Hsieh Yuan and General Lu Yung Siang, warning them that they must not fight along the Netang Pu River from the Woosung forts below Shanghai to the Kiangan Arsenal above the city.

The Times correspondent also reports General Lu, who is defending Shanghai, against the attacking forces of General Chi, issued a lengthy manifesto declaring against President Tsap Kun of the Pekin Government.

The manifesto denounced Tsao Kun as an "illegal President and arch robber." This declaration, the correspondent says, is believed to be preliminary to the entrance of Chang Tso Lin into the struggle. Chang, a powerful northern war lord opposed to the present Government at Pekin, would cause the present conflict to assume a most serious aspect.

THREAT AGAINST PRINCE'S LIFE

NEW YORK, September 5. — A letter to the Prince of Wales, saying in part: "If you don't get out of the United States soon you will meet a violent death," was received by the French consul general's office yesterday, it was reported by the police.

The letter, which was said to be three pages long, and in most portions incoherent, was postmarked Syosset.

The police to whom the letter was given sent a man to Syosset in an effort to locate the sender.

The United States secret service men and dignified moustached representatives of Scotland Yard, who are guarding the Prince of Wales on his American visit, professed to-day to attach no importance whatever to a therat against the Prince's life which fell into the hands of the New York police.

"Just some harmless crank," was the way one of the silent, cool-eyed shadows that stroll with apparent unconcern about the Burden estate, when "H.R.H." is at home, described the author of a rambling note which contained the threat.

The note which was addressed to "Acting British Consul, Hon A. Brousit," (who incidentally does not exist), covered four sheets of cheap paper, and contained but one legible phrase:

"I want to kill him." It referred to the Prince.

NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW BIG EVENT

A Dairy Pioneer's Day Will Be a Special Event.

(By J. E. Helfert.)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., September 6 (United Press). — Preparations for the National Dairy Show, to be held here 27th September to 4th October, are progressing, W. E. Skinner, secretary and general manager of the National Dairy Association, announces.

What promises to be the most complete display of dairy cattle, dairy products, and dairy machinery ever staged will be thrown open to the world at the coming classic. Dairy farmers, educators, manufacturers, bankers, merchants and students of the dairy industry from all parts of the country, from Canada, Mexico, and other foreign countries will be in attendance at this show.

It is estimated by the management that a crowd of no less than 70,000 persons interested in dairying in all of its phases will attend the exhibits, which will be housed on the Wisconsin State Fair Grounds and in the Milwaukee Auditorium. This building, with 105,000 square feet of floor space, is reserved entirely for exhibits of dairy making machinery.

Since Wisconsin was chosen to be host to the national event this year, it is expected that the agencies working for dairy advancement in the Badger State will marshal all their forces in giving Wisconsin a maximum representation at the show. Already the Wisconsin National Dairy Show Committee has begun operating through its chairman, John D. Jones, Jr., State Commissioner of Agriculture, and has gone into the problems incidental to the work.

Wisconsin Leading Dairy State.

Wisconsin for years has been recognised as the leading dairy state of the Union. Accordingly, county agents, breeders' association secretaries, editors, cow testers and other forces are being lined up to bring county delegations to the show in large numbers and every effort will be made to play up Wisconsin in true colours as a great dairy state.

The Milwaukee Association of Commerce is the leading organisation in looking after the comforts and needs of the many visitors expected at the exposition. Through the efforts of its executive committee, it has been arranged that all hotels reserve their accommodations for dairy show guests.

Nationally known dairy leaders will come to Milwaukee to speak at the dairymen's convention. Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, Dr. Division, United States Department C. W. Larson, chief of the Dairy of Agriculture; Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, New York, and Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and now president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, will give the keynote addresses.

Governor John J. Blaine of Wisconsin, and Governor J. O. A. Preus, of Minnesota, are also scheduled to speak at the national event.

Special days have been set aside for states and cities. Wednesday 1st October, is reserved as Illinois and Milwaukee Day, while Thursday, 2nd October, has been set aside as Wisconsin and Michigan Day.

A Special Feature.

As a special feature this year, the management has decided to hold a Dairy Pioneers' Day. Three men intimately associated with dairy progress through the years long since passed, have been chosen for honours, Stephen Moulton Babcock, University of Wisconsin scientist, who invented the milk test, which revolutionised dairping at the end of the nineteenth century; William Armon Henry, world authority on the feeds and feeding of live stock; and T. L. Haecker, dairy cattle savant at the University of Minnesota, will receive distinguished recognition as the living triumvirate of dairydom.

The memory of William Dempster Hoard, far-sighted editor and pioneer of a half-century ago and later governor of Wisconsin, will be revered on this occasion also.

What promises to be the outstanding display of grade dairy cattle ever attempted will be exhibited at this event. Five hundred head of the choicest cows from cow testing associations all over the country will be sold at auction.

Pure-bred Cattle Display.

The usual pure-bred cattle display, numbering more than 1,000 head of the world's stock, exhibits of bulls from bull associations, calves from testing cows, shown by boys' and girls' calf clubs, and daily demonstrations and lectures on dairy cows and dairy cattle trading, will feature the exposition throughout its session.

A new feature will be added in the form of daily competitive breeders' associations. This is a new departure in dairy circles which promises to be a great drawing card at the coming show.

There will be the regular agricultural college student judging contests during the early part of the dairy show. Students from far and near will convene to compete for individual and school honours in judging the five dairy breeds, Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein, and Jersey.

A complete edcational exhibit covering all the work on farm and dairy, prepared by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture will occupy an entire building on the state fair grounds. Research work on the production and marketing of milk and its products will be the subject of the exhibit put on by the United States Department of Agriculture.

ROME LOSES TO CHURCH OFFICIALS

Municipal Appropriations to Pay for Dressing-Up of St. Peter's.

ROME, Sept. 6.—The imposing but age-worn square in front of St. Peters' is at last to be newly paved and overhauled as part of the dressing-up process in anticipation of Holy Year, 1925, but only after more than 50 years of disagreement as to whether the expense should be borne by the Vatican or the municipality of Rome. The city has finally made the necessary appropriations, and work already has been begun.

The square, one of the show-places of Rome, has been in need of repair almost ever since the temporal power of the papacy was overthrown in 1870 but until now the city has refused to supply the funds because it was argued that, since it formed an integral part of the cathedral and Vatican grounds, the expense should be borne by the church. The church authorities retorted that it was one of the city's most beautiful and picturesque public squares, since it was always open to the public, and, therefore, it was the city's business to keep it up.

OL' SWIMMIN' HOLE FINALLY LOCATED

After Prolonged Debate Old Residents Agree on Location.

GREENFIELD, Ind., Sept. 5.—(United Press).— The 'Ol' Swimmin' Hole", made famous by James Whitcomb Riley, has been located at last.

Appropriation of $10,000 by the city council to buy the land along Brandy-wine creek where Riley went swimming as a boy, started a controversy that lasted for weeks.

Old settlers disagreed among themselves as to the location of the pool referred to by Riley. Some said it was north of the old National road, and others were just as sure it was south.

Others declared emphatically that a change in the creek bed had turned the hole into a sandbar.

Finally, after repeated consultations, it was agreed that the swimming pool was a few hundred yards north of the National road, and preparations are being made for opening the park.

DREAD MALADY MAN AND BEAST

Foot and Mouth Disease so Dangerous It Makes Experimenting Impossible.

VETOES EXPERIMENTED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(United Press).—Pledging all available resources of the Government in eradicating outbreaks of the foot-and-mouth disease, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has vetoed a score of requests and suggestions for a Federal experimentation of the malady because of its highly contagious nature.

Fearful that the disease germs could not be kept in stock, even for the purpose of study, and believing that a study of the disease would not augment the knowledge already gained by experimental and research work conducted by European investigators, Wallace has announced that the most advantageous plan for the department is to stamp out the malady as quickly as possible.

"The decision of this department not to approve experimentation with the virus foot-and-mouth disease in this country," said Wallace, "was arrived at only after careful consideration of every phase of the subject. Our reasons for not permitting such experiments are:

The Reasons.

"1. That only a cursory study of the disease could be made in inflicted areas under our system of prompt slaughter and burial of affected and exposed animals, unless the virus were propogated and kept on hand for an extended period after the disease would otherwise have been stamped out.

"2. That there is little or no prospect that such a study would add anything to the knowledge that has been gained by the vast amount of experimental and research study that has been made of this disease by European investigators of eminent standing in both veterinary and human fields of medicine.

"3. The difficulty in controlling the virus of this highly infectious malady and preventing the escape of the infection.

"4. The probability that many of the States, if they knew that experiments were being carried on with this disease, would immediately place embargoes upon shipments of practically all the products of the State in which investigations were being made.

"5. The likelihood that any investigation or research study that might produce worth-while results would have to be carried on for months and possibly for years, during which time the virus of the disease would be a potential menace to healthy, susceptible animals in the vicinity.

Not Justified.

"This department is most anxious to enlarge its knowledge concerning the foot-and-mouth disease and to find a better method of stamping out the infection when it gains entrance into this country, but I feel, in view of these facts, that we would not be justified in approving experiments, and that research studies of this disease should be carried on in countries where it is endemic and not in this country where the slaughter method has been employed so successfully."

Wallace has received a flood of communications from persons who assert they have a cure for the disease or who wish to pursue investigations or determine methods of transmission. Most of these communications, department officials believe, are from persons who clearly have studied the abundant literature on the subject and who have only slight knowledge of the scientific work which has been carried on in the past.

Attempts to experiment with the dangerous malady have gone for naught with several Governments.

Germs Escape.

When Prof. Loeffler of Germany was carrying on his research at the experimental farm, near Berlin, the disease escaped and the German Government was called upon to pay damages for the large losses resulting.

Similar experiments by the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries were stopped when the Government found it impossible to prevent healthy animals from contracting the disease.

Notwithstanding their especially constructed and equipped buildings and employment of every known precaution, French investigators at the Government farm, near Alfort, were obliged to discontinue their experiments. The malady spread from one barn to another.

Scouts Theory.

Explaining that severe outbreaks of the disease occurred in 1902, 1908 and 1914, all late in the year, Wallace has scouted the theory that flies and other insects were responsible.

"The Department of Agriculture," Wallace said, "has a staff of highly trained scientific workers and has a deep appreciation of the value of scientific work. But in view of the highly contagious nature of the disease and especially of the economic hardships caused by quarantine measures against localities and States in which the disease exists, it does not seem wise to entertain suggestions which contemplate keeping the disease in stock in any part of the United States or any island adjacent. The methods of eradication which the department has followed have kept the United States free from the disease except for the occasional outbreaks."

TORIES PLEASED.

King George V Did Not Sign MacDonald-Rakovsky Treaty.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—(United Press).—Nothing in recent years has pleased and thrilled the Tories more than the fact that King George V, did not sign the MacDonald-Rakovsky treaty with Soviet Russia.

This, mind you, is the first time in the history of England that the King has not signed a treaty. No doubt the official explanation is perfectly correct—namely, that Soviet Russia is ruled by a committee and has no official head, like a king or a president whose signature would balance that of the king. All this may be true, but the Tories who dread and dislike Soviet Russia worse than Edmund Burke disliked the French Revolution—profess to see in it one complete and perfect symbol. The King did not sign the Russian Treaty, O la, la, la! In the Tory Morning Post a poet bursts in rapturous song:

"There are few decent things
In this treaty we know,
But there's certainly one compensation:
The promoters have been Very careful to show
Some little respect to the nation.
We most certainly owe them
Our cordial thanks,
For (surely there isn't a doubt of it)
They all saw the wisdom
When playing these pranks
Of leaving his Majesty out of it!"

WHAT A WOMAN SHOULD DO WHEN SHE IS WEAK AND NERVOUS

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN HAVE SURPRISINGLY INCREASED THEIR STRENGTH, ENERGY AND ENDURANCE IN TWO WEEKS TIME BY THIS SIMPLE EXPERIMENT.

On account of the terrible weakness, nervousness and alarming symptoms, which are often produced by iron starvation of the blood, frequently the sufferer never suspects the real cause of her trouble, but thinks she has some other ailment. As a result of iron starvation you may suffer from headaches, dizziness, shortness of breath or heart palpitation, pains across the back, loss of memory, weak willpower, melancholy or the "blues," disturbed digestion, loss of appetite, sleepless nights, night sweats and so on. In such cases do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but eat more spinach and green vegetables and take organic iron like Nuxated Iron with them for a while and see what a difference it makes. But be sure the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron, while organic iron like Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Beware of substitutes. Look for the name "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N.I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. For sale by all druggists.

CHAPTER I

THE HUCKSTER

SIR OLIVER TRESSILIAN sat at his ease in the lofty dining-room of the handsome house of Penarrow, which he owed to the enterprise of his father of lamented and lamentable memory and to the skill and invention of an Italian engineer named Bagnolo who had come to England half a century ago as one of the assistants of the famous Torrigiani.

This house deserves, together with the story of its construction, a word in passing.

The Italian Bagnolo had the mischance to kill a man in a brawl in a Southwark tavern. As a result he fled the town, nor paused in his headlong flight from the consequences of that murderous deed until he had all but reached the very ends of England. To the fugitive, Ralph afforded shelter; and Bagnolo repaid the service by offering to rebuild the decaying half-timbered house of Penarrow. Having taken the task in hand he went about it with all the enthusiasm of your true artist, and achieved for his protector a residence that was a marvel of grace in that crude age and outlandish district.

The main doorway was set in a projecting wing and was overhung by a massive balcony, the whole surmounted by a pillared pediment of extraordinary grace, now partly clad in a green mantle of creepers. Above the burnt red tiles of the roof soared massive twisted chimneys in lofty majesty.

But the glory of Penarrow was the garden fashioned out of the tangled wilderness about the old house that had crowned the heights above Penarrow point. Time and Nature had smoothed the lawns to a velvet surface, had thickened the handsome boxwood hedges, and thrust up those black spear-like poplars that completed the very Italianate appearance of that Cornish demesne.

Sir Oliver took his ease in his dining-room considering all this as it was displayed before him in the mellowing September sunshine, and found it all very good to see and life very good to live. Now no man has ever been known so to find life without some immediate cause, other than that of his environment, for his optimism. Sir Oliver had several causes. The first of these—although it was one which he may have been far from suspecting—was his equipment of youth, wealth, and good digestion; the second was that he had achieved honor and renown both upon the Spanish Main and in the late harrying of the Invincible Armada and that he had received in that the twenty-fifth year of his life the honor of knighthood from the Virgin Queen; the third and last contributor to his pleasant mood was Dan Cupid who had so contrived matters that Sir Oliver's wooing of Mistress Rosamund Godolphin ran an entirely smooth and happy course.

So, then, Sir Oliver sat at his ease in his tall, carved chair, his doublet untrussed, his long legs stretched before him, a pensive smile about the firm lips that as yet were darkened by no more than a small black line of mustachios. It was noon, and our gentleman had just dined, as the platters, the broken meats and the half-empty flagon on the boar beside him testified. He pulled thoughtfully at a long pipe—for he had acquired this newly imported habit of tobacco-drinking—and dreamed of his mistress, and was properly and gallantly grateful that fortune had used him so handsomely as to enable him to toss a title and some measure of renown into his Rosamund's lap.

By nature Sir Oliver was a shrewd fellow and he was also a man of some not inconsiderable learning. Yet neither his natural wit nor his acquired endowments appear to have taught him that of all the gods that rule the destinies of mankind there is none more ironic and malicious than that same Dan Cupid. The ancients knew that innocent-seeming boy for a cruel, impish knave, and they mistrusted him. Sir Oliver either did not know or did not heed that sound piece of ancient wisdom. It was to be borne in upon him by grim experience, and even as his light pensive eyes smiled upon the sunshine that flooded the terrace beyond the long mullioned window, a shadow fell athwart it, which he little dreamed to be symbolic of the shadow that was even falling across the sunshine of his life.

After that shadow came the substance—tall and gay of raiment under a broad black Spanish hat decked with blood-red plumes.

The smile perished on Sir Oliver's lips. His swarthy face grew thoughtful, his black brows contracted until no more than a single deep furrow stood between them. Then slowly the smile came forth again, but no longer that erstwhile gentle pensive smile. It was transformed into a smile of resolve and determination, a smile that tightened his lips even as his brows relaxed.

Came Nicholas his servant to announce Master Peter Godolphin, and close upon the lackey's heels came Master Godolphin himself, leaning upon his beribboned cane and carrying his broad Spanish hat. He was a tall, slender gentleman, with a shaven, handsome countenance, stamped with an air of haughtiness; like Sir Oliver, he had a high-bridged, intrepid nose, and in age he was the younger by some two or three years. He wore his auburn hair rather longer than was the mode just then, but in his apparel there was no more foppishness than is tolerable in a gentleman of his years.

Sir Oliver rose and bowed from his great height in welcome. But a wave of tobacco-smoke took his graceful visitor in the throat and set him coughing and grimacing.

"I see," he choked, "that ye have acquired that filthy habit."

"I have known filthier," said Sir Oliver composedly.

"I nothing doubt it," rejoined Master Godolphin, thus early giving indications of his humor and the object of his visit.

Sir Oliver checked an answer that must have helped his visitor to his ends, which was no part of the knight's intent.

"Therefore," he said ironically, "I hope you will be patient with my shortcomings. Nick, a chair for Master Godolphin and another cup. I bid you welcome to Penarrow."

"You pay me a compliment, sir, which I fear me 'tis not mine to return you.

"Time enough for that when I come to seek it," said Sir Oliver with easy, if assumed, good humor.

"When you come to seek it?"

"The hospitality of your house," Sir Oliver explained.

"It is on that very matter I am come to talk with you."

"Will you sit?" Sir Oliver invited him, and spread a hand toward the chair which Nicholas had set.

In the same gesture he waved the servant away.

Master Godolphin ignored the invitation.

"You were," he said, "at Godolphin Court but yesterday, I hear."

He paused, and as Sir Oliver offered no denial, he added stiffly—

"I am come, sir, to inform you that the honor of your visits is one we shall be happy to forego."

In the effort he made to preserve his self-control before so direct an affront Sir Oliver paled a little under his tan.

"You will understand, Peter," he replied slowly, "that you have said too much unless you add something more."

He paused, considering his visitor a moment.

"I do not know whether Rosamund has told you that yesterday she did me the honor to consent to become my wife."

"She is a child that does not know her mind," broke in the other.

"Do you know of any good reason why she should come to change it?" asked Sir Oliver with a slight air of challenge.

"I know a dozen," he answered. "But I need not urge them. Sufficient should it be to remind you that Rosamund is but seventeen and that she is under my guardianship and that of Sir John Killigrew. Neither Sir John nor I can sanction this betrothal."

"Good lack!" broke out Sir Oliver. "Who asks your sanction or Sir John's? By God's grace your sister will grow to be a woman soon and mistress of herself. I am in no desperate haste to get me wed, and by nature—as you may be observing—I am a wondrous patient man. I'll even wait."

"Waiting can not avail you in this, Sir Oliver. 'Tis best you should understand. We are resolved, Sir John and I."

"Are you so? God's light! Send Sir John to me to tell me of his resolves, and I'll tell him something of mine. Tell him from me, Master Godolphin, that if he will trouble to come as far as Penarrow I'll do by him what the hangman should have done long since. I'll crop his ears for him, by this hand!"

"Meanwhile," said Master Godolphin whettingly, "will you not essay your rover's prowess upon me?"

"You?" quoth Sir Oliver, and looked him over with good-humored contempt. "I'm no butcher of fledglings, my lad. Besides, you are your sister's brother, and 'tis no aim of mine to increase the obstacles already [illegible]." He leaned across the table.

"Come now, Peter. What is at the root of all this matter? Can we not compose such differences as you conceive exist? Out with them! 'Tis no matter for Sir John. He's a curmudgeon who signifies not a finger's snap. But you, 'tis different. You are her brother. Out with your plaints, then! Let us be frank and friendly."

"Friendly?" The other sneered again. "Our fathers set us an example in that."

"Does it matter what our fathers did? More shame to them if, being neighbors, they could not be friends. Shall we follow so deplorable an example?"

"You'll not impute that the fault was with my father!" cried the other, with a show of ready anger.

"I impute nothing, lad. I cry shame upon them both."

"'Swounds!" swore Master Peter. "Do you malign the dead?"

"If I do, I malign them both. But I do not. I no more than condemn a fault that both must acknowledge could they return to life."

"Then, sir, confine your condemnings to your own father with whom no man of honor could have lived at peace."

"Softly, softly, good sir."

"There's no call to go softly. Ralph Tressilian was a dishonor, a scandal to the countryside. Not a hamlet between here and Truro, or between here and Helston, but swarms with big Tressilian noses like your own, in memory of your debauched parent."

Sir Oliver's eyes grew narrower; he smiled.

"I wonder how you came by your own nose?" he wondered.

"Sir," he blazed, "you insult my mother's memory!"

Sir Oliver laughed.

"I make a little free with it, perhaps, in return for your pleasantries on the score of my father."

Master Godolphin pondered him in speechless anger; then, swayed by his passion, he leaned across the board, raised his long cane and struck Sir Oliver sharply on the shoulder.

That done, he strode off magnificently toward the door. Halfway thither he paused.

"I shall expect your friends and the length of your sword," said he.

Sir Oliver laughed again.

"I don't think I shall trouble to send them," said he.

"How? Will you take a blow?"

Sir Oliver shrugged.

"None saw it given," said he.

"But I shall publish it abroad that I have caned you."

"You'll publish yourself a liar if you do; for none will believe you."

Then he changed his tone yet again.

"Come, Peter, we are behaving unworthily. As for the blow, I confess that I deserved it. A man's mother is more sacred than his father. So we may cry quits on that score. Can we not cry quits on all else? What can it profit us to perpetuate a foolish quarrel that sprang up between our fathers?"

"There is more than that between us," answered Master Godolphin. "I'll not have my sister wed a pirate."

"A pirate? God's light! I am glad there's none to hear you, for since her Grace has knighted me for my doings upon the seas, your words go very near to treason. Surely, lad, what the queen approve Master Peter Godolphin may approve, and even your mentor, Sir John Killigrew. You've been listening to him. 'Twas he sent you hither."

"I am no man's lackey," answered the other hotly, resenting the imputation—and resenting it the more because of the truth in it.

"To call me a pirate is to say a foolish thing. Hawkins, with whom I sailed, has also received the accolade, and who dubs us pirates insults the queen herself. Apart from that, which, as you see, is a very empty charge, what else have you against me? I am, I hope, as good as any other here in Cornwall; Rosamund honors me with her affection; and I am rich, and shall be richer still ere the wedding bells are heard."

"Rich with the fruit of thieving upon the seas, rich with the treasures of scuttled ships and the price of slaves captured in Africa and sold to the plantations, rich as the vampire is glutted—with the blood of dead men!"

"Does Sir John say that?" asked Sir Oliver in a soft, deadly voice.

"I say it."

"I heard you; but I am asking where you learnt that pretty lesson? Is Sir John your preceptor? He is, he is. No need to tell me. I'll deal with him. Meanwhile let me disclose to you the sure and disinterested source of Sir John's rancor. You will see what an upright and honest gentleman is Sir John, who was your father's friend and has been your guardian."

"I'll not listen to what you say of him."

"Nay, but you shall, in return for having made me listen to what he says of me. Sir John desires to obtain a license to build at the mouth of the Fal. He hopes to see a town spring up above the haven there under the shadow of his own manor of Arwenack. He represents himself as nobly disinterested and all concerned for the prosperity of the country, and he neglects to mention that the land in his own and that it is his own prosperity and that of his family which he is concerned to foster. We met in London by a fortunate chance whilst Sir John was about his business at the Court.

"Now it happens that I, too, have interests in Truro and Penryn; but, unlike Sir John, I am honest in the matter, and proclaim it. If any growth should take place about Smithick it follows from its more advantageous situation that Truro and Penryn must suffer, and that suits me as little as the other matter would suit Sir John. I told him so, for I can be blunt, and I told the queen in the form of a counter-petition to Sir John's."

He shrugged.

"The moment was propitious to me. I was one of the seamen who had helped to conquer the unconquerable Armada of King Philip. I was therefore not to be denied, and Sir John was sent home as empty-handed as he Went to Court. D'ye marvel that he hates me? Knowing him for what he is, d'ye marvel that he dubs me pirate and worse?

"'Tis natural enough to misrepresent my doings upon the sea, since it is those doings have afforded me the power to hurt his profit. He has chosen the weapons of calumny for this combat, but those weapons are not mine, as I shall show him this very day. If you do not credit what I say, come with me and be present at the little talk I hope to have with that curmudgeon."

"You forget," said Master Godolphin, "that I, too, have interests in the neighborhood of Smithick, and that you are hurting those."

"Soho!" crowed Sir Oliver. "Now at last the sun of truth peeps forth from all this cloud of righteous indignation at my bad Tressilian blood and pirate's ways! You, too, are but a trafficker. Now, see what a fool I am to have believed you sincere, and to have stood here in talk with you as with an honest man."

His voice swelled, and his lip curled in a contempt that struck the other like a blow.

"I swear I had not wasted breath with you had I known you for so mean and pitiful a fellow."

"These words—" began Master Godolphin, drawing himself up very stiffly.

"Are a deal less than your deserts," cut in the other, and he raised his voice to call—

"Nick!"

"I am answering now," was the stern answer. "To come here and prate to me of my dead father's dissoluteness and of an ancient quarrel between him and yours, to bleat of my trumped-up course of piracy and my own ways of life as a just cause why I may not wed your sister, whilst the real spur of your hostility is no more than the matter of some few paltry pounds a year that I hinder you from pocketing. A God's name, get you gone!"

Nick entered at that moment.

"You shall hear from me again, Sir Oliver," said the other, white with anger. "You shall account to me for these words."

"I do not fight with—with hucksters," flashed Sir Oliver.

"D'ye dare call me that?"

"Indeed, 'tis to discredit an honorable class I confess it. Nick, the door for Master Godolphin."

CHAPTER II

ROSAMUND

Anon, after his visitor had departed, Sir Oliver grew calm again. Then being able in his calm to consider his position, he became angry anew at the very thought of the rage in which he had been, a rage which had so mastered him that he had erected additional obstacles to the already considerable ones that stood between Rosamund and himself. In full blast, his anger swung round and took Sir John Killigrew for its objective.

He bellowed for Nick and his boots.

"Where is Master Lionel?" he asked when his boots had been fetched.

"He be just ridden in, Sir Oliver."

"Bid him hither."

Promptly, in answer to that summons, came Sir Oliver's half-brother—a slender lad favoring his mother, the dissolute Ralph Tressilian's second wife. He was as unlike Sir Oliver in body as in soul. He was comely in a very gentle, almost womanish way; his complexion was fair and delicate, his hair golden, and his eyes of a deep blue. He had a very charming stripling grace—for he was but in his twenty-first year—and he dressed with all the care of a court gallant.

"Has that whelp Godolphin been to visit you?" he asked as he entered.

"Aye," growled Sir Oliver. "He came to tell me some things and to hear some others in return."

"Ha! I passed him just beyond the gates, and he was deaf to my greeting. 'Tis a most cursed, insufferable pip!"

"Art a judge of men, Lal?"

Sir Oliver stood up booted.

"I am for Arwenack to exchange a compliment or two with Sir John."

His tight-pressed lips and resolute air supplemented his words so well that Lionel clutched his arm.

"You're not—you're not—"

"I am."

And affectionately, as if to soothe the lad's obvious alarm, he patted his brother's shoulder.

"Sir John," he explained, "talks too much. 'Tis a fault that wants correcting. I go to teach him the virtue of silence."

"There will be trouble, Oliver.

"So there will—for him. If a man must be saying of me that I am a pirate, a slave-dealer, a murderer, and heaven alone knows what else, he must be ready for the consequences. But you are late, Lal. Where have you been?"

"I rode as far as Malpas."

Sir Oliver's eyes narrowed, as was the trick with him.

"I hear it whispered what magnet draws you thither," he said. "Be wary, boy. You go too much to Malpas."

"How?" quoth Lionel a trifle coldly.

"I mean that you are your father's son. Remember it, and strive not to follow in his ways lest they bring you to his own end. I have just been reminded of these predilections of his by good Master Peter. Go not over often to Malpas, I say. No more."

But the arm which he flung about his younger brother's shoulders and the warmth of his embrace made resentment of his warning quite impossible.

When he was gone, Lionel sat him down to dine with Nick to wait on him. He ate but little, and never addressed the old servant in the course of that brief repast. He was very pensive. In thought he followed his brother on that avenging visit of his to Arwenack. Killigrew was no babe, but a man of his hands, a soldier and a seaman. If any harm should come to Oliver—

He trembled at the thought; and then, almost despite him, his mind ran on to calculate the consequences to himself. His fortune would be in a very different case, he reflected. In a sort of horror, he sought to put so detestable a reflection from his mind; but it returned insistently.

All that he had he owned to his brother's bounty. That dissolute father of theirs had died as such men commonly die, leaving behind him heavily encumbered estates and many debts; the very house of Penarrow was mortgaged, and the moneys raised on it had been drunk, or gambled, or spent on one or another of Ralph Tressilian's many lights o' love.

Then Oliver had sold some little property near Helston, inherited from his mother; he had sunk the money into a venture upon the Spanish Main. He had fitted out and manned a ship, and had sailed with Hawkins upon one of those ventures, which Sir John Killigrew was perdectly entitled to account pirate raids. He had returned with enough plunder in specie and gems to disencumber the Tressilian patrimony. He had sailed again and returned still wealthier.

And meanwhile Lionel had remained at home taking his ease. He loved his ease. His nature was inherently indolent; and he had the wasteful, extravagant tastes that usually go with indolence. He was not born to toil and struggle, and none had sought to correct the shortcomings of his character in that respect.

Sometimes he wondered what the future might hold for him should Oliver come to marry. When his thoughts did turn to it in momentary uneasiness he would abruptly dismiss them with the reflection that when all was said Oliver loved him, and Oliver would never fail to provide adequately for all his wants.

In this undoubtedly he was fully justified. Oliver was more parent than brother to him. When their father had been brought home to die for the wound dealt him by an outraged husband—and a shocking spectacle that sinner's death had been, with its hasty, terrified repentance—he had intrusted Lionel to his elder brother's care.

At the time Oliver was seventeen and Lionel twelve. But Oliver had seemed by so many years older than his age that the twice-widowed Ralph Tressilian had come to depend upon this steady, resolute and masterful child of his first marriage. It was into his ear that the dying man had poured the wretched tale of his repentance for the life he had lived and the state in which he was leaving his affairs with such scant provision for his sons.

For Oliver he had no fear. His anxieties were all for Lionel, whom he also judged with that same penetrating insight vouchsafed a man in his last hours. Hence his piteous recommendation of him to Oliver, and Oliver's ready promise to be father, mother and brother to the youngster.

All this was in Lionel's mind as he sat musing there, and again he struggled with that hideous insistent thought that if things should go ill with his brother at Arwenack, there would be great profit to himself; that these things he now enjoyed upon another's bounty he would then enjoy in his own right. A devil seemed to mock him with the whispered sneer that were Oliver to die his own grief would not be long-lived.

So wrought up was he by the welter of his emotions, by that fierce strife between his conscience and his egotism, that he came abruptly to his feet, a cry upon his lips—

"Vade retro, Sathanas!"

Old Nicholas, looking up abruptly, saw the lad's face, waxen, his grow bedewed with sweat.

"What be amiss?"

Lionel mopped his brow.

"Sir Oliver has gone to Arwenack upon a punitive business," said he.

"An' what be that, zur?" quoth Nicholas.

"He has gone to punish Sir John for having maligned him."

"Be that so? Marry, 'twere time. Sir John he be over long i' th' tongue."

"You—you have no fear, Nicholas?"

He did not add of what. But the servant understood, and his grin grew broader still.

"Fear? Lackaday! I hain't afeered for Sir Oliver, and doan't ee be afeered. Sir Oliver'll be home to sup with a sharp-set appetite—'tis the only difference fighting ever made to he."

The servant was justified of his confidence by the events, though through a slight error of judgment Sir Oliver did not quite accomplish all that he promised and intended. In anger, and when he deemed that he had been affronted, he was—as his chronicler never wearies of insisting—of a tigerish ruthlessness. He rode to Arwenack fully resolved to kill his calumniator. Nothing less would satisfy him.

Arrived at that fine embattled castle of the Killigrews, which commanded the entrance to the estuary of the Fal, he found Peter Godolphin there before him; and because of Peter's presence Sir Oliver was more deliberate and formal in his accusation of Sir John than he had intended.

Sir John, however, came half-way to meet the quarrel. His rancor against the "Pirate of Penarrow"—as he had come to dub Sir Oliver—rendered him almost as eager to engage as was his visitor.

They found a secluded corner of the deer park for their business, and there Sir John—a slim, sallow gentleman of some thirty years of age—made an onslaught with sword and dagger upon Sir Oliver, full worthy of the onslaught he had made earlier with his tongue. But his impetuosity availed him less than nothing. Sir Oliver was come there with a certain purpose, and it was his way that he never failed to carry through a thing to which he set his hand.

In three minutes it was all over, and Sir Oliver was carefully wiping his blade whilst Sir John lay coughing upon the turf tended by white-faced Peter Godolphin and a scared groom, who had been bidden thither to make up the necessary tale of witnesses.

MOR

Sir Oliver sheathed his weapons and resumed his coat, then came to stand over his fallen foe, considering him critically.

"I think I have silenced him for a little time only," he said. "And I confess that I intended to do better. I hope, however, that the lesson will suffice, and that he will lie no more—at least concerning me."

"Do you mock a fallen man?" was Master Godolphin's angry protest.

"God forbid!" said Sir Oliver soberly. "There is no mockery in my heart. There is, believe me, nothing but regret—regret that I should not have done the thing more thoroughly. I will send assistance from the house as I go. Give you good day, Master Peter."

From Arwenack he rode round by Penryn on his homeward way. But he did not go straight home. He paused at the gates of Godolphin Court, which stood above Trefusis point, commanding the view of Carrick Roads. He turned in under the old gateway and drew up in the courtyard. Leaping to the kidney-stones that paved it, he announced himself a visitor to Mistress Rosamund.

CITY'S DOOM NEAR, HENRY FORD'S VIEW

Looks For Shifting of Industries to Small Towns Throughout the Nation.

The time is approaching, according to Henry Ford, when the big officials will disappear and there will be decentralization of industry as well as population, with industrial plants in country places and something like an exchange of labour between the farms and the factories

This is the idea set forth in an interview with Henry Ford, written by Drew Pearson for the current issue of "Automotive Industries." Mr. Ford is quoted as believing that the passing of the big cities will mean less crime, and wealth. Mr. Pearson quotes Ford thus:

'The modern city has done its work and a change is coming. The city has taught us much, but the overhead expense of living in such places is becoming unbearable. The cost of maintaining interest on debts, of keeping up water supply, sewerage and sanitary systems, the cost of traffic control and of policing great masses of people are so great as to offset the benefits of the city. The cities are getting too heavy and are about doomed."

"Industry of the future will be organized on a big scale,' Mr. Ford went on, "but competition will force it to move to parts of the country where labour is steady and overhead costs low." As an example, he mentioned what had been done in the making small parts for his cars.

"Instead of making the man come to the city," he said, "we take the work out to him in the country. The farm has its dull season, when the farmer can come into the factory, and the factory has its dull season, when the workmen can get out on the land and help produce food."

"Every man is better off for a period of work under the open sky, and while we cannot afford the time to go off for three or four months a year to dawdle around some fancy Summer resort yet we can escape the routine of the factory and the monotony of the farm by an exchange of labour during the slack seasons."

MINERS STILL ON STRIKE.

Laid Plans For Continuing Strike Until They Get Honorable Settlement.

CALGARY, Sept. 6. — (Canadian Press).—Propects of coal miners strike in Alberta and South Eastern British Columbia being settled are as remote as ever they were and there is little hope of anything else by continuation of strike. Conference of United Mine Workers of America district 18, it was definitely learned last night. Have affirmed stand taken by conference committee and refused to accept any reduction of wages. Conference was unanimous in decision and miners have laid their plans for continuing strike until they got honorable settlement.

OBREGON VISITS EUROPE

After Quitting the Mexican Presidency Position.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—General Obregon will visit Europe next December, according to General Pascual Ortiz Rubio the Mexican minister to Germany. He says the Mexican government is now firmly established and General Calles, recently elected to the presidency, will assume direction of a stable government.

General Obregon will visit England first and will later go to France according to the Berlin minister. He will travel as an ex-president and without any official standing.

U.S. Embassy in [illegible] flob....9

TOKIO, Sept. 6.— The "summer embassy" of the United States has been established in Karuizawa, the best known mountain resort of Japan 90 miles north of Tokio.

The embassy, without a permanent home since its old building was destroyed by fire the night of last Sept 1, leads a somewhat roving existence and ies confronted by the problem of finding new quarters when the staff returns from Karuizawa to Tokio at the end of the summer.

Offices are still maintained in the Imperial Hotel in Tokio, which has housed the embassy since the earthquake.

EDMONTON, Alta.—A consignment of 150,000 pounds of Alberta butter left Vancouver recently for England.

WOVEN ROPE WAS FOUND IN A CELL

Russel Scott Murderer of Drug Clerk, Says Rope Was There For Three Months.

CHICAGO, September 6 (Canadian Press). — Russell Scott, former Toronto promoter, who became a hold-up man, and who is facing trial charged with the murder of a drug clerk, slain in a hold-up, was questioned yesterday after a rope, braided from strips of a man's clothing, had been found in the cell occupied by Scott and Dale Morris, robbery suspect.

The belief by the officials that the plot to escape jail had been concerted was denied by Scott, who declared the rope had been in the cell for three months.

Jail officials, who disbelieve the prisoner's story, are investigating further.

Two tiers above the tiers in which Scott and Morris are held are the cells of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, the confessed murderers of Robert Franks.

Scott, who narrowly escaped a positive death sentence, entered a plea of guilty to the murder charge, is awaiting a jury trial.

LETTER FROM GRAHAM.

Minister of Railways and Canals Writes Barbara Blade.

Little Miss Barbara Blade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Blade, who presented a bouquet of flowers to Hon. Geo. P. Graham at the Liberal Community picnic has received the following letter from the Minister of Railways and Canals, who evidently doesn't forget such fair favors:

Minister's Office,
Ottawa, Sept. 3, 1924.

Canada.

My dear Miss Blade:

Allow me to again thank you for the lovely bouquet which you presented at the great big meeting in your city.

I love little girls, and it would have been nice for me if I could have just run away with you, but I suppose your parents would have objected.

Again thanking you and them,

Yours Sincerely,
GEO. P. GRAHAM.

NO FROST FELT IN WEST SO FAR

Weather Conditions Could Not Be Improved On.

WINNIPEG, September 6 (Canadian Press). — The weather in West could not be improved for ening of the grain, and harvest Both are going on rapidly.

There was no frost damage Thursday night, and the country joyed another day of warmth bright sunshine, with the temperat holding well in the evening.

Reports yesterday from many Manitoba points are to the effect that the crop is the best harvested in years.

Sixty-five cars of new wheat were inspected at Winnipeg on Thursday. Fifty-seven graded No. 1 Northern, five No. 2, and one car smutty.

Two cars were rejected.

Twenty-five cars of new barley and forty cars of new rye were also inspected.

The crop in Northern Saskatchewan and Alberta is ripening unevenly and it is almost impossible to strike an average yield. Much depends there on the continuation of good opening weather.

The Peace River crop is much better than had been expected.

There will be considerable grain for shipment and plenty of feed.

Wheat was slightly weaker on the Winnipeg market yesterday, and dropped about a cent. October closed at $1.28 1-2 and December $1.25 1-2.

Government Will Invite Tenders in England and Australia.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Speaking in the House of Representatives, Premier S. M. Bruce announced that his Government had decided to invite tenders, both in England and Australia, for the construction of two cruisers which the Commonwealth Parliament has authorized.

CONVINCE YOURSELF OF YOUR NEED OF MILK

Milk is valuable for grown-ups, especially for sick people. It has been found in the army hospitals that the wounded recover much quicker when they have milk. Milk helps to keep you strong, vigorous and young.

If milk is used in combination with other food, one is sure of getting a well-balanced ration. One pint of milk will serve this purpose for grown-ups—children need a quart.

Children must have milk—adults ought to. There is no substitute for milk. Save other things if you must, but do not save on milk.

POULTRY GAINS OF NEXT YEAR ARE FIXED NOW

IMPROVE HOUSES

Clean Environment Helps Poultry Through the Winter.

Midsummer is past and much of the rush of farm work is over. There remains an abundance of work for every industrious farmer during the entire season, but nevertheless when the harvesting is completed there will be more time to plan and execute various pieces of work that are always neglected during spring and early summer, states Dr. C. C. Lopp.

Now is a good time to make plans for improving the housing of the farm poultry during the coming winter. The first step is a complete renovation of the poultry house. It should first be thoroughly cleared out, removing, if possible, all the interior fittings, such as roosts, nest boxes and any other parts that can be removed without too much labor or expense. Then the interior of the house is to be scraped with hoe or spade so as to free it from all dried accumulations of manure and other filth. After this has been done, the entire interior including the floor, walls, and ceiling, should be thoroughly sprayed, using for the purpose a solution of compound creosol, 2½ tablespoonfuls to each gallon of water.

Th3n White Wash.

After again airing and drying for ten days the interior of the house should be covered with a coat of ordinary lime white wash, which may be applied either by means of a spray pump or a white wash brush. Every crack and corner should receive a thorough coating so as to render the entire interior of the house not only thoroughly sweet and clean, but also light and sanitary.

If the house is not provided with ample window space so that the entire floor may be well lighted even during the winter days, additional windows should be put in. The work connected with this can usually be taken care of by the ordinary farm labor. In addition to the lighting, provision should be made for ample ventilation without the injurious draughts that are so frequently the cause of colds and roup during the winter months. The muslin curtain ventilators are probably the best and least expensive and can be readily installed.

Will Eliminate Lice and Mites.

By following the above directions the poultry house will be placed in proper condition to receive the fowls again, and it will be free not only from disease germs, but the lice and mites that are usually quite numerous and troublesome will have been eradicated to a very large extent. Work of this kind can be undertaken during the late summer and early fall months without seriously interfering with the progress of other farm work, and no effort should be spared to adopt the plans needed for putting these directions into effect.

At the same time that the poultry house is receiving the treatment outlined above, the poultry yard should come in for attention. It should be freed of all loose manure and rubbish of all kinds. Then it should be ploughed or spaded so as to turn under the surface and expose the clean earth beneath. During the remainder of the summer and fall frequent cultivation should be employed so as to keep down weeds, and keep the soil loose to allow the penetration of air and light, which will further improve the condition of the soil to receive the fowls when they are returned to the poultry house.

Remove Parasitical Eggs.

In addition it will be the means of removing from the reach of the fowls many of the eggs of various parasites, both external and internal, as well as disease germs of various kinds that are always harbored in the poultry yards unless they are frequently handled in the manner just described.

If there is no poultry yard, as is frequently the case on many farms, of course, this means of preventing and eradicating disease cannot be applied. In the latter case the places frequented by the farm poultry should be cleaned by scraping and the removal of all rubbish so as to expose the surface of the soil to the action of the sun and air during the remaining part of the year before the ground is covered with snow.

STABLE VENTILATION

Life Cannot Be Developed Properly Without Lots of Air.

When planning the changes to be made in the farm stables next season, give the question of ventilation first consideration. Animal life is dependent upon oxygen. Food that is eaten would never be of service to animals or to humans if it were not oxidized or combined with oxygen in the body. Fire cannot burn without air, and food cannot be "burned" in the body without air. It is strange that so much time and study have been expended on the problems of breeding and feeding, and that so little attention has been given to the most important demand in the life of a domesticated animal—pure air. Plan the stable in such a way that pure air will be available to the animals every hour of the day. So says L. Stevenson of the Ontario Agricultural College.

NATURE SOLVES A CROP RIDDLE FARMER GAVE UP

No Permanence for Higher Prices Without Production Control.

BY A. W. DOUGLAS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—It is a comment on economic events, after we had about exhausted efforts to co-ordinate prices of farm products and those of industrial life, that nature stepped in and did in a few months what we have only partly accomplished in as many years of constant endeavor. The consensus in the agricultural world is that the change was wrought at great expense by the destruction of much of the growing crops by insects and unfavorable weather. These are nature's ways, but it was done completely and for all time.

We cannot be so sure, however, that permanence of effort will obtain with the present relation of farm prices to other commodities, for these high prices will inevitably prove an incentive to largely increased acreages next spring, with consequent possibilities of proportionately great production, which will naturally mean lower prices. If figures of fabricated material are then on a lower plane, the situation will be much as now. If, on the other hand, the relation is again out of gear, then we have taken a step backward in the long process of readjustment from the economic confusion left by the war.

Must Control Production.

At present the agricultural world is making distinct progress in the control of distribution of farm products, but it is becoming increasingly obvious that such plans must also include control of production if they are to be permanently successful. This has already been demonstrated in the raisin industry in California, and has become the foremost problem of the various tobacco co-operative associations of the Central West and the South. Success in the distribution of the products of these and similar associations naturally breeds higher prices for the products, and this in turn brings larger output in its train until the burden of the surplus supply threatens to be too great to be carried by the associations.

Regulation of output is a comparatively simple matter in industrial life. In the iron and steel industry, for example, statistics of the general production and orders of the various members have become matters of common knowledge. Then as prices rise and orders decrease the situation is met by general action, and all hands reef sail by blowing out blast furnaces and decreasing output of mills until the headway of output is checked and there ensues again the cycle of lessening production and lower figures of costs that finally bring increased buying and resumption of output on an ascending scale.

To obtain the same uniformity of action from the farmers scattered all over the country has always been judged to be an impossibility because of the great number of individual units and their widespread separation. But this particular impossibility is one that leaders in agriculture have deliberately set themselves to do.

It is not unlikely that in the next decade the marketing of the great bulk of staple farm commodities will be controlled by growers' co-operative associations and that the control of production as well, within the limits of possibility, will be a cardinal feature of this program. This is already the story in process of evolution in the distribution of fruits and vegetables. This is a very indefinite limit set to control of such production as nature surrounds with the uncertainties of weather and the possibilities of damage by predatory insects, and the likelihood of such control has yet to be sounded.

Fast-Spreading Co-operation.

Among the many economic phenomena of the day there is none of greater moment nor of more vital significance than the fast-spreading co-operation among farmers for their mutual benefit. It is expressed in many million dollars of investment and of sales and in hundreds of thousands of members, and it is just in its infancy.

In the times immediately ahead it purposes to be one of the stabilizers of general business and a productive force that shall finally lead us out of the wilderness of doubt, apprehension, uncertainty and irresolution in which we have been so long wandering.

Of one thing we may be very sure—that the new life and courage, as well as increased buying power, given to the farmers by higher prices of farm products, prove to be the surest foundation for the better business conditions that lie immediately ahead of us and into next year.

Ontario's Greatest Crop.

Last Year Oats Were More Grown Than All Other Grains.

In 1923 oats were grown more extensively in Ontario than all other grains combined. It is probably safe to say that three-quarters of the oats which are now grown in this Province are of the O.A.C. No. 72 and the Banner varieties. According to extensive experiments and accumulated records at the College at Guelph and in Western, Eastern and Northern Ontario, the O.A.C. No. 72 has surpassed the Banner in both quality of grain and yield of grain per acre. The differences between these two varieties, if applied to the oat lands of Ontario, would mean millions of dollars annually in favor of the O.A.C. No. 72.

The Appeal of the Tree.

Travellers in Portugal report that in many places where timber trees are to be found—in woods, parks, and gardens—one sees the following inscription, headed "To the Wayfarer":

Ye who pass by and would raise your hand against me, harken ere you harm me.

I am the heat of your hearth on the cold winter night, the friendly shade screening you from the summer sun, and my fruits are refreshing draughts, quenching your thirst as you journey on.

I am the beam that holds your house, the board of your table, the bed on which you lie, and the timber that builds your boat.

I am the handle of your hoe, the door of your homestead, the wood of your cradle, and the shell of your coffin.

I am the bread of kindness and the flower of beauty.

Ye who pass by, listen to my prayer; harm me not.

HOW TO PREVENT THRESHING LOSS

Farmer Should See That Machines Are Working Properly.

Threshing machines, when they come from the makers, are as perfect as human ingenuity can make them. But, like every other tool or implement, they get out of order with use. And many threshermen are not born mechanics. Many of them do not master the secret of keeping the threshing machine in perfect running order. A few bushels of grain lost in the straw means little to them, since they lose only the threshing fee, which is a few cents a bushel. With the farmer who grows the grain it is a horse of another color. He loses the full value of a whole bushel of wheat or rye, or oats, or barley, or whatever the grain may be.

Usually poor threshing is due to one or more of four defects in method of running or in adjustment of parts; to running the machine at a wrong speed; failure of the cylinder to thresh out all the kernels of the heads; the separating mechanism not level, and the blast improperly adjusted. Any one of these may be readily corrected if the thresherman knows his job. The farmer who has threshing to do should make it a point to see that clean threshing is being done.

Be at hand when the machine is set and see that it stands level, front and rear side to side. When operation is under way go to the tail of the machine and examine the straw. Are the heads all empty? Is the blast too strong, blowing any grain into the straw? If these questions cannot be answered satisfactorily, insist on adjustment of the mechanism, that efficient results may follow. It is possible by so doing to make many extra dollars on threshing day.

KILLING TWITCH GRASS

New Plan Found by Agricultural College Experiments.

A successful experiment in ridding land of twitch grass was made recently by the Farm Department of the Ontario Agricultural College on a field that was a mass of twitch the oat crop had been removed.

The land was so badly infested that the field produced a very small crop that season. After the oats were removed, the land was ploughed lightly and tractor-disced twice, and then cultivated and harrowed. Later in the fall this field was ploughed with a double-disc plough, the front disc cutting six to seven inches deep and the rear disc twelve to thirteen inches. This brought loose subsoil up and threw it on top of the soddy mass of roots.

In the following spring the field was planted to flint corn in the check-row system. Practically no twitch made an appearance during the summer, and the field, without fertilizer, produced an excellent crop of flint corn for husking.

HONESTY PAYS

Breeder of Pedigreed Live Stock Must Realize Need.

The man who aspires to the accomplishment of things worth while in the realm of pedigreed live stock, must realize that his integrity as a breeder will be one of his greatest assets, and he must guard it as he would his stocks, from foul admixtures. As his herds and flocks increase and his business expands, he must make certain that, at the same time, there grows up a reputation for absolute honesty and fair dealing. Only by the help of these essentials can he expect his business to endure and yield to him satisfaction and profits.

A bee is said to travel 43,776 miles to gather one pound of honey consisting of 29,184 drops of nectar. Those who do not believe it are invited by the bee to count the drops.

CORN SPREADS FAST IN WEST DESPITE FEAR

United States Farmers Thought Corn Grew Only in South.

A MILLION TONS

Last Year Saw 150,000 Acres Sown to New Crop on Prairies.

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 6.—Years ago American farmers shook their heads when wheat seed was planted north of the international boundary. Now more than 400,000,000 bushels of wheat are harvested in the Canadian northwest.

Similar doubt expressed about the advisability of growing corn as far north as Canada is gradually being cleared up by actual annual increase in the development of this crop in the same territory.

Corn has progressed as far north as Edmonton in Alberta, and as Prince Albert in Saskatchewan, more than 200 miles north of the boundary line. This year, despite the lateness of the crop and the decline in its yield throughout the continent northwest Canada expects to harvest a million tons of corn.

It was only as recent as 1919 that Canadian agriculturists began considering the development of corn in the northwest as fodder crop in large proportions. The last four years have seen a remarkable development in this line. Last year there were nearly 150,000 acres under corn in the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

O.A.C. BARLEY IN U.S.

Ontario College Supplies Many States With the Best Seeds.

Dr. C. A. Zavitz received a letter recently from Prof. Moore of the Agricultural College of Wisconsin, which says: "Now practically all of the barley grown in Wisconsin, and in many of our surrounding States, emanated from the few pounds of barley which you so kindly sent up. We will never be able to get even for the good things you have done for us in bygone years."

EAST EMILY CROPS

Threshing Under Way — Some Fall Ploughing Done.

EAST EMILY, Sept. 6.—Threshing is well under way in this district, and the sound of the whistle is quite common in the neighborhood this week.

The farmers have quite a lot of their fall ploughing done already and the harvest not nearly all in. Some of the farmers have quite a lot of grain to cut yet, and others are all through drawing in.

The honey crop is not as good as it generally is. The price is ranging from 15c to 21c per pound.

CARRYING YOUNG PIGS ALONG.

Nature's tonics for young, growing pigs are exercise, sunshine, plenty of green succulent feed, and clean surroundings. Success with the litter, therefore, will depend on getting the sow and pigs on pasture as soon as possible. It is just as important to the health and thrift of the little that the mother get exercise as it is for the pigs.

HOGS AVERAGE 190 LBS.

TRENT RIVER, Sept. 6.—Mr. W W. Redden, of the 14th Concession, shipped five hogs at Norwood, receiving $10 a hundred. The hogs averaged 190 lbs. each.

The stomach of a young calf is very delicate, and changes in feeding must be made slowly. The calf will begin to eat grain and hay when it is about four weeks of age. Shelled corn is about the best grain feed, as it takes the place of cream in the milk.

Poorly-fitting collars are sure to cause sore shoulders. It is a good practice to bathe the shoulders noon and night with cold water. This avoids the chance of blood congestion and is at once soothing and pleasant to the animals.

The man who takes pride in "doing chores well" usually has sleek stock and clean stables, and realizes a great profit from his everyday choring as from any other of his farm operations.

Sometimes it's lack of time and sometimes it's just indifference that leaves farm machinery neglected and broken from one season to the next.

Uncle Ab says: One of the best ways to get men to work harder for you is to work harder than they do.

The ultimate success of any co-operative marketing effort depends on the will of the farmer to co-operate; on a spirit of mutual confidence and on trust in one another.

ADD TO INCOME FEEDING HOGS A PROPER DIET

Alfalfa, Clover and Corn Mature Animals Very Fast.

BY A. BRADFORD

Recent Investigations Show Ways to Improve Feeding Methods.

On thousands of farms this summer vast numbers of hogs are being fattened for market. In two or three months all these will be sold. Sizable checks will go into the farm bank accounts. Many debts will be paid, long-planned farm conveniences and necessities will be purchased. Verily, the hog is a dependable farm crop. No other farm animal can take its place. The hog lifts the mortgage; keeps things moving in every section of the country.

But we are just learning how to feed him. I am convinced, after following the more recent investigations, that nearly every farm can add a great many extra dollars to the farm income this year by a little change in the method of feeding these summer hogs now in the feed lots.

Those hogs on alfalfa or clover, with corn always before them, will mature very rapidly provided there is alfalfa or clover in sufficient abundance, so as not to require the hogs to run about too much to gather it up.

Protein Essential.

The other hogs in the feed lots, however, where neither clover nor alfalfa is available, will not grow so rapidly, no matter how much corn is thrown before them. Growing pigs mature rapidly and require an abundant supply of protein in their rations to build the body organs and muscular tissue, but this protein must be quality protein—not just the protein of the cereal grains; there must be some protein from milk, buttermilk, tankage or fishmeal if the most rapid gains are to be made. It is this that I mean when I say by right feeding the average farmer can add many dollars to his income from hogs.

Corn Alone Not Enough.

Hogs in the feed lots, therefore, will lay on more fat and flesh if their corn rations are reinforced with a small amount of other food of an animal nature, such as mentioned above. Ordinarily milk is not available, but tankage is procurable, and this should be fed in an amount up to at least one-tenth of the ration. Using one part tankage to every eight or nine parts of corn will promote more rapid gains than corn alone. Those farmers who have never tried tankage as a part of their hog fattening ration should lose no time in putting the plan into effect. You do not need to mix the feed, let the hogs themselves do it.

The tankage is put in a box or trough and the hogs use what they require. This free choice gives best results. If one prefers he can mix some linseed meal with the tankage—two parts tankage and one part meal. It is only occasionally that hogs will overeat of this mixture if corn is spread before them in full feeding. This mixed feeding will show more rapid gains on the corn consumed and hence a marked reduction in the cost of pork production.

Mineral Elements Needed.

These hogs in the feed lots also require more of the mineral elements than the corn ration provides. Therefor mineral supplements will help in reducing production costs and yielding a better finish. Ground limestone, wood ashes, ground rock phosphate, and bone meal, with salt added, will give what corn lacks. Tankage as an appetizer may be added to these mineral substances. One pound of tankage to each nine pounds of mineral supplement is recommended.

Give this plan a trial. Tankage and minerals along with all the corn the fattening hogs will eat, will lead to rapid and cheap growth. It is the new method over corn alone for fattening hogs. If this summer's bunch of hogs are finished in this manner a great many extra dollars will be added to the farm income.

Rainfall Affects Potato.

Records Indicate Extent To Which Rot is Induced.

Very careful records of the rainfall at the College have been kept by the Department of Agricultural Physics in each of the past sixteen years. In comparison the amount of rainfall during the months of July, August and September with the amount of rot in the potato crop in each of the past sixteen years some interesting information has been obtained. The annual amount of rainfall for the three months referred to for the eight years in which there was no rot was 7.1 inches, for the four years there was a moderate amount of rot 9.8 inches and for the four years in which the rot was abundant 11.7 inches. The amount of rainfall, therefore, appears to have a very marked influence in making conditions favorable or unfavorable for the development of rot.

In Great Britain the price of standard grade flour has taken another tumble after frequent advances since the middle of July. This time it is one shilling, and accordingly the price for a 280-lb. sack will be 45 shillings and sixpence. A reduction of two shillings was made on August 11. The peak price of standard grade flour was reached on July 28, when it was advanced to 48s. 6d. per 280 lbs.

WEEK OF ACTIVITY

Next week brings to citizens of this district several important events.

On Wednesday's Farm Page will appear the first in a series of competitions open to all boys and girls in city and country.

From one o'clock on Wednesday, when the Peterborough Exhibition opens its gates on the biggest fair ever held here, admission to the grounds, to the grand stand, and to the buildings is free to children from city and country.

On Thursday the Exhibition will be formally opened by the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, His Honor Henry Cockshutt.

On Thursday morning will be held the competition in judging cattle, poultry, bread and sewing, open to all young people. A trip to Ottawa and several cash prizes will be given.

And Monday will bring its continuation of the splendid serial that starts in today's issue, to be followed every day with its thrill as the story unfolds.

Give the boys and girls a chance to see the sights at Peterborough Exhibition free by bringing them to the city in good time. City children will have a half holiday for the occasion. Let them all try The Examiner competition; encourage them to enter the stock and other judging competitions at the Fair, and let the elders have a happy hour each evening reading "The Sea Hawk".

WOMEN ON FARMS MUST HAVE HELP

Country Women Should "Spunk Up" and Get Labor-Savers.

No one has profited more by labor-saving machines than farm women. Their own sphere has never been more fully and ably filled than it is to-day. Education is not denied them. More young women are in schools than young men; and in high schools and colleges young women have taken their places alongside the sterner sex, assuming a new dignity, fitting themselves for greater usefulness, and contributing in a large measure to the progress of the land and the whole world.

Why is all this true? Because mothers and daughters are no longer needed at the spinning wheels and the looms. Knitting needles have given way for books and papers; a hundred and one mechanical devices have been brought to the home, decreasing the manifold demands upon women, preparing the labors of the home in a tenth of the time and with a tenth of effort. Fifty years ago farm women took all of the day and much of the night to do the home work, to run the spinning wheels and to weave and make clothing. We have more clothing at but small part of the cost in comparison with what our forebears had half a century ago. Machines have brought rest to the body and have clothed us with better and cheaper raiment.

It is well to recall these things in order to appreciate the radical changes that have taken place in agriculture and the farm home. Man has put thought into steel and iron, and wind and sun and plant and soil, and has given tools to replace drudgery. Not many years hence the farm home will be equipped generally with modern lights, modern heating plants, bathrooms and sewage disposal and all the modern conveniences of use and service. Many of these homes possess these now. When farm women "spunk up" and join a programme for a more universal adoption of mechanical devices and home conveniences, these will follow as similar labor-saving devices have come to the barns and fields. It is up to the women.

LEGUME INOCULATION.

Effect of Bacteria Supplied By Department Shown In Crops.

The popularity of the Bacteriology Department of the Ontario Agricultural College is attested by the following statements —During 1923 a total of 4,327 cultures of legume bacteria for seed inoculation were prepared and sent out. Of this number alfalfa was most frequently asked for, with 1,892; red clover, 886; sweet clover, 652; peas, 524; alsike, 043; soy beans, 88; beans, 70; sweet peas, 39; vetch, 30; white clover, 0. The creamerymen and the cheesemakers asked for and were supplied with 147 lactic starters, and 63 Bulgaricum cultures.

The multiplying influence of the various bacteria sent from the Bacteriological Department during the year had a very noticeable influence on legumes of the fields and the finished dairy products of the factories.

BUCKWHEAT SET BACK

Hot Weather Hurt Growing Crop—Cutting Nearly Done.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 6.—The buckwheat crop, which looked so promising two weeks ago, received a serious drawback during the hot week just past, but the rain on Tuesday will help along what was later and not burnt up.

Nearly all the farmers in the district are through cutting, and while none have it all in the barn there is a very small percentage in the field.

Potatoes promise to be a bumper crop, while turnips and corn are doing fine.

Earl Shearer, who operates a large garden at Shearer's Point, will have about 611 muskmelons and about 4,111 watermelons.

GAS ENGINEER WINS A PRIZE FOR HIS WHEAT

Green Amateur Shows Alberta How to Grow Grain.

FOR HIS HEALTH

Ever Since Second Year at Plough He Has Been in High Class.

FENN, Alberta, Sept. 6.—A gas engineer, green at farming, has shown Alberta how to grow wheat.

More, this newcomer has won coveted agricultural prizes ever since his second year "at the plow" and now boats the grand championship for his Marquis wheat seed, bestowed upon him at the last international grain show at Chicago.

Major H. G. L. Strange is the man, known better as a war hero than a farmer, yet one of the leading agriculturists in Canada, if not in North America.

Before Strange came to Alberta he had won high honors for war service. He was a poison gas engineer with the Royal Engineers in France for four years, was wounded three times, was awarded the Military Cross and was mentioned twice in dispatches.

For His Health.

Then, come here in 1921 to recuperate from an attack of gas poisoning, Strange started a model farm. He consulted federal and provincial experts on agriculture. The University of Alberta offered aid.

MAJOR H. G. L. STRANGE.

From the beginning, Strange used registered seed and he continually sought to improve it. The result was that two years after his start he won eighth place at the Chicago show with his wheat, third with peas, and fifth with barley.

And at the last show Strange brought an added honor to Alberta. The province won the prize for Marquis wheat for the first time, through him. It had been going to Saskatchewan until Strange took to farming.

Other Interests.

Strange doesn't confine his attention to grains. He is an enthusiastic advocate of the "Large Black" hogs as the best bacon type, a pen of which he imported from England to give him a start.

He is also a poultry raiser and it is his ambition to have the highest laying flock of Barred Rocks in America.

Besides honors won through his own initiative, Strange has gained additional fame from his fellow farmers. He is president of the Alberta Seed Growers' Association, director of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, member of the dominion government's advisory seed board and secretary of the Alberta Record of Performances Poultry Breeders' Association.

For ten years, before his war and farm career, Strange was manager of a gas company in Honolulu.

BLADE BLIGHT OF OATS

Disease Causes Young Plants to Turn Yellow—Big Loss.

Blade blight of oats occasionally causes heavy losses in the oat crops of Eastern Canada and Eastern and Central States of America. It attacks also barley, wheat and bluegrass to a limited extent. So says Prof. Dan Jones, Ontario Agricultural College.

It is most noticed in the spring and early summer when it causes the young plants to turn yellow, brown and red, withering them up. In the latter part of the season it induces blast in the heads.

Its spread and the amount of damage it causes is largely dependent on weather conditions. The seasons when much rain, cloudiness and muggy weather prevail are the seasons most favorable for its development.

Two species of bacteria working together are considered necessary to cause the disease. They are found in the soil. They do not, however, affect the plant through the root.

Little can be done to prevent or control this disease except to select and breed resistant varieties.

HENS THAT ARE NON-PRODUCERS EAT UP PROFIT

Money for Poultry Raisers is in Egg Production.

NEED TRAP NEST

Instructions Given for Culling Useless Birds From Flock.

Probably the greatest hindrance to the profitable keeping of poultry on the ordinary farm is the retention of a lot of fowl that are poor layers, due either to their being too old or of a type to produce meat rather than eggs.

The production of eggs is the end of the poultry business in which the most profit can be made, so that a heavy egg producing type is the type that is best suited to ordinary farm conditions.

Generally speaking, the pullet year is the most profitable period of a hen's life. It is advisable, therefore, either to mark the chicks when hatched, using a different mark for each year, or to band the pullets when they are put into winter quarters, so that at culling time the age of the different birds may be seen at a glance and only those that are required for breeding purposes retained after the first year's production.

For the careful breeder the use of the trap-nest is the logical means to cull the flock but the ordinary farmer does not use trap-nests so that reliance msut be placed on physical characteristics. The high producer will be found to be of an active disposition, early off the roost in the morning and late to go to roost at night and always busy. Her head will be clear cut, face smooth and free from wrinkles, with bright prominent eyes, skin soft, pliable and of fine texture and a general appearance of health and vigour.

Cull all birds that show a lack of vigour, a sluggish lazy disposition, a coarse rough head with overhanging eyebrows, an inclination to break down behind, or that show heavy deposits of internal fat, as evidenced by a thick skin and an abdomen that is hard and firm to the touch. In contrast to this the heavy layer will have skin that is fine in texture and the abdomen will be soft and pliable. This last feature is one on which great weight should be placed, but in culling reliance should be placed on a combination of features rather than on any one feature.

NEW O.A.C. NO. 144 OAT.

Outyielded Others in Tests and Straw Lodged Less.

The O.A.C. No. 144 oat was obtained from the Siberian variety through nursery plant selection. This oat, which matures about the same time as the Banner, has a spreading head, white grain and less than the average per cent. of hull found in oats. The straw is strong, and it has proven to be an excellent yielder of grain.

When tested on thirty-two farms situated in twenty-one different counties in Ontario in 1923, it outyielded the O.A.C. No. 72 by 5.7 bushels, the O.A.C. No. 3 by 10.3, and the Liberty Hulless oat by 17.3 bushels of grain per acre. In triplicate plot tests at the college, in the acreage of the last five years, it surpassed the O.A.C. No. 72 by 4.3 and the Banner by 5.6 bushels of grain per acre. During this five-year period the straw of this variety lodged less than either the O.A.C. No. 72 or Banner oats.

It is not lack of time, but indifference which leaves farm machinery broken and rusty throughout winter.

THREE BETHANY PITCHERS WERE CLOUTED OFTEN

C.G.E. Had Field Day With Eight Inning the Big Feature.

HARDILL GOOD.

Sisson, of Bethany, Provided Fielding Stunt—Score Was 24-3.

Canadian Generals pounded out twenty-two lusty wallops for a total of twenty-four runs in eight innings and held the Bethany aggregation to the first game of their Intermediate O.B.A.A. series at Exhibition Park yesterday. The Electricians found no difficulty in connecting with the offerings of the Bethany slabsmen and forced no less than three changes of pitchers. They had men on the bases in every inning and scored in all but two. The eighth was the big inning. In that inning Bethany bunched three of their seven safeties with an error for three counters, which were all they could get off Hardill's good pitching. In the locals' half of the same frame fourteen batsmen went to the plate and ten runs were added. McCarney, Ross and Ranger each got two hits and McCarney scored two runs in this inning.

McCarney was the leading hitter with five hits and a walk in six trips to the plate. Ross and Rose each had four hits. Ranger had three hits, one of which was the longest hit of the game but good throws by Price and McCartney caught him at the plate.

Sisson made the best fielding performance when he took Barrie's Texas League over his shoulder while running at top speed to centre field.

Hardill was the pitching selection for the locals. He allowed seven hits and turned back fifteen by the strike out route. He was given good support by his team-mates and was never in difficulty. The three Bethany pitchers struck out ten between them but all three were touched for numerous hits and were always in trouble.

VETERAN LOSES TITLE YESTERDAY

After Holding Championship For Six Years, George Lyon Met Defeat.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press)—After holding the championship for six years, since the formation of the association, George S. Lyon of the Lambton club, relinquished the title in the seventh annual tournament of the Canadian Seniors Golf Association to his club mate, F. A. Parker, but it was not until both men had staged a great struggle for honours that the veteran was forced to acknowledge defeat.

In the thirty six holes played on Wednesday and Thursday, the two players were tied for first place with cards of 162 and in eighteen holes play off on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Lyon sank a twelve foot putt to square the score of 79 and two were forced to play off again yesterday afternoon and once again former champion was faced with task of sinking a long putt, twenty five footer, to square the match, but he was short. It was agreed that had fortune smiled on Mr. Lyon at all he would have made his championships seven straight. Mr. Parker played the steadier game yesterday however, and the loser did not show punch that he generally is able to call to his assistance although he managed to win back two strokes on the last four holes. The ninth hole can be blamed for Mr. Lyon's defeat. In the first round of Wednesday he took seven at this hole and yesterday he took the same number.

POLO POSTPONED.

Meadowbrook Field Made Unsafe By Friday's Rain.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press).—The first game of the international polo series between Great Britain and the United States, scheduled for Meadowbrook today, has been postponed until Tuesday, Sept. 9, the United States Polo Association announced last night. Friday's rain is responsible for the postponement.

Officers of the polo association went over the international field last night shortly before dark and decided that it would not be safe for man or pony to attempt to play on it. As a result the match was called off until next Tuesday.

The officers said that a bright sun to-day might make the field in shape to play, but the possibility of this was so slight that it was de-

FRENCH TENNIS PAIR DEFEATED

Wood and Patterson, of Australia, Had Little Trouble In Doubles.

AUSTRALIANS LEAD.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 6. — (Canadian Press).—Australia took the lead from France in the Davis Cup competition at the Longwood Cricket Club Friday afternoon, when Pat O'Hara Wood and Gerald L. Patterson, Melbourne, partners of many years' standing, smothered Jack Brugnon and Rene La Coste, of Paris, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

The rival teams divided honors in the opening singles Thursday, La Coste defeating Patterson and Wood conquering Jean Borotra, the French captain, so that yesterday's doubles victory put the winner of the United States zone ahead by two matches to one. To-day at 2.30 o'clock Patterson and Borotra, Wimbledon winners in 1921 and 1924 respectively, will meet.

The concluding contest of the "tie," the Thursday winners — Lacoste and Wood—are to compete.

Friday's match was close for a time but the superior team work and better tactics of the Australians enabled them to win the encounter without the loss of a set.

The Frenchmen never were ahead at any stage, and the one-sidedness of the competition detracted somewhat from the interest.

MARY K. BROWNE IN GOLF FINAL

DIFFICULT SHOT.

NAYATT, R. I., Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Playing in her first national golf tournament just after she had been a semi-finalist in the national tennis tournament, Miss Mary B. Browne of Los Angeles yesterday performed the remarkable feat of defeating Glenna Collett of Rhode Island, ex-champion of the United States, in a match that went an extra hole. Miss Browne made two fine shots to take the match—a hundred and seventy-five-yard brassie through trees to oven at the eighteenth and a fifteen-foot carrom putt at the nineteenth.

To make the shot that won the match Miss Browne, owing to a slight incline in the green, putted toward the side of the cup where lay Miss Collett's ball. Her ball carromed off the ex-champion's into the hole.

Today Miss Browne will play Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia, who yesterday defeated Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, also of Philadelphia, two and one.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

There will be an important meeting of the Mercantile League in Cressman's Store at 7.30 Monday evening. This meeting is called to consider the protest of the Examiner team against the C. G. E. It is important that every team have their representatives on hand on time.

If the Examiner Club win their protest they will meet the C.G.E. at 5.30 Tuesday afternoon at Riverside Park. If they lose, the C.G.E. will meet the Westclox in the first game of the play-off for the League championship.

BELLEVILLE WON THE SILVER MUG

Tweed Represented at the Campbellford Bowling Tournament.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 6.—The handsome silver cup donated by W. S. Wiggins, was won by Belleville on the second day of the bowling tournament. The heavy rain of the previous night and the threatening weather of yesterday morning prevented the attendance of some of the outside rinks who were here on Wednesday. T. C. Elliott, with his rink of Peterborough bowlers, stood a good chance to win the Wiggins trophy, but failed to appear to finish their play.

L. B. Glover and Dr. Beattie went through to the finals with A. J. Meyers and J. A. Stewart in the Scotch doubles and won 10-5.

For the first time Tweed was represented at a Campbellford tournament, the club in that village being in its second year. Two rinks were entered to take part in the Scotch doubles— F. A. Bartlett and Dr. Bowlby (skip) and F. Fanning and C. H. Kerr (skip), the latter the president of the Tweed club. Fanning and Kerr were eliminated in the preliminaries by Gillespie and Tait of Campbellford, and Dr. Bowlby and Bartlett lost to Oke and Brunting of Port Hope.

In the consolation preliminaries Dr. Bowlby and Bartlett defeated Gillespie and Tait, but Fanning and Kerr lost to Wilkinson and Moore. The latter rink eliminated Dr. Bowlby and Bartlett in the first round. The record of play for the Wiggins cup is as follows:

FIRPO TO FIGHT WILLS SEPT. 11TH

Firpo Is the Enigma of the Ring Although He Has Fought 32 Battles.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—(Associated Press).—Luis Angel Firpo, who meets Harry Wills at Boyle's Thirty Acres September 11, remains the enigma of the prize ring although he is a veteran of 32 battles during the five years of his career.

When the giant Argentine enters the ring to fight Wills for the right to challenge Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world, his course of action will be hidden behind an inscrutable mask. His chances of victory will rest upon the use he makes of a tremendous right hand and powerful body.

Violating orthodox methods of training, ignoring ring technique and scorning scientific boxing, Firpo, once a stevedore on the docks at Buenos Aires, employed the elemental equipment of a fighting heart, a rugged body and a powerful right hand, to battle his way through waves of criticism and knock the marvel of modern heavyweight champions—Dempsey—out of a ring a year ago.

A rugged body motivated by a single-track mind a stubborn will and fearless courage, earned for Firpo the name of "Wild Bull of the Pampas" during his rise to fame which constitutes one of the picturesque romances of the prize ring.

Born October 29, 1895 in Argentina, of an Italian father and a Spanish mother, Luis grew up as a bootblack, an odd job man and graduated to the many occupation of stevedore. Labor was irksome—observers claim that Luis still shirks heavy work during his training periods—and in 1917, two months after he witnessed his first prize fight, Firpo entered the ring and was knocked out in the first round by Angel Rodriguez, now retired.

The setback only angered the future Wild Bull who bowled over a score of amateurs before his first professional fight in September, 1919, with an American, William Daly. Firpo won by a knockout in seven rounds and has added 11 other knockout victims to his record when he first came to this country in 1922.

Firpo was met by no bands or public acclaim when he first arrived here. Landing unostentatiously, he trained in cellars, fought off hunger but never thought of abandoning the career which he had chosen. When an opening came he knocked out Sailor Maxted, Italian Jack Herman and Joe McCann before returning to Argentina, where he won his first big purse in beating Jim Tracy, an Australian.

Since that time Firpo has been in the public eye. He came to this country early in 1923 and knocked out Bill Brennan, Jack McAuliffe and halted a come-back by Jess Willard. Before each fight his equipment was ridiculed, and it was freely predicted that Dempsey would easily conquer the crude workman from Argentina. But the champion was knocked down twice and hurled out of the ring before he beat the Wild Bull to the canvas for the seventh time, to win by a knockout in two rounds in the most spectacular prize fight in history.

Firpo grew in business sagacity as he advanced in power. He manages his own affairs, combs the country in barnstorming flurries and his financial bouts with Tex Rickard and other promoters have attracted almost as much attention as his fights in the ring.

In the midst of negotiations for a return match with Dempsey, the "Wild Bull" suddenly announced that he was through with prize fighting; but when Rickard offered more attractive inducements, he changed his decision. In his own country he has been regarded as a national hero because of the attention he attracted to the South American continent. He is now implicated with immigration authorities here in a legal battle which has a woman in the background.

Firpo won 24 out of his 32 battles by knockouts, and seven by decisions His knockout by Dempsey was the only reverse of his professional career. The coming bout with Wills is considered by the impatient "Wild Bull" as a mere preliminary to another championship affair with Dempsey.

ST. LEDGER TRACK OPENS NEXT WEEK

LONDON, Sept. 6.— (By The Canadian Press).—Doncaster home of horse racing for nearly two and a quarter centuries, where for almost 150 years the St. Leger, the oldest of the five classic races for three-year-olds which feature the flat-racing season in England has been run annually with but few interruptions, will be the racing centre of the country next week, with the St. Leger Stakes being run on Wednesday. With the running of the St. Leger all the classics for the year will have been decided, those run previously being the Two Thousand and One Thousand Guineas at Newmarket in May, and the Derby and Oaks at Epsom in June.

Although the glamor and popularity that surrounds the runnig of the Derby over the Epsom Downs is not marked at Town Moor, the St. Leger is generally considered a better test of the thoroughbred than the chief Epsom classic or that at Newmarket. The Town Moor course is one mile and a half, or the Two Thousand Guineas course of one mile, and is admittedly a better course than at Epsom. Coming as it does in September, the "mares' month," when the fillies are presumably at their best, and the more slowly developed colts are nearing the top of their form, the winners of the earlier classics meet their most serious opposition at Doncaster with the result that in many cases they go down to defeat. Papyrus, winner of the Derby last year, was beaten on the Town Moor, as was also Ellangowan, winner of the Two Thousand, Lord Derby's filly Tranquil, winner of the One Thousand, winning easily.

Excluding the war years, when a substitute for the St. Leger was run at Newmarket, winners of the chief Newmarket and Epsom classics have been failures at Doncaster for the past 20 years, Rock Sand, winner of the mythical triple crown in 1903 being the last. Nor will this year supply a outstanding three-year-old, the four classics preceding the St. Leger having been won by different colts and fillies.

Sansovino Lord Derby's colt that won the chief Epsom classic this season, carrying the Derby colors out in front for the first time in 140 years in the race originated by and named after Lord Derby in 1780, was early installed favorite for next Wednesday's classic. Diophon, H. H. Aga Khan's colt, the outstanding two-year-old of 1923 winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, proved a failure at Epsom, finishing 12th, while the two classics exclusively for fillies also resulted in upsets in form, Lord Rosebery's Plack, winner of the One Thousand at Newmarket, finishing second to Sir Edward Hulton's straitlace in the Oaks. Plack is the only classic winner this season that was not nominated for the St. Leger.

The race for the St. Leger Stakes was originated in 1776, four years earlier than the Derby, and took its names from Col. St. Leger, its originator, who lived at Parkhill near Doncaster. On Sept. 24 of that year, during the Doncaster races, which had taken place annually for 75 preceding years, a race for a sweepstake of 25 guineas each for three-year-old colts and fillies over a two mile course was run as the result of a suggestion by Col. Ste. Leger. The stakes were increased to 50 sovereigns each in 1832 while the weights have been raised from time to time to keep pace with modern requirements. For the first running of the race there were only six competitors while for this year's St. Leger 316 colts and fillies had been nominated when the list closed on Oct. 31, 1922. In addition to the stakes, 4,000 sovereigns are added to the purse, making the value to the winner between £10,000 and £11,000.

SOCCER WILL NOW PROGRESS IN ONT.

Meeting of Dominion and Canadian Associations Lasted 15 Hours.

TORONTO, Sept. 6.— (Canadian Press).—After fluttering for a matter of fifteen hours over a joint session of the Dominion football association and Canadian football association here to-day, dove of peace finally alighted and following statement signed by officials of erstwhile warring bodies was handed out.

"At session which concluded tonight between the D.F.A. and the C.F.A. complete settlement was arrived at and an agreement signed by representatives of both bodies.

All suspensions passed on all player, club, official and grounds in connection with past trouble have been raised. It is recognized by both association that this is not victory for either but is lasting peace with honor."

So passes bickering and calumny which has disrupted soccer in Ontario and which has threatened at times to place the game in a position from which it might experience great difficulty in recovering.

It is felt by officials of both bodies that soccer in Ontario will now progress at rate quite unknown heretofore.

TRAIN HITS AUTO.

Three Were Seriously Hurt When Car Crashed Into Second Car of Train.

CARGILL, Ont., September 6 (Canadian Press).—Leonard O'Reilly of Eden Grove, Mrs. Thomas Desmond of Pinkerton, and the latter's daughter, Miss Mattie Desmond, a trained nurse, of Toronto, were seriously injured in an accident at the C.N.R. crossing at Pinkerton Station, when their coupe crashed into a east wayfreight train No. 576, about eight o'clock last night.

The party were proceeding west to Pinkerton Village.

Driver O'Reilly did not see the train approaching owing to the heavy shower of rain which was in progress at the time, and the automobile collided with the second car of the train, being completely wrecked.

First-aid was rendered by the train crew.

Dr. Turker of Paisley and Dr. Sinclair of Walkerton were called, and had the patients removed to the hospital.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

CHINESE GENERALS CONSCRIPTING MEN

This Is Practically the Same As Kidnapping Them To Dig Trenches.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 6.— (United Press).—The foreign settlement at Shanghai, was apprehensive to-day, not because a direct attack by Chekiang troops was feared, but owing to the danger of armed fugitive troops fleeing into the quarter if Lu Young Hsiangs' army should be defeated.

Already 7,000 destitute Russian refugees who sought shelter in the foreign quarter have been augmented by 20,000 Chinese refugees since the hostilities before the city opened. The general political outlook is considered grave. Prominent Chinese at Shanghai now are openingly endorsing a foreign proposal to neutralize Shanghai for the purpose of safeguarding American Commercial interests in the city from the clashing war lords. The latter rigidly oppose neutralization, because it would eliminate immense revenues now collected.

Meanwhile both generals contending for the possession of the city are continuing conscription, which is equivalent to kidnapping thousands of peaceful Chinese for trench digging and transport work.

NO CHANCE OF ESCAPE.

Bordeaux Jail Is Too Strongly Guarded For Get Away.

MONTREAL, September 6 (Canadian Press). — Bordeaux Jail and the surrounding grounds resemble an armed camp, with rifle-carrying guards on duty inside and outside the big $3,000,000 building.

While the highway is open for traffc and automobile drivers are not disturbed by any of the rifle-carrying Provincial police, to the number of 35, death faces anyone who goes near the prison wall after being warned to keep away.

"There is not the slightest chance for any of the prisoners to get away," said Chief Lorraine to-day, "and there is less chance of an outsider reaching the prison grounds."

It was from Bordeaux Jail that one of the Montreal bank bandits, sentenced to death following the recent bank hold-up tried to escape.

Five others also sentenced to death for the safe offence are in the same jail.

KILLED IN QUARREL.

Two Young Men Quarrel Over Bag of Peanuts and One Meets Death.

TORONTO, September 6 (Canadian Press). — Hemorrhage at the base of the brain caused by "one or more blows administered by Fred Bonomo" led to the death of twenty-year-old Nicholas Joseph Murphy, a Canadian National telegraph messenger, who met a sudden, tragic death in a quarrel over a five-cent bag of peanuts at the Exhibition on the night of Saturday, 30th August.

Such was the substance of the finding of Coroner M. M. Crawford's jury at the inquest into Murphy's death, held at the morgue last night.

Bonomo, who is held on a charge of manslaughter, did not appear at the inquiry.

THE WILD ROSES.

The croak of frogs; the cry of killdeer; the town clock striking the hours, so resonant at 2:00 a.m., so muffled by day; the patter of rain on the shingles overhead.

The scent of new mown clover and timothy; the breath of dew rasing to us as we slide down the hollow of the woodland edged ribbon of road after dark.

The herds of cattle standing in the pools at noon; the two lemon and white collie puppies in the arms of a charming child with a fairy face and a tangle of dark curls.

The high flat rocks, the blue sky in the water, and the flood of sunshine at Burleigh Falls; the red banks under cedars in the quiet inlet where boys fished patiently, and successfully, with most primitive tackle; the churning white water a little way ahead when we came to the crest of the slope.

The lights and the pines and the orchestra at Chemong.

The wind on the lift lock towers, whirling hundreds of tiny streams, which gush from the face of the dam upward into spray, rustling the poplar tree tops as with dozens of winds, and, to the eastward, drifting in shadows over fields of ripening wheat.

The wild roses.

"SO THIS IS LONDON" OPENNIG ATTRACTION AT THE GRAND

Next Mon. Tues. and Wed.

The reason for the sensational success on both sides of the Atlantic of the famous George M. Cohan comedy "So this is London" may be told in a few words. It is everything that most of the present day comedies, musical plays and revues are not. It brings a wealth of clean everyday comedy designed to produce genuine laughter without recourse to the risque and vulgar appeal. It has a little mission to perform, that of fostering a better feeling between Americans and English men, and it does it so cleverly that there is not the slightest hint of preaching or exhortation.

"So this is London" is one play in a thousand, there is a laugh in almost every line, there is a satisfying love story without a villian or third angle. And how you will enjoy it! It is just one laugh after another from the moment the curtain is raised on the first act until the close of the play.

The play is being presented by the Theatrical Enterprises Ltd., company and is confronted by the problem of the parts are superbly suited to the talents under the personal supervision of a very capable director, and the Peterboro playgoers are assured of a downright good entertainment.

There will be a matinee Wednesday. Popular prices will prevail throughout the engagement, evenings 25c to 75c Matinee 25c to 50c.

"THE ARAB" RANKS WITH GREATEST OF INGRAM PICTURES

Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry at Their Best in Sensationally Thrilling Film.

It is one of the greatest of Ingram's pictures, worthy in every way of the man who produced "The Four Horsemen" and "Scaramouche," and superbly acted by a cast that includes Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry.

The picture was filmed in Algiers and Tunis, and it affords the most convincing of all arguments why pictures should be screened on the exact locale of the story, instead of at Hollywood studios. For Mr. Ingram, in going to the East, has brought back with him to the screen all of the glamorous enchantment that has beckoned to travellers through all the ages.

"The Arab" gives you the Orient in all of its wonderful color and exotic life; an authentic background for a drama that holds the spectators tense with excitement.

Islam Breaks Loose.

Ramon Novarro appears in the title role, as an Arab guide who falls in love with an American missionary's daughter, played by Alice Terry. He learns of the Turkish plan to massacre the Christians, only after the children from the mission are being led into the desert to certain death. He goes to their rescue, but, when he gets them back to the mission, the fanatical Moslems, roused to fury by their leaders, break loose and attack the little Christian stronghold. Only a miracle can save them. But you must see the denouement for yourself. "The Arab" is a picture that nobody should miss. Successful some years ago on the stage, with Edgar Selwyn, who wrote it, in the ittle role, its effectiveness is tremendously enhanced on the screen.

Novarro and Terry.

Novarro has the greatest opportunity of his career and he seizes it with a zest that sweeps all before him. There is no more fascinating actor than this young Mexican who conquered America with an insolent twirl of his monocle in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and, as "The Arab," he never looked more handsome, nor acted with greater fire and force.

Miss Terry looks lovelier than ever as the heroine. The blond wig that she wore in all of her previous pictures has been discarded and she appears for the first time on the screen in her natural dark-tinted bobbed hair. She rises to moments of emotional appeal in the seene of the massacre, and she is never more alluring than in her love scenes with Mr. Novarro.

Mr. Ingram's direction is uncannily right in every little detail, and the photography, credited to John F. Seitz, is a masterpiece of screen art.

To those persons who enjoy a little more than just plain hokum, and want to see real thrills set in the actual locale of the story, "The Arab" is sure to be one of the most entertaining pictures of the year. It has story, stars, director and backgrounds— nothing could be nicer, and nothing is.

"All quarrels can be avoided if your husband will do just as YOU say."

"Jealousy and suspicion don't get you anywhere, but they keep you going."

"Never apologize to the woman who's trying to break up your home, your husband will do it for you."

—These are titles taken from the newest Viola Dana picture, "Don't Doubt Your Husband," a Metro production which is coming to the Royal Theatre on Monday Tuesday and Wednesday. They give an idea of the story by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin that is said to make the merriest photoplay of Miss Dana's career.

Married Life Bumpy

Miss Dana appears as a smart young suburban wife who bumps along the road of matrimnoy with jealous outbreaks marking each bump. When she notices that her husband, played by Alan Forrest, is more interested in the ankles of a beautiful interior decorator (Winifred Bryson) than in the decorations she decides to trail him. As luck has it, the husband, driving the other woman home, gets into a smash-up and sprains his ankle, and is taken to her home. The wife arrives there in a frenzy of anger.

It's a real matrimonial smash this time, but everything gets mended in a series of incidents that are said to sparkle with the sunshine of good humor, smart satire and dramatic situations.

"WILD PARTY CLOSES TO-NIGHT

For bright snappy entertainment it would be hard to beat "The Wild Party" with Gladys Walton now playing the Royal for the last time to-night. Of course the play is not to be taken seriously but for a good action comedy of these days of boot leggers and saxaphones it is as we said before hard to beat as light entertainment. You should see it to-night.

22,000 SOLDIERS IN RUHR.

French Army of Occupation Has Been Reduced From 45,000.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 6.—(Associated Press).—France's army of occupation in the Ruhr at the present moment comprises 22,000 men, according to trustworthy authority. The army originally numbered 45,000.

One of the principal obstacles in the way of rapid evacuation of the Franco-Belgian occupied territory is the difficulty of moving quickly the families of non-commissioned officers and railway workers.

UNKNOWN MAN FOUND.

Bound With Stout Cord, He Was Found in Gravesend Bay, New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press).—With hands and feet bound by stout cord, body of unidentified well dressed man of about 55 years was cast up by waves yesterday on a bulkhead in Gravesend Bay. There were cuts and bruises on his head and other indication that he had been murdered, according to members of the police homicide squad.

Possible clue to his identify was furnished by slip of paper found in one of his pockets with following address written on it "420 La Salle street, Montreal, Canada".

PITT TO HAVE BOWL

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6.—(United Press).—Ground has been broken for the new University of Pittsburgh Athletic Bowl. It is expected to be completed by September, 1925, at a cost of $1,250,000.

The stadium will seat at first 70,000, then 30,000 additional, if necessary. It will cover ten acres of ground and its length will be 791 feet and width 617 feet. There will be eight entrances.

Embodying the best features of athletic coliseums throughout the country the University of Pittsburgh believes it will have the finest stadium in the country. Pitt never had a stadium of its own and always used Forbes Field, home of the Pittsburgh Pirates for its big athletic events.

CHANNEL UNCONQUERED.

Lillian Harrison Failed Today To Swim the English Channel.

BOULOGNE, France, Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Lillian Harrison, twenty-year-old Anglo-Argentine swimmer, failed to-day in her attempt to swim the English Channel, begun from the French side at Cap Gris-Nez at 11.50 last night. Miss Harrison gave up in mid-channel, having been in the water for eight hours. In her first attempt to swim the twenty-two mile stretch of water a few weeks ago, Miss Harrison injured her leg in jumping into the water, but placidly kept on for several hours, although in great pain.

For her attempt to-day good weather conditions prevailed, with a south-easterly breeze and a calm sea. She was accompanied in a boat by her trainer, Tom Burgess, who accomplished the Channel swim thirteen years ago to-day.

WOMEN PLYING IN BELMONT TOWNSHIP

Evidently Inspired By Mysterious Dr. McDonald, Seek Funds For Anonymous Peterboro Hospital.

It was reported to the city yesterday by J. W. Russell, ex-reeve, Belmont township, that two women were canvassing in Belmont township for subscriptions for the Peterboro Children's Hospital.

Mr. Russell was of the opinion that there was no children's hospital in Peterboro and that in any case no hospital here would solicit funds in that manner. One canvasser gave her name as Mrs Brown, and an elderly lady. She was accompanied by a comparatively young woman.

Other than Mr. Russell it is said to-day that the two ladies obtained a small amount from Mrs. Andrew McLaughlin Belmont Township. Mr. Russell was leary of the two canvassers from the first and made no contribution.

From information obtained by The Examiner from one of the parties approached it is believed that the two ladies live in the vicinity of Blairton.

GIFT SHOWER FOR MISS J. JACKSON

Miss Jackson Is the Bride Elect of Peterboro Boy.

INGERSOLL, Ont., September 6.—Mrs. Zellar and her sister, Miss Mildred Scott, were joint hostesses at a charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower held at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Scott, on Wednesday evening, in honour of Miss Julia (Chic) Jackson, a bride-elect of this month.

Quantities of cut flowers were used effectively to decorate the rooms. White streamers were festooned from the electric fixtures to the corners of the rooms.

Miss Jackson was welcomed at the door, with Miss E. Boyse playing the wedding march and a miniature bridal couple, little Ruth Merrill, in a taffeta frock and white tulle veil, with wreath, and carrying a bouquet of roses and daisies ,and Master Jack VanNorman, nephew of Miss Jackson, who afterwards escorted her to a "Wishing Well,' 'which contained the numerous beautiful gifts from over one hundred of her friends.

The fireplace was banked with asparagus ferns and shasta daisies and made a very pretty background for the well ,which was replete with windlass and pail.

The well proper was artistically arranged with paper in brick effect, over which a roof done in green and white shingles, with supports and lattice work done in white and with trailing vines, made a very attractive setting for this delightful affair.

After the gifts had been duly admired, Miss Jackson expressed her appreciation to her friends for their kindly wishes and the many lovely things which will adorn her new home.

Among the presents received was a cut-glass water set from the girls of Mrs. Thomas Hammill's Sunday School Class of the Methodist Church, of which Miss Jackson is a member.

The hostesses, assisted by intimate girl friends of the guest of honour, served refreshments and a very enjoyable hour was spent.

Miss Jackson is the bride-elect of Mr. Horace W. Coon, manager of Neill's, Limited, Ingersoll, and son of Mrs. E. W. Coon, 589 Aylmer Street, Peterborough.

DR. THIERRY IS INDICTED.

Grand Jury Holds Him For Murder of His Brother-in-law.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 6.—Dr. Raymond D. Thiery of Somerville, was indicted by the Middlesex Grand Jury for the murder on Aug. 8 of his brother-in-law, David M. Noble. He was arraigned, pleaded not guilty and was returned to the jail to await the usual examination by State alienists.

The case was brought before the grand jury only Thursday. The State charged that Dr. Thiery's statement that a burglar had shot and killed Noble and had then attacked him was false, and produced witnesses to testify that no one had left the Thiery home where Noble met his death, immediately after the shooting.

The discovery of a rifle in the house, leading to Dr. Thiery's arrest, and the latter's attempt at suicide while a patient in a Boston hospital, were among the developments of the case.

NEWS OF STIRLING.

Last Stage of the Harvesting Operations—Banker Moved.

STIRLING, Sept. 5.—The harvest is quite a long way from being over in some parts on account of the frequent rains of late. Oats is the principal grain that is out yet.

Division Court was held here this week, Judge Deroche presiding. A wage case ended by the employer having to pay the claim. Another case to recover value for a note given by Hugh Stewart to Elijah Bundock, judgment was deferred on account of a legal question involved.

The schools reopened this week with the same teachers in charge, and a good attendance of pupils presenting themselves at the beginning of the term.

Leaving Stirling.

Mr. R. A. Sutcliffe, who has been a resident of Stirling for the past thirteen years, will leave Sept. 16, with his family for the village of Pakenham in Lanark County, having been appointed manager of the branch of the Union Bank in that village. This means promotion for Mr. Sutcliffe, and his many friends in Stirling will be glad to know that he is fortunate in this respect. He has been accountant in the Union Bank here for the past four years, and will be greatly missed by those who had dealings with him, as he was ever ready to oblige and serve as best he could. His assistance in the service of song in the Anglican Church will be missed, and the place he has held there in other respects will be hard to fill. Mrs. Sutcliffe has been a valued member of the local horticultural society, and the showing of flowers and shrubs surrounding their home at the corner of North and Charlotte Streets is an indication of her knowledge of such matters. She will be missed from the meetings and work of this organization.

Mr. George Lagrow has purchased Mr. Sutcliffe's home and will move from over his store on upper Front Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Hatton have returned after spending a week with relatives in Toronto.

Mr. Jackson Moore and family left last week for the North West, where they will remain for a few months.

Rev. R. Simpson and family have returned from a short visit to Brooklin, Ontario County, where he was minister in charge of the Presbyterian Church before coming here.

M. W. Sine, V.S., made a business trip to Belleville on Tuesday last.

Mrs. Bissonnette is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Martin, at Springfield, Ontario.

The ladies of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church met Tuesday afternoon, when they quilted several quilts for the bale for their northwest mission field.

Mr. George Bailey was a week-end visitor at the home of her sister, Mrs. Hatfield, in Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKee are attending the exhibition in Toronto.

Mr. F. T. Ward, who is in Victoria Hospital, Montreal, is getting on nicely since undergoing a serious operation.

Mr. Thos. Spry unloaded a car of nut coal last week at $15.50 per ton delivered.

Mr. Hiram Dafoe, with his county roadmakers, passed through here on Saturday, having finished their work near Wellman's.

WEDDING BELLS.

SKINNER—WYLDER.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. James' Methodist Church, Peterboro, Rev. W. H. Buckler officiating, on Wednesday, September 3rd, at 3 p.m., when Miss Bertha Marie Wylder, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wylder was united in marriage to Mr. Archie Lafayette Skinner, of Phoenix, Arizona, U.S.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. Heron, looked charming in a gown of white crepe satin with cap veil, and carried a shower bouquet of flowers. She was attended by Mrs. Shipper, while two dainty little flowers girls carried the veil.

The groom was supported by Mr. Fairey.

The wedding music was played by Mr. M. B. Chenhall, organist of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli.

STABBED TEN PERSONS.

Powerful Laborer Became Maddened When He Could Not Buy Whisky.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Ten persons were stabbed in an Aldridge street coffee house early to-day when Guiseppe Avoise, powerful laborer, became maddened and ran amuck when he ordered whiskey and was told that only tea and coffee were sold in the place. Two of his victims were seriously wounded. After he had slashed blindly about in the coffee house with a knife causing panic among the patrons of the place. Avoise fled to his nearby house. He was disarmed after a struggle and placed under arrest by policemen who had pursued him and had broken down door of his house in entering.

TOTALLY BLIND 76 YEARS OF AGE

NOW COMFORTABLE.

Seventy-six years of age, totally blind wearing a sign on his hat indicating that his destinaion was Peterboro, Patrick Quinn arrived from Sudbury last night on the Port McNichol train shortly after six o'clock and is now safely under the care of the sisters at the House of Providence, with an assurance of warm quarters and three meals daily during the winter months.

Since he first entered the old people's home here three years ago, every summer he has journeyed to Sudbury where he is well-known. Under the watchful eye of Hon. Charles McCrae, Minister of Mines and Forests, who takes an interest in the old gentleman, he ekes an existence for the three summer months.

Upon arriving last evening, complaining of the cold weather that drove him from Sudbury he declared it was the last train ride he would ever take. For many years he has been of a wandering nature, spending the last ten or fifteeen years of his life prior to 1921 in going from City to City, depending upon the generosity of kindly individuals for a living. Despite his declaration "I guess that's my last ride," no doubt, he will be seized with a mania for travel by next May and will want to strike for Sudbury again.

ONE WAY TO HOLD JOB.

Must Live in City—Slogan at Winnipeg is Causing Some Concern Among Thousands of Suburban Residents.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 6.— "Live in the city or quit your job." This is a Winnipeg slogan that promises to revolutionize civic conditions. The City Council has recommended that it be applied to all persons on the civic pay roll and a move is under way to have all industries within the city apply the same rules to its employees. Half of all people working in one big department store of Winnipeg reside in the suburbs. Forty thousand residents of suburbs are agitated over the new promotion angle and landlords within the city limits are threatening to increase rents.

As a counter move an organization known as the Suburban Association has been formed to take all suburbs into a Greater Winnipeg municipality. This may solve the problem that has arisen over the committee recommendation that employes residing outside the city be given a year to move inside the limits or resign.

The scare is dislocating business at outside points where many wealthy owners of large city industries have their fine homes placed in the suburbs to avoid heavy Winnipeg taxes. Working people became commuters to escape high rents.

A PRIEST MISSING.

Whereabouts of Father John Morrissey Still Unknown.

TORONTO, Sept. 6.— (Canadian Press).—Enquiry made locally among relatives of Father John B. Morrisey who disappeared from Assumpton College, Sandwich, on August 15th, shed no light on the mystery of his whereabouts or any possible reason for his departure. The case is rendered more baffling by the fact that Father Morrissey was a member of the Order that is sworn to poverty. He could not therefore have had more than a few cents in his pockets when he left the College and the only clothes he possessed were of clerical cut.

SOLD HOME BREW WAS FINED $200

Had a Permit To Brew Own Beer—Abused the Privilege.

BUYER FINED $100.

One gentleman learned in Police Court this morning that even if you have a permit for making home brew, it is illegal to sell same. The case proved a double lesson, for another young gentleman became appraised of the fact that it is also illegal to buy home brew.

It is perfectly legitimate for an individual to make home brew, provided the utensils and the ingredients of the mash used in the manufacture are approved of by the local Inland Revenue officer. Once made, it matters not what strength your product is, so long as the beer, ale or wine made is used exclusively for the personal use of the maker. This will allow him to treat his friends in his own dwelling, but will not permit him to traffick with or give quantities of the brew away.

Provincial Officer Maker discovered four young men coming out of a house on Gilchrist Street. Upon examining their car he found they had removed from the dwelling 12 bottles of home brew.

The manufacturer of the beer pleaded guilty to trafficking with alcoholic spirits, stating that he was a laborer and that in all he had sold in the neighborhood of $50 or $75 worth of the beer. He was a married man with two children.

After a consultation between Justices of the Peace V. Eastwood and H. Rush, the latter said, "We can do nothing else but fine you $200, or sentence you to three months in gaol." Although the fine was not paid immediately it is believed that the accused will be able to obtain the necessary funds to buy his freedom to-day.

Of the four young men who had purchased the beer, a charge was just laid against one of them. Constable Maker evidently thought that one conviction would be a sufficient lesson for them all.

He was charged with having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling house.

J. F. Strickland, acting for the Crown, stated that as the liquid purchased was only home - made beer, he thought it was a case where the minimum penalty should be imposed. The accused pleaded guilty, and in accordance with Mr. Strickland's suggestion, the defendant was fined $100, the minimum penalty. The fine was paid.

GEORGIAN CHEKA SHOOTS 24.

TIFLIS, Georgian Republic, Sept. 6. — (Associated Press). — Twenty-four leaders of anti-Soviet parties of the Georgian Republic, declared to have been responsible for the attempt made last Friday night in several towns and villages to overthrow the Soviet regime, have been shot after they were condemned to death by the Georgian Cheka.

The names of those executed were not given out, but it is believed that Prince Andronikoff, leader of the present movement, and Djugeli, a member of a former Government, were among those put to death.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE EXHIBITION

His Honour Henry Cockshutt, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will formally declare the 1924 Peterborough Industrial Exhibition open Thursday, 11th September, at 2 p.m.

At noon on Wednesday, 10th September, the gates of the Exhibition will open for admittance.

All entries will close at 10 o'clock to-night. Secretary F. J. A. Hall will be at Roland Denne's feed store to receive entries all day.

An innovation at the Fair this year will be the dog show. A large show is promised, and the canine end of the Exhibition promises to be a feature.

Dogs of nearly every variety have been entered from points in many parts of the province, including London, Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto, Kingston, Port Hope and Cobourg.

Chicken fanciers are assured of a real treat. Last year's exhibit of over 1,200 birds was the largest in the history of the show, and Secretary Hall predicts that this year's show will equal, if not exceed, the 1,200 mark, judging from entries already received.

The grand stand has been enlarged, increasing the accommodation to a seating capacity of 4,000.

"KID" M'COY OVERCOME BY ASSISTANCE OF 30-YEAR-OLD SON HE HAD NEVER SEEN

Ghost of Fighter's Checkered Past Rises Up as Young Man to Acknowledge Parentage on Prisoner Held for Murder.

LOS ANGELES, September 8. — "How the ghosts of the past rise up to haunt a man."

Overcome with the news that his son, a thirty-year-old business man of Connersville, Ind., had come to his defence, Kid McCoy lapsed into reverie in his cell in the county jail whore he is held, charged with killing Mrs. Teresa Mors.

McCoy said that it was 30 years ago that he was sworn to secrecy about his son to save the good name of a woman. He continued:

"I've never seen this boy of mine; I did not know I had a son until he was fifteen months old. Then I was told I could never see him. It has been one secret of my life and now it has come to light."

"Good Stuff in Him."

"That was mighty fine of the boy, under the circumstances, don't you think To think that he'd acknowledge me now, when I'm down and out, held on a murder charge. He must have a lot of good stuff in him, he?"

Who was his mother?

That the "Kid" would not reveal. He said:

"I was sworn to secrecy. I'll never tell."

"His folks were pretty well fixed. You know how they are in those little towns in the middle west. Comfortably well off.

"I was boxing for a month at the opera house there. Gosh, it's so long ago now! Just think, we were only kids. Her folks couldn't see me. I was only a boxer, and did not amount to much.

"Then I moved on to another town and we corresponded for a few weeks. One day the letters stopped coming. I wrote several times, but got no reply.

Sworn to Secrecy.

"Fifteen months afterwards I received one letter from her. In that letter she told me that I had a son. She swore me to secrecy, said that I never was to reveal it, that her folks would not let her write to me, and that I never was to come near her or the child.

"I tried several times, but it was no use.

"Is she dead? I don't know. Never heard of her until to-day through all the years, until this boy, our boy, comes to my defence.

"She said he looked like me in that or other, so maybe she is dead. She was a dear, sweet girl. A good girl, but she should have told me about the trouble ahead of her.

"She said he looked like me in that last letter she wrote.

"And now he acknowledges me before the world. He must be made of good stuff. What a son;"

Crews of the Arctic And Lady Kindersley Rescued

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 8. — Carrying the crew of the lost gasoline schooner Arctic, of San Francisco, and bringing reports that the ice in the Arctic Ocean is the worst in history, the Boxer, an auxiliary power schooner, owned and operated by the United States' Bureau of Education, arrived here to-day.

The crew of the gasoline schooner Lady Kipdersley, of Vancouver, who battled their way to the Boxer Sunday through five miles of ice, were put aboard the steamer Baychimo at Point Hope, 300 miles southward of where the Lady Kindersley and the Arctic were abandoned.

The Baychimo proceeded northward to try to save the $400,000 cargo of the Lady Kindersley. Part of the crew of the Kindersley had travelled to Point Hope on the schooner Teddy Bear of Nome, which rescued them.

SIR HENRY REW LAUDS TORONTO FOR GREAT FAIR

Livestock Equal to Anything He Has Seen in the Old Country.

RETURNING HOME

Says Canada Holds Key to World's Food Supply Now.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press Staff Correspodent). The wide scope of the Canadian National Exhibition impressed Sir Henry Rew, noted economist and authority on world food problems, who visited the fair at the conclusion of his tour of the western provinces with the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The livestock on exhibition is equal in excellence to anything I have seen in the Old Country," Sir Henry Rew said "The fair itself is not the least remarkable of Canadian products. We were struck by the extent to which it portrays national activity industrially, intellectually and socially. I am amazed by the extent to which it attracts the public. It is a wonderful institution."

"It is difficult to compare the C.N.E. with Wembley, according to Sir Henry. "They differ," he stated.

Linger in East

The economist will visit government bureaus at Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec before his return to Great Britain. He will get further facts and figures bearing on the economic development of Canada, in particular information related to the Dominion's contribution to the food supply of the world. Canada holds the key to the situation at present, in Sir Henry Rew's opinion.

The scientist speaks for other members of the British Association when he said: "It is difficult to generalize on what we have seen. We must return and think over, before we can pronounce."

Few of the delegates from Great Britain to last month's meeting are left in Toronto. The bulk of the visitors sailed for England last week and nearly all who were able to remain, are visiting and lecturing at universities in the United States. Prof. G. W. O. Howe, electrical engineer and radio expert, will take part in the centennial celebration of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, September 17-19, which many of the scientists prominent at the recent Toronto meeting will attend.

Amazed at West

Those who toured the west with the association are unanimous in expressing amazement at the development which has taken place and in returning thanks for the hospitality extended en route. Feted and entertained for three weeks the travellers saw representative samples of the country and its wealth for both railroads, and the schedule was arranged so that territory passed in the night on one journey could be surveyed by daylight on the other. The members of the local committee in charge of the meetings and tours re overseas officials with Canadian arrangements, and with the suitability of the Dominion as a site of a convention of the august British Association. That the 1924 meeting will carry red letters in the annals of the organization is brought out by the fact that another overseas meeting, a rare occurrence in the association's history, is already mooted, with India named as the site.

PEKING ORDERS SUBMISSION TO ITS GOVERNMENT

CABINET'S SESSION

Intense Fighting Reported, But Casualties Are Comparatively Light.

PEKING, Sept. 8.—After a special meeting of the cabinet, President Tsao Kun issued yesterday a punitive mandate depriving of official ranks and orders Lu Yeng-Hsieng, governor of Chekiang province, and Lu's appointee, Ho Feng-Ling, defense commissioner, of Shanghai.

The mandate directs Chi Shieh-Yuan, governor of Kiangsu province, to send an expedition to enforce submission to the central government, to take the necessary measures to protect foreign lives and property and to end civil strife.

CONCENTRATE ATTACK.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8.—Fighting with redoubled intensity developed in the Liu Ho sector Saturday and continued throughout the night. It is apparent from the reports of the latest activity that the Kiangsu forces are concentrating their attack there.

The Shanghai-Tachang road into the Liu Ho sector, which had hitherto been open to anyone willing to risk the danger of flying bullets was closed to all but military traffic.

SUNDAY'S FIGHTING.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8.— Engagements were reported Sunday in all setcors, including Changhing, in Chekiang province, about 100 miles southwest of Shanghai, and Huchachen, in Kiangsu province, on the west shore of Taiku Lake, 90 miles west of Shanghai. But the major struggle centered on the small town of Liuho, on the seacoast barely 30 miles to the northwest of Shanghai.

An eye witness, returning last night returning from Lieuho, reported that the Chekiang troops were withstanding all attacks though the Kiagsu line had been advanced about a mile just south of Liuho. The deserted line had been advanced about a mile just south of Liuho. The deserted town was under heavy shell fire and continuous machine gun and rifle fire of both sides. General Ho-Fang-Ling, defense commander of Shanghai, under Lu Yung-Hsien, the governor of Chekiang, spent the day in this sector, personally directing the Chekiang army.

Casualties Small.

The Chekiang dead and wounded there yesterday numbered perhaps 200. The number of casualties continues out of proportion to the tremendous amount of firing. The eye witness related the haphazard methods on the front lines, saying that the soldiers were discharging rifles and even field pieces utterly regardless of aiming, often simply pointing them at the sky.

Lungwha headquarters of the Chekiang army claimed new gains along the railway. Desperate attacks were aimed at Anting.

Only the meagerest reports were received of the fighting west and southwest of Taihk Lake, where the Kiangsu troops were said to be driving for the Sungkiang-Hangshow railway.

Rumor of Desertion.

The Chekiang Lungwho headquarters had not confirmed reports that the two whole battalions of Kiangsu troops had deserted and joined the army, bringing with them their arms and equipmnt. Neither were the Shanghai settlement police able to confirm the rumor that Kiangsu supporters were secretly recruiting in Shanghai a regiment of "riff raff" to strike at the rear of the Chekiang army as soon as the Kiangsu forces score gains against Woosung, a suburb.

$50,000 For Lu's Head.

General Chi Hsieh-yuan, commander of the Kiagsu forces, has issued a proclamation which was being circulated among the forces of General Lu Yung-hsiang, offering $50,000 to any one who will hand over General Lu to him, dead or alive. He places a similar amount at the disposal of any officer of the opposing forces who shall desert and bring its entire regiment over to his side.

Twenty thousand dollars will be paid for a piece of field artillery, a like amount for an arplane and $1,000 for a machine gun. Finally, two months' pay is promised to the ordinary soldier who deserts to his side.

The proclamation accuses Lu of crimes "as big as Heaven," and describes him as a "murderer, robber, rebel, tyrant and acceptor of bribes."

In a final effort to win over his enemy's men, General Chi says to them: "I sign for you."

Confirmation has come from Canton and other sources that Dr. Sun Yat-sen the dictator of Canton, intends to send troops north in support of the Tuchun of Chekiang.

Regina Confronted With Serious Coal Shortage

REGINA, Sask. Sept. 8. — Regina is facing a serious coal shortage according to the local coal dealers' association. With no prospects held out for the ending of the Alberta miners' strike, local dealers say they have stocks on hand sufficient to last only five or six days of cold weather. No plans are being made to bring in eastern anthracite to relieve the situation.

SUMMER HOTEL A TOTAL LOSS

Destroyed By Fire With Two Houses and Blacksmith's Shop.

OCCUPANTS SAFE

KINGSTON, Sept. 7. —(Canadian Press). —A disastrous fire occurred at midnight last Friday night in Mountain Grove resulting in the total destruction of four buildings in the village including the Loyst Hotel, a summer hotel the blacksmith shop occupied by Mr. George Summers and two residences, one occupied by Mr. Freeborn Cronk and the other by Harvey Miller.

The fire originated in the Blacksmith snop. The occupants of the hotel, ten in number, were aroused before their lives were in actual jeopardy and had ample time to escape from the danger zone, with their most valuable and portable belongings, although very little of the furniture which the building contained was saved owing to the rapidity which the fire spread and the lack of proper apparatus for fighting the flames.

The loss on the Loyst Hotel is by far the heaviest of the four buildings destroyed and will amount to about $6,000 and is covered by insurance.

TOKIO, Sept. 8.—(Associated Press).—The Japanese Government's offer of decorations for Major A. Stuart MacLaren, leader of the British flight around the world, and his companions was courteously declined by the British officers on the ground that they have not completed their mission and do not deserve the honor, it is learned on good authority.

First Snow of Season Reported By West Virginia Three Weeks Ago—Heralds of the Coming Cold.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Sept. 8.—Tourists arriving Saturday over the National Highway report snow flurries on the mountains between Frostburg and Grantsville. Snow fell for about twenty minutes.

The lowest temperatures reported was at Altamount, Garrett County, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, where the mercury dropped to 36 degrees. At Thomas and Elkins, W. Va., it was 40. Frost formed at some places, killing vegetables and flowers.

This snow was not the first of the season, however, for at Fairfax, W. Va., at the headwaters of the Potomac River, three weeks ago there were flurries when the temperature fell to 48.

NEW YORK SHIVERED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Saturday was the coldest September 6 in New York that is shown in the records of the Weather Bureau. The same fact was reported for several nearby places. In New York the official thermometer stood at 84 degrees at 6 o'clock Saturday morning. By noon it had reached 57, which is not, so warm considering that the normal temperature for the day is 69. Forecaster Scarr found the nearest temperature in the 70's, when on September 6 the mercury stood at 51 degrees.

Philadelphia reported a record low temperature for the day of 50 degrees, and it was unofficially said that other parts of the State were much colder. Newark reported a new cold record, too, the same as New York's, 48 degrees.

The forecast for this week's weather sent out from the Weather Bureau at Washington said that in every section of the country temperatures would be nearly normal, or slightly above normal. Showers in the early part of the week and again in the latter half were predicted for the North and Middle Atlantic States and several other sections.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 8. — One-half inch of snow fell at Woodland, followed by a hail storm on Friday.

SISTERS OF EXCLUSIVE SOCIETY ELOPE WITH FATHER'S WORKMEN

One Runs Away With the Chauffeur in Father's $7,000 Limousine.

FAMILY OF WEALTH

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 8. — Two daughters of one of the wealthiest and most exclusive families in Lenox, with an undisputed social position in New York as well, made a joint runaway marriage Saturday morning that is one of the most startling of its kind society here has known in many years. The brides are the Misses Emily Lindall Winthrop and Kate Winthrop, daughters of Crenville Lindall Winthrop, whose New York home is at 12 East Thirty-Seventh Street.

Miss Emily Winthrop, who is 31 years old, and a sculptress of considerable attainment, married her father's chauffeur, Corey Lucien Miles. Miss Kate, who is 24, married a young electrician, Darwin Spurr Morse, who had done work on the Winthrop estate, Groton Place. Neither Mr. Winthrop nor any other member of his family attended the double wedding.

When news of it reached the Winthrop home with the two honeymoon couples nine hours on their way to a destination undisclosed, Mr. Winthrop was said to be deeply shocked and grieved. The brides, with their husbands, drove off after the ceremony in a little church at Interlaken, a village in the Township of Stockbridge, one in her father's $7,000 limousine and the other in another expensive closed car, which belongs to the two sisters.

Family Called Ultra-Exclusive.

More than ordinary astonishment was occasioned by the secret marriages because the Winthdop girls had been known here as ultra-exclusive. Their mother died when they were little girls and their father had brought them up in unusually strict seclusion, so much so that they mingled but little even in the fashionable society of Lenox and were seldom or never seen at the Lenox Club.

Reared to serious cultural pursuits rather than to the lighter pleasures of young society women, both girls devoted themselves to music, and Miss Emily found a further outlet for her energies in devotion to

BUSINESS IS NOW ON THE UP-GRADE

There Has Been Steady Slackening During the Past Three Months.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 8. — (United Press).— Business is on the up-grade after a depression of three month, according to D. B. Robertson president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, here, Robertson's barometer of business condition is the shifting number of member in the brotherhood.

"When production falls off and industry slackens, our membership decreases, because there is less shipping and few train hauls and fewer firemen are needed," he said.

"During the last three months there has been a steady slackening of industry. In July our member ship went down to 112,000. Business now is on the up-grade and in the last few weeks our membership has gone up to 115,000.

"I predict a further increase in the volume of business especially in the agricultural regions," he said.

Discusses Politics

Commenting on the recent price increase in farm products, Robertson said " 'big business' but the prices up. It was purely political expediency to win farmer votes for the present administration," he declared

"The methods whereby the prices were boosted prove the farmer could have been relieved months ago if 'big business' had so desired. The increase was a last resort to win votes.'

Boosts Lafolette

Robertson said the brotherhood by convention action fas affiliated with the Conference for Progressive Political Action and was actively supporting Robert M. Lafollette for president.

"John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee for president, made some promises to Labor in his acceptance speech but they won't win him anything, at least from the Brotherhood,' Robertson said.

"The time has come when Labor is not going on promises of candidate, but on records of those who run for office.

"The brotherhood is supporting La Follette because of his record," he said.

NATIONS UNANIMOUSLY APPROVE COMPULSORY ARBITRATION IDEA

Solemn Assent to Resolution By Representatives of 46 Countries.

TO DEVISE PLAN

GENEVA, Sept. 8—Before leaving Geneva Saturday night for their respective capitals, Premiers MacDonald and Herriot, backed by the delegations of all the other countries put into concrete form a program which the assembly of the league of nations will study in an effort to eleborate a satisfactory system of compulsory arbitration designed to put an end to war, prepare the way for a conference on the reduction of armaments and set up some satisfactory pact of guarantees and mutual assistance which will serve to make compulsory arbitration practicable.

The heads of all 46 national delegations present, standing solemnly gave their assent to the resolution which declared that the object is to strengthen the solidarity and security of nations throughout the world by settling by pacific means all disputes which may arise between them.

When the unanimity of the vote was announced there were impressive demonstrations throughout the auditorium.

Real Work Begins

Now that Great Britain and France and all the other states have shown their will to arbitrate all disputes, the real work of the assembly begins for projects of arbitration and security must be drawn up which will receive the approbation of the great world powers. Premiers Macdonald and Herriot left Geneva apparently without any agreement on the vital question of how much military help Great Britain will accord France in case arbitration decisions are not obeyed, and the general opinion in Geneva is that the fate of the new movement to insure permanent peace depends on the answer to the question: "How much security will Great Britain give, and how little military aid will France be contented with?"

The attitude of the delegates at Saturday's session demonstrated clearly that, although all the countries are

GERMANY HAS DENIED GUILT FOR WORLD WAR

Announcement By Chancellor Marx Has Created a Bad Impression in France.

GENEVA, Sept. 8.—Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, Premier Herriot of France and Premier Theunis of Belgium, Saturday received a letter from Chancellor Marx of Germany, declaring he felt obliged to publish immediately the proclamation of Germany refusing all responsibility for having caused the war.

Chancellor Marx added that publication of the proclamation, which retracts Germany's admission of war guilt, was deferred to avoid hindering the negotiations at the recent international conference.

As soon as he received the letter Premier Herriot made known to the German Government that the letter had made a bad impression upon him, and indicated the probable unfortunate consequences the publication would have in connection with the attitude of the French Government.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

Night Watchman Gave Domestic Troubles as the Cause.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 8. (Special.) — In a fit of despondency, Ephriam Middleton, aged 53, took his own life in his home at Napanee last night, by drinking tow ounces of carbolic acid. He was employed as night, by drinking two ounces of and as he did not put in an appearance for work on Sunday night, an investigation was made by the police, who found his dead body. A bottle containing carbolic acid was also found. Two letters were left by the deceased, in which he gave domestic troubles as the cause of his rash act. His wife and two sons, one aged 18 and the other 12, were away from home when the tragedy took place. Deceased had resided in Napanee for many years and prior to taking the position at Gibbard's store, was engaged as a section hand on the Canadian National Railway.

GERMAN TOAST STARTS FIGHT

Veteran of War Knocked Proposer Down — Alien Gang Attacked Him.

AT WAYNE, ALTA.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 8.—A despatch from Wayne, Alta., to the Winnipeg Free Press says:

"In company with a number of foreigners, Germans and Ukrainians who comprise a large percentage of the miners working at the non-association mines in Wayne, a German deliberately proposed a toast to Germany as a better country in every way than Canada.

"A returned man sitting nearby immediately knocked him flat and the trouble started. The whole gang of foreigners set on the returned man using chairs and other missiles. Another man came to his assistance and this enabled the first man to get clear but the second man was held by some of the party and deliberately smashed up by the rest of the gang.

"The foreigners went out of the hotel and rounded up some more supporters and then returned and finished the smashing of the furniture and windows, generally wrecking the place before they finished. The local policemen were at the stampede a mile or two out and were not on the scene in time to stop the wrecking of the building. Soon after the local police arrived, Inspecter Nicholson and another constable were down from Drumheller and made nine arrests."

LIQUOR THEFT MAY BE SOLVED

C. N. R. Detective W. H. Howard Makes Two Arrests.

WOMAN INVOLVED

As a sequel to a theft of $225 worth of vendors' liquor, consigned to Midland druggists, from a securely locked express car at Midland on July 18th last, Sidney Smith, Midland baggageman, was arrested on August 29, and Edna Matheson, a young Lorneville girl, was arrested on August 30th by C.N.R. Detective W. H. Howard.

Local and Provincial police had been working on the case since the date of the robbery, and Detective Howard's success after other efforts failed is somewhat sensational.

Both prisoners, when arraigned before Magistrate Cook at Midland on Friday, pleaded not guilty. The trial was adjourned until September 11 at the request of the Crown. The young lady was allowed to go upon securing $2,000 bail. Smith is still held in Midland gaol, failing to raise security for $2,500 bail bond demanded.

TOKIO, Sept. 8.—Yumindo Kushibiki, often called the P. T. Barnum of Japan and well known among show folk in the United States, has died at his home in Kamakura. Kushibiki became known to thousands of Amricans when he was in charge of Japanese concession on the Pike at the Louisianna Purchase Exposition in St. Louis in 1904. He was a pioneer in introducing Japanse entertainment to the United States and also in introducing the moving picture to Japan.

GAVE ADDRESS LOCAL CHURCH

Interesting Visitor From China Heard in Trinity and George Street.

There was a splendid attendance at the services yesterday in Trinity and George Street Methodist Churches, when the special speaker for the day was Mr. Liu Dre Ru, one of the foremost figures in the religious and business life of China, and an outstanding worker in the Methodist missionary fields of Western China.

Mr. Liu, who speaks through an interpreter, proved himself an exceptionally interesting exponent of the work of the Christian church in his own country. He spoke at Trinity Church in the morning, and yesterday afternoon a union gathering of the Sunday school pupils of the Methodist churches of George Street, Mark Street and Trinity took place in the body of George Street Church, when nearly seven hundred pupils attended an enthusiastic meeting, presided over by Mr. Geo. Robertson. Vocal solos at this service were rendered by Mrs. Geo. H. King and Ashton Fife. Musical exercises were led by the combined orchestras of Trinity and George Street Churches.

At the afternoon service, Mr. Liu spoke to the children on the power of faith, as a means toward the achievement of the things most worth while in life, illustrating his discourse largely from incidents in his own life and the lives of people whom he had met in China, and giving several interesting stories relative to the state of affairs in his own country. Mr. Liu later kindly consented to sing in Chinese, two verses of the hymn, "When the Mothers of Salem their Children Brought to Jesus."

In the evening, George Street Church was crowded for a second address by Mr. Liu, who took as his text, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," for a missionary address which produced a profound impression on his hearers. He spoke of the obligation imposed by that command on every earnest Christian, saying that it was addressed to three classes in the community, "to you, to me and to him," so that every person, notwithstanding his station, was under the necessity of obeying it. He drew an interesting picture of the church in China, struggling to maintain its own life and still obeying this command by forming its own missionary society, collecting its own missionary funds and appointing its own missionaries, for work among the people who live on the fringe of Thibet, out of the reach of the missionaries to China.

Mr. Liu then spoke of the progress made by Christianity in Western China, where, thirty years ago, the missionaries were persecuted and their property destroyed, where, twenty years ago, a little of this animosity had abated, and where to-day a friendly feeling toward the foreign missionary pervades the country. Even the non-Christians, said Mr. Liu, esteem and respect the Christian missionaries and their work. The speaker illustrated this assertion by recounting the success of a canvass for funds for a Y.M.C.A. building in the city of Chung-King, where the sum of $20,000 was subscribed by non-Christian military leaders and officers in the army.

The churches in China are gradually becoming self-supporting. One church in Westernr China is absolutely independent at the present time, and it is anticipated that, within two or three years, some ten or eleven more will be in the same position.

Mr. Liu gave a very optimistic picture of the future of Christianity in China, and concluded in appealing fashion a dramatic address, with the words, "As one who was in the darkness of paganism I wish to thank you people who sent me the Gospel and saved me."

A profound impression was made on the audience at every service by the wonderful work of Mr. Liu's interpreter, Mr. T. E. Plewman, who is a member of the staff of the Methodist Missionary Society of Western China. Mr. Liu is absolutely unable to express himself in English, and Mr. Plewman did a magnificent piece of work in his interpretation in beautiful language of the words of the speaker, the address losing in its interpretation nothing of dramatic effectiveness, directness or force.

Rev. Mr. Young conducted the services in the evening at George Street Church.

Mr. Liu, who is touring the world at present, leaving his own country on March 19th last, and having already traversed Asia and Europe, left for Toronto early this morning. From there he goes to New York City, where he will give a number of addresses, returning to Canada later, and sailing for home from Vancouver early in the month of October.

THE GUMPS—THE BIG SURPRISE

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

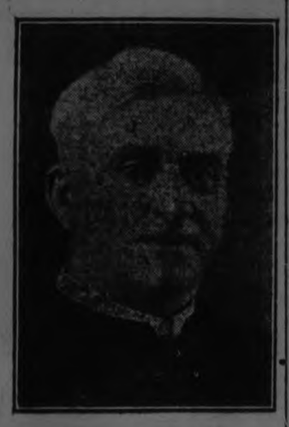
CAMPBELLFORD, September 8.—In the farewell to the society of the Free Methodist Church last night Rev. R. Bioye, who has held the pastorate for the past three years, after exhorting his people in their duties as professing Christians, made a ringing temperance address, calling upon them to make their ballots for Prohibition at the coming plebiscite. That there is need for reformation locally he is convinced, and it is up to Christian people to array themselves with the temperance forces.



REV. R. BLOYE.

"Don't think," he said, "that I say what I am about to tell you now because I am going away and people cannot get after me. I would say it even if I were going to remain among you. I have in one year seen more of the evils of drink in Campbellford than I did in the two years during which I resided in the city of Brantford while the Ontario Temperance Act was in force.

"I have lived in a border city which has a mixed population, and there is less illicit drinking there than I have seen here.

"Don't go around under the delusion that you have a God-fearing little town, for it is down in the very dregs of sin."

Mr. Bloye took a kindly farewell of his people. He never found a society of Free Methodists in which the members were so closely knit in Christian unity and never held a charge that he was so sorry to leave. He bespoke for his successor in the pastorate the same loyal support that he had received.

Departure Regretted.

The rules of the Free Methodist denomination will not permit a pastor to remain more than three years in one church no matter how anxious the members may be to retain him. Mr. Bloye has filled out the full term in Campbellford. In adopting the ministry as a profession, he made financial sacrifice, as he is a licensed engineer, with high recommendations from well-known manufacturing firms who employed him in Toronto at a salary probably four times greater than he has ever received as a preacher. Mr. Bloye however, took up the ministry for love of the work, and with no thought of financial reward.

Mr. Bloye leaves on Wednesday for his new charge at Bracebridge. His earnest work here as preacher and pastor has been appreciated by the members of the society who unanimously regret his departure.

Death of Mrs. Glenn.

Olive Sedgwick, wife of Ward Glenn of West Seymour, near Trent Bridge, died at noon on Saturday, after a few days' illness, aged thirty-one years. On Monday of last week she was left at home with her son, about two years old, while her husband went to town. Mrs. Glenn was taken ill, and went to the home of a neighbor, Ridley Moody, to telephone to some people along the road to intercept her husband and ask him to return. Mrs. Glenn was taken worse while at the Moody home and had to be put to bed, a doctor being summoned from Campbellford to attend her. She failed to rally, and passed away on Saturday.

The late Mrs. Glenn was the only child of Matthew and the late Mrs. Sedgwick and resided on the old homestead with her husband, her parents moving to Trent Bridge, where she was married a few years ago. Mrs. Sedgwick died last fall. Mrs. Glenn is survived by her husband and one young son.

The funeral will be held to-day to the Trent River cemetery.

Regular Meeting.

The regular September meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, was held at the home of Mrs. James Thomson, Pallister street, on Friday afternoon. Twenty ladies were present. During the programme several good readings were given. Mrs. E. Boney read the devotional leaflet; Mrs. Malcolm, "A Surprise for the Treasurer," and Mrs. R. Moore, "What Does W.F.M.S. mean?"

The next meeting will be arranged for by the executive.

The regular meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robt. Moore, Grand Road, at three o'clock.

Methodist Church Notes.

The Methodist church Sunday school will begin next Sunday, September 14th, and have their session in the afternoon at half past two o'clock.

The executive of the Young People's League have a meeting on Monday night, to plan for the work through the fall and winter, and will begin their meetings the following Monday, September 15th, 1924.

At the evening service in the Methodist church, Mr. Cecil Sarles, of power house number fourteen, played beautifully a violin solo, "Adoration" with an organ accompaniment, ,by Mr. R. T. Cowell, in his usual good style. Mrs. Leonard Parrish also sang a solo, "Guide Me," which was enjoyed by all present.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered next Sunday, September 14th, at the morning service.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Shaw, of Toronto, motored to Campbellford last week and spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. D. Mitchell, Victoria street.

Mrs. R. T. Coowell, Mrs. L. Pearce, Mrs. G. Lucy, Mrs. C. W. Turner, and Mr. R. Frazer and his mother, Mrs. W. G. Frazer, motored to Cobourg on Friday afternoon, for the inspection of the Regiment and to call on some friends.

Miss Ella Hall and sister Ruth, Queen street, who spent two weeks visiting relatives in Toronto, returned home on Friday night. Ella resumed her duties at Linton Bros.' store on Saturday.

Mr. Percy Johnston and mother, Mrs. James E. Johnston, Queen street, and Mrs. C. W. Turner, motored to Peterborough Saturday afternoon and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Johnston, of Peterborough., returned to Campbellford with them and spent the week end at the home of his parents, ,Mr. and Mrs. Jas. E. Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stuart of Ottawa, motored from that city for a visit with Dr. and Mrs. S. L. O'Hara.

Rev. A. E. H. King, of Arnprior, preached in the Baptist church at both services yesterday.

AT THE REGENT

There will be three changes of bill at the Regent Theatre this week, the programme being as follows:

Monday and Tuesday—"The Sporting Earl", the great English racing picture, full of thrills.

Wednesday and Thursday—"Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Friday and Saturday—"On the Banks of the Wabash" and another episode of "The Haunted Valley", in which Ruth Roland is the star.

The admission for the first two nights will be 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children, but on account of the heavy production for the remainder of the week the old scale of prices, 25 and 15 cents, will be restored. There will be rich comedy features at each performance and on Monday, Wednesday and Friday night an electric lighthouse lamp will be presented to the holder of the lucky number.

Capt. Hyland will provide a special treat for his patrons during the last half of the week of the Campbellford Fair when "The Covered Wagon," said to be the greatest picture ever filmed, will be the offering.

WANT TO MEET THE PRINCE OF WALES? JUST STEP UP AND CALL HIM "EDDIE"

By ALEXANDER HERMAN.

WITH THE PRINCE OF WALES, Sept. 6.—Giving the Prince of Wales a call is a cinch.

He will answer to most anything from "Hey, Eddie!" down to "Your Highness."

The handle to his name is so long it is almost unwieldy. Except when he is at home and has to obey his royal pa and ma, the Prince refuses to carry it all.

That's the chief reason he is going to the polo games at Long Island as the Baron of Renfrew. It's the title that gives the least trouble.

To use it properly you need but address the Baron as "My Lord." Of course, if you want to trick it up, call him "Your Lordship."

In writing, it takes a little longer. For in the superscription where one usually says "Mr. John Brown," and then follows it up by "Dear Sir" the approach is: "The Right Honorable Lord Renfrew," followed by "My Lord." And in conclusion one should write: "I have the honor to be, my Lord, Your Lordship's obedient and humble servant."

Paste this in your hat, if you expect to write to the Baron. For that is the only way to do it according to the Hoyle of royal etiquette.

* * *

But if Edward (calling him by his first name) hung on to his title of the Prince of Wales all the time, he would have to be addressed as "His Royal Highness," which takes a lot of time to write on account of the capital letters. And if he tacked on all his Earlships and his Dukeships—good night!

For the boy's full name is:

His Royal Highness Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, K. G., P. C., K. T., G. C. S. I., G. M. M. G., G. C. I. E., G. C. V. O., G. M. B. E., M. C., Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland, Duke of Cornwall (in peerage of England by patent 1337), Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, and Prince and Great Steward of Scotland (by ancient charter).

THE PRINCE OF WALES HAS TO ANSWER TO ALL THESE NAMES AND MORE.

Imagine the size of his card if he tried to tack on all these monickers!

However, the heir to Britain's throne doesn't stand much on ceremony. Those who have business with him, approach his secretary, get an appointment, and walk in on him without further ado.

The job is to convince the secretary that the business is pressing enough for the Prince.

"He's a regular feller, a prince of a guy," says one who accompanied him on the last trip to Canada.

One morning while heading westward to Alberta for a visit to his E-P ranch, Edward left the train and walked up the track with a companion. A couple of workmen met them. "What are you doing?" they asked. "Looking for work," the Prince answered. "So are we," they replied. Whereupon they went down the track together, swapping experiences. Later someone asked the workmen whom they had been walking with. "Some poor man looking for a job," they answered, and then passed out when told it was their Prince.

Another day the Prince went walking early in the morning, stopped to gaze at the royal train, stretched and signed: "Gosh it must be nice to be a Prince and sleep late."

One of the best jokes on the Prince came at the expense of some American photographers who called him "Mr. Windsor." They had read their history and remembered the family name of the present British rulers.

But to the people in America, and particularly in Canada, His Royal Highness is "Eddie." And he is tickled every time he hears it.

His intimates at home call him Dave.

But there is no telling what his parents call him when he pulls a cropper, and falls from his horse.

sculpture. She had a real workman's studio on her father's place and her exhibitions, both in Lenox and in New York, had won favorable mention.

The Winthrops are held in high esteem here, Mr. Winthrop being of the eighth generation in direct descent from John Winthrop, Colonial Governor of Massachusetts. A retired capitalist, whose wealth is reputed here to match that of any man in Lenox, he has devoted himself to the welfare of the community, having spent liberally in restoring the old Court House built in 1800 and the Congregational Church, and having been a generous contributor to the Lenox library, of which he is head. Mr. Winthrop is a brother of Beekman Winthrop, former Governor of the Philippines, who served in the Navy, the Treasury and the State Department in President Taft's regime.

Mrs. Winthrop, whose mansion adjoins the grounds of the Lenox Club, is the grandmother of the girls. She is 86 years old and has not yet been told.

Prepared For Ceremonies.

Although the marriages were kept a deep secret from the Winthrops until the honeymoon couples were well on their way, the weddings were not altogether sudden. At least notice of intentions was filed by both bridegrooms with Town Clerk John Powers of Lenox on August 24. Mr. Powers was enjoined to the strictest secrecy and he kept faith.

Saturday night Messrs. Morse and Miles went over to Interlaken and interviewed the Rev. Dr. John Trowbridge, who is 74 years old and has been a Congregationalist minister for fifty-two years. Dr. Trowbridge consented to perform the joint ceremony and agreed to arrange simple decorations of the front parlor in the parsonage, an ample old Colonial house.

The young men asked that the ceremony should be performed at the unusually early hour of nine, explaining that thereby they hoped to avoid detection and possibly pursuit, at least until they had put a safe distance behind them.

The four young people reached the Trowbridge home on time, to find the sunny parlor gay with sweet peas, white hydrangeas and white gladiolas. Neither young woman wore an engagement ring, but each of the bridegrooms-to-be was prepared with a simple gold band for the ceremony.

After Dr. Trowbridge had united the two couples, so he told afterward, he kissed both brides, thus breaking a custom of abstinence which he had kept during more than a half century in the ministry. Also, Dr. Trowbridge said, the double wedding marked another record for him, for the combined fee was the largest he ever had received for a wedding.

Take Father's Car.

When the brief congratulations and good wishes were over the young people, remarking that they had "a long way to go," manifested the utmost eagerness to depart. Mr. and Mrs. Morse climbed into Mr. Winthrop's big car, the girl at the wheel, and sped down the road. An instant later and the girl's own car had followed, Mr. Miles taking the wheel of that instead of the one he usually had been paid to drive.

Little is known here about Mr. Miles except that he is 34 years old, a widower, without children, who came from Milton, Vt., and had been driving for Mr. Winthrop for some time. Neither he nor his bride disclosed anything about the incipience or the progress of their romance.

Mr. Morse was born in Lenox 23 years ago, and is just a year younger than his bride. He was graduated from the Lenox High School and went to work about three years ago for Ben H. Rogers, a contracting electrician of Lenox. He was sent to the Winthrop estate to do some wiring and there became acquainted with Miss Kate. Just how long the two had known each other, or how often they had met before the young workman's suit was successful was not learned.

NATIONS UNANIMOUSLY

ready to accept obligatory arbitration, this form of settlement of conflicts must have as a corollary security guarantees based on the employment of force.

Needs Support of Force

This became evident when M. Politas, eminent Greek international jurist, delivered an illuminating dissertation on just what the league covenant stands for. He argued that the history of arbitration proved indisputably that compulsory arbitration to succeed must be backed by force, because human society has never been able to rely solely on suasion for the protection of the lives and liberty of its citizens.

The countries of Latin America, who took a prominent part in the discussion, all concurred on the necessity of guarantees as a concomitant of arbitration.

The resolution was adopted after eloquent speeches by the British and French premiers. Mr. Macdonald said "If this assembly could only be recorded in the pages of history as an assembly which for the time did not merely give lip service to peace but brain service, it would be distinguished above all gatherings of mankind that have met hitherto."

Patience Required

M. Herriot gave a message of hope without being unduly optimistic concerning the great problem before the assembly.

"Now begins the detailed study of the difficult questions which Premier Macdonald has already outlined," said the French premier. "Problems of mutual assistance and, above all, the great problem of international solidarity, and making that international solidarity a living thing. Let us have patience to make our way through the stage which must yet be crossed. The road is long, but we must traverse it arm in arm, associating our efforts and our endeavors."

After pledging the local cooperation of the French delegation, M. Herriot declared his faith that within a few weeks the world would learn that the Fifth Assembly had marked a stage of decisive progress, bringing to fruition the work of so many centuries of suffering and endurance.

OBITUARY.

Mary Jane McPherson, wife of Mr. Fred Bullied, passed away on Saturday evening, in St. Joseph's Hospital, following a brief illness.

Besides her sorrowing husband she is survived by one son, Ross, and one daughter, Madge. In religion she was a Presbyterian, and a faithful member of Clydesdale church, prior to her residence in Peterboro and Lakefield.

The body was taken to Lakefield yesterday, and the funeral took place this morning from the family residence to Clydesdale cemetery, for interment.

MADOC FLOWER SHOW.

MADOC, Sept. 8.—The gladiola show held on Saturday under the auspices of the Horticultural Society was very successful indeed. The south window of Cross and Co.'s store was filled with exquisite blooms grown in Madoc district. The display reflected a great deal of credit on the taste and judgment of the growers, and should prove an incentive to other citizens. The prizes were given as follows:

Best collection—1 Miss Connor; 2 Mr. Casement.

Best single spike, purple—1 Mrs. G. West.

The north window of the store was filled with gladioi grown by Mrs. Bonisteel, of Belleville, who acted as judge of the competition. Mrs. Bonisteel had a wonderful collection on exhibition. There were thirty jars with from two to six blooms in each, and a wide range of varieties, a few being: Searlano, Roes Ash, Mrs. Len Douglas, Mrs. Frances King, White Giant, Golden Measure, Rembrandt, Intensity, White Glory and American Beauty.

Mrs. Bonisteel is quite an authority on these flowers, and has produced and named a number of new varieties herself. Mrs. Bonisteel generously donated this magnificent collection to the Horticultural Society, and at the close of the exhibition these blossoms, together with the competing blooms, were divided amongst the churches and the sick of the village.

Besides the gladioli there were shown a collection of dwarf dahlias grown by Mrs. Bonisteel, a large bowl of cactus dahlias grown by Mrs. Blackburn, of Belleville, and two particularly fine and perfect cactus dahlias grown by Mrs. Geo. West of town.

That the exhibition was appreciated was shown by the crowd of people gathered in front of the windows all day. The Horticultural Society feel gratified and well repaid for their eqorts. They trust that the same appreciation will be manifested next Saturday when the general flower show will be held in the Public Library during the afternoon and evening.

The Cheese Board.

The Cheese Board met on Saturday afternoon, when 360 cheese were sold at 16 5-16. Many expressions of sympathy and regret were heard for the passing of Mr. George Ivey of Campbellford, who had for many years been a loyal and capable member of the Board. Mr. Ivey had always been of great assistance and will be sadly missed. A resolution was passed that a letter of condolence be written and sent to Mrs. Ivey.

Pioneer Dead.

The death occurred in Belleville of Mrs. Isabel Barnum, widow of Simon Barnum, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. A. Phillips. Mrs. Barnum was eighty-seven years of age, and was one of the pioneers of this district. Mr. and Mrs. Barnum were residents of Madoc for many years. Besides her daughter, Mrs. Barnum leaves one son, Mr. George Barnum, of Woodstock.

The Ladies' Guild of St. John's Anglican Church held an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. W. Springham. The affair was well attended, and a very enjoyable time spent by all. Next week a similar tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Charlie Hart.

A prosperous farmer here was putting in time down street the other day waiting for a broken rake to be mended. The hay was so stout that the rake was not strong enough to bear the pressure. These bumper crops ought to spell good times for the farmers.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Connor are enjoying a few days in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Murray Street, Peterboro, are the guests of Mrs. Walker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moon and Master Albert, of Rainy River, are with Mrs. A. Moon for a month's holiday.

Miss L. Sutton is in Belleville for the week-end, attending a re-union of the Geen family, and also the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. A. Geen, which is being celebrated on Monday.

Miss Lister, of Belleville, who has been spending the summer in England, has returned, and is the guest of Mr. D. E. K. Stewart of town.

NEW ZEALAND SHOWS THE WAY.

According to the Budget for the year just announced, New Zealand should afford Canadians some reason for envy.

This island dominion offers its people some very welcome taxation reductions—the land tax reduced by ten per cent. and the amusement tax by thirteen and one-third per cent.

In addition, the Government intimates that the amusement tax is to be lowered and a cut is to be made upon the duty upon tobacco.

How does New Zealand, which, it must be remembered, had as big a war burden proportionately as Canada, find it possible to institute such a programme of tax reduction?

Very simply.

There is no mystery about it, no wizardry of finance, no elaborate policy.

Just the policy Mr. Micawber used to advocate and never followed, keeping the expenditures inside the revenue.

Interest and sinking fund charges are met out of revenue—not out of juggling loans.

New Zealand's coat is cut according to its cloth, with the result that there is ample revenue to meet all current requirements, and, in addition, tax reduction is made possible.

We have much to learn from New Zealand.

READ YOUR PAPER.

Were it not for the fact that when a typographical or reporting slip causes a bad mistake to appear in print there is always a crowd of kind-hearted folks ready to point it out, newspaper publishers would often come to the conclusion that people nowadays do not read their papers as thoroughly as they should.

For instance, widespread publicity was given in Ontario newspapers not long ago to the operations of a crook who victimized Hamilton merchants by means of Mexican twenty-dollar bills.

His scheme was to order an article of small value to be sent to a certain address, at the same time telling the merchant to have the messenger boy bring change for a twenty-dollar bill.

Invariably, he would meet the errand boy outside the premises named, receive the article and change and tender the Mexican bill in exchange.

By the time the fraud was discovered, of course, the confidence man had vanished.

The game was described in detail in many newspapers, and yet the same trick was successfully worked in Chatham last week, and by the time this appears in print the operator may have made his appearance in a new field.

The moral is that newspapers should be read thoroughly.

Had the Chatham victim perused his daily paper faithfully he would have saved himself the loss of eighteen dollars.

If you only skim through it you are depriving yourself of much information that may be of value to you.

TIME TO SPEAK.

An announcement as to the exact nature of the questions to be voted on when the plebiscite on the Ontario Temperance Act is submitted to the people next month would seem to be in order.

Both prohibitionists and the Moderation League are girding their loins for the battle of the ballots.

Organization work is being attended to and the machinery necessarry for getting under the vote is being established.

The contending forces might as well be informed as to just exactly what they are fighting about so that the campaign can develop on definite lines.

Premier Ferguson should break his long silence and enlighten the electorate on this most important matter, seeing that the date of polling is drawing rapidly near.

There have been guesses as to the nature of the questions, some of them by journals usually considered as close to the administration, but the Premier has so far refused to be drawn out as to the accuracy or otherwise of these surmises.

The time has come, however, when he should speak.

The questions should be outlined for the benefit of the electorate.

And by the same token there is a general hope that they will be so worded as to leave no doubt of their meaning.

The Province wants no trick ballot, no questions so ambiguously worded that the public may be in doubt of their purport.

The plebiscite should be so conducted that when the voting is over and the results recapitulated that there will be not a shadow of doubt as to what the majority of the electors in this Province want in the way of a liquor policy.

WORK WANTED—NOT THEORIES.

The Unemployment Conference at Ottawa seems destined to fall to the ground because very few of those called together to consider this most vital problem appear to realize that what is needed is a remedy that can be applied at once.

There is too much theory and not enough common sense about the discussion.

Manufacturers offer the Government's tariff policy as the reason for unemployment, and representatives of the Government resent the introduction of such a topic.

Municipalities and Provinces again seek to show that the Federal Government should act, while the Minister of Labour maintains that the responsibility falls upon the Provinces.

In other words, the favourite old game of "passing the buck" is rendering the conference of little value.

Unless all interests represented see that they are called together to deal with a crisis that is here now and not something that may happen in the remote future, and that might be averted by adopting some particular policy, it is to be feared that little will be accomplished.

The really important facts are that there are thousands of men unemployed that the industrial situation gives no sign of bettering until next spring, at least, and that the long, cold Canadian winter is just around the corner.

Theories as to the tariff will do nothing to help the present situation, and the sooner all hands realize the necessity of eliminating politics and get down to a practical basis the sooner will there be some hope of an emergency programme that will be of value in mitigating the distress caused by the present crisis.

LONDON'S PLAN.

There are representatives there from many industries and from many Governments, says the London Advertiser discussing the Unemployment Conference. It must be that these men are at Ottawa with the idea of seeing what they can put into the plan to open up necessary work in various parts of the Dominion. If that were not their idea in going to Ottawa to attend the conference, then it were better that they should no have gone at all.

The plan followed right here in London has done more to help the unemployed than all the discussion that could possibly take place on the subject. London's idea has been to carry on as much work as possible, with the result that the City Engineer has a staff of 500 today, whereas the highest payroll last year was 375. If London City Council had taken the attitude that Ottawa or Toronto or some other agency should deal with the problem, there would have been nothing done to deal with the situation. There might have been a great deal of correspondence and a fine display of learned oratory, but all that would not have provided a day's work for anyone outside of a couple of stenographers.

The Ottawa conference must get down to something practical. It must deal with a given problem, and in so doing must meet responsibility fairly rather than dissipate its energies in a futile attempt to attach blame on some person else.

To use an old phrase, the business of "passing the buck" must cease. Let them all, Provincial, municipal and Federal Governments, go seriously to work with the idea of each taking its fair share of the common load. There is no other possible way in which the conference can justify its existence or write the word accomplishment over its deliberations.

SUCKERS AND PARASITES.

The farmer's alleged point of view was put very bluntly by Colonel J. Z. Fraser, President of the Farmers' Publishing Company, in his evidence yesterday before the Special Committee of the Legislature which is considering the position of agriculture in this Province. It would not be fair to say that Colonel Fraser represents the agricultural opinion of Ontario, but the sentiments he voices will, no doubt, be endorsed by a considerable section of the rural community. Those sentiments will be just as vehemently repudiated by the class of citizens against whom he levels his bolts of criticism. The wisdom of raising these issues, in such a truculent form, may be questioned. It certainly can do no good to pass such sweeping condemnations as that implied in the division of the population into two main classes—the "sucker class and the parasite class." "Suckers" will protest just as loudly against the classification as the "parasites," and it is to be noted the latter are declared to be in the majority. It would seem, too, from the report of the Colonel's remarks, that the "suckers" consist mainly of the farmers. They will not thank him for his poor opinion of them.

The only satisfactory way of approaching the agricultural problem, or any other problem, is in a spirit of impartiality and fairness to all interests. Manufacturers have their difficulties, and they are no small ones. There are both prosperous and impoverished agriculturists as there are prosperous and bankrupt industrialists; the difficulties of the farmers are admitted and deplored, but Colonel Fraser seems blind to the troubles of the manufacturers and the industrial workers. His one remedy is thrift and economy, and he regards 46 cents an hour as an "extortionate wage." Get down the price of labor to what it used to be when the Deserted Village was written, he says, and all will be well. But all would not be well, as all was not well then. The people will no longer be content with living the kind of half-life, or quarter-life, which was the common lot of the country serfs, and no parson can be "passin grich on forty pounds a year" in these days. There is no economic formula by which forty pounds will do so much as to keep a bachelor parson or anybody else alive, not to speak of the married men. The times have changed, and changed altogether for the better. It is ridiculous to suppose that present-day problems can be solved by bringing about low wages and their accompaniment of poverty of body and mind. It would be not only a deserted village, but a deserted country, if any attempt was made to conduct its business, private or public, on sweat-labor principles. Neither is the community to be so easily separated into the "sucker class" and the "parasite class." There is something of the "sucker" in most of us, and no one is entirely free from the taint of parasitism. If the Colonel can point to any sections of the community which are absolutely useless, let them be done away with. But survival must depend in the long run on service and utility.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Exhibition week—make it a record-breaker.

All roads will lead to Peterborough this week. Fly your flag and let the visitors carry away the impression that this is a live city.

The kennel show at the Exhibition is not a sign of the Fair going to the dogs. It merely means that the dogs are going to the Fair.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, September 8 (Canadian Press). — There was a good steady demand for ocean grain freight room here on Friday and Saturday and a fairly active business was done at firm rates. The demand was principally for continental room and loading was booked up at 16 cents per 100 pounds for wheat in Canadian funds. Inquiry from New York exporters for Canadian Western oats was again good on Saturday, but little new business resulted. Car lot prices on spot were firm.

There was no change in the flour market for shipping wheat grades, business being quiet and prices were steady. Trade in winter wheat grades was also rather slow. The market for millfeed was without new feature with a moderate amount of business passing in small lots for country account to meet actual wants. There was no change in the rolled oats prices. A firm feeling has prevailed in the egg market during the past week, and prices show no important change. Demand continues good. There has been no improvement in the volume of business in Canadian storage eggs for export account.

A fair amount of business in butter was done for export account, but the movement is smaller than last week's. Domestic trade is quiet. Movement of cheese for export has been disappointing and the domestic market closed with an easy undertone.

Demand for old crop beans is good, with prices for choice No. grades unchanged at $2.95 to $3.00 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 8 (Canadian Press). — Interest in wheat appeared lacking on Saturday, and the market moved within a narrow range, sentiment on the whole, being slightly bearish. At the finish wheat was down 1-2c to 1c, with September $1.22 1-8 and December $1.27 to $1.27 1-8.

Corn advanced 1-4c to 3-4c.

Oats climbed 1-8c to 3-8c.

Provisions ranged from 5c to lower to 10c higher.

CHEESE BOARD SALES.

VANKLEEK HILL, September 8 (Canadian Press). — At the Chees Board on Saturday, 961 boxes of white and 389 coloured cheese sold at 16 3-8c per pound.

MADOC, September 8 (Canadian Press). — At Saturday's meeting of the local Cheese Board, 359 white cheese were offered and all sold at 16 5-16 cents per pound.

BELLEVILLE, September 8 (Canadian Press). — At Saturday's session of the local Cheese Board, there were offered 2,289 white and 696 coloured, all sold at 16 5-16 cents per pound.

MADDENED LABORER STABS TEN IN CAFE

Became Enraged When Told Tea and Coffee Were Only Drinks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Ten persons were stabbed in an Eldridge street coffee house early Saturday when Guiseppe Averso, a powerful laborer, became maddened and ran amuck when he ordered whiskey and was told that only tea and coffee were sold in the place. Two of his victims were seriously wounded.

After he had slashed blindly about in the coffee house with a knife, causing panic among the patrons of the place, Averso fled to his home nearby. There he was disarmed after a struggle and placed under arrest by a policeman who had pursued him and had broken down the door of his house in entering.

A THOUGHT

IS THE FAULT YOURS?

You talk a lot about changing your job; have you ever thought at all about changing yourself?

It's dollars to doughnuts that the trouble between you and your job is your fault and the job's loss.

If you had more respect for your job, it would soon develop into more of a position; if you put more into your work, you would in time get more out of it.

You know you cannot drop pennies into a slot machine and pick up gold dollars—the best you expect and get is a cube of chocolate or of chewing gum.

How in the name of common sense—you see, I am assuming that you have common sense; I hope this is not presumption on my part—can you get much when you give little?

There are times when unrest and dissatisfaction with one's job are justifiable; there are situations in business that we cannot change or are not best for us; but before you decide that such is the condition in your present job, be sure that the shoe that pinches is not of your own making.

The new job is only an opportunity to move; how you move in the new environment, just as in the old, is up to you; will you go forward or backward? Remember, you cannot stand still; it's either on and up, or down and out.

Movie starring isn't so good. Between pictures you have to run out and get a divorce.

Good Corn Yield.

The corn fields or rather small gardens are putting forth an abundant yield of corn this year and the younger boys are finding it out. Several corn roasts have been reported and since the owners of the gardens have been surprised to find their small patches stripped. The boys do not call it stealing, but the poor woman who depends largely on her garden stuff for a living feels not only the loss, but labor wasted, and a joke many villagers do not appreciate. Other citizens have been warned and are on the look-out for marauders who trample or break down more than they carry away.

FRUIT GROWERS ASK AID.

Australian Dried Fruit Industry Suffers By Rejection Of Imperial Preference.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 8.—(Associated Press). — The Australian dried fruits industry is in a grave position, due to competition from California and from cheap labor countries and to the rejection of Imperial preference by the British Government. This summary of the situation was submitted to Prime Minister Bruce by a deputation from the fruit districts. The growers asked immediate financial assistance.

The Government promised to hold a special Cabinet conclave to find a permanent solution. Growers are a little more hopeful than they have been, as farmer members in Federal Parliament are pushing their cause forward.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin; but because of personal enmity growing out of land disputes the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. Oliver, incensed at Sir John's references to him as a "pirate," engages him in a duel and defeats him. He then proceeds to Godolphin Court to apprise Rosamund of the affair.

He found her in her bower—a light, turreted chamber on the mansion's eastern side, with windows that looked out upon that lovely sheet of water and the wooded slopes beyond.

She rose with a little exclamation of gladness when he appeared under the lintel—scarce high enough to admit him without stooping—and stood regarding him across the room with brightened eyes and flushing cheeks.

Like her brother, she was tawny headed and she was divinely tall, though as yet her figure in its girlishness was almost too slender for her height.

"I had not looked for you so early"—she was beginning, when she observed that his countenance was oddly stern.

"Why—what has happened?" she cried, her intuitions clamoring loudly of some mischance.

"Naught to alarm you, sweet; yet something that may vex you." He set an arm about that lissom waist of hers above the swelling farthingale, and gently led her back to her chair, then flung himself upon the window-seat beside her.

"You hold Sir John Killigrew in some affection?" he said between statement and inquiry.

"Why, yes. He was our guardian until my brother came of full age."

Sir Oliver made a wry face.

"Aye, there's the rub. Well, 'Ive all but killed him."

She drew back into her chair, recoiling before him, and he saw horror leap to her eyes and blanch her face. He made haste to explain the causes that had let to this; he told her briefly of the calumnies concerning him that Sir John had put about to vent his spite at having been thwarted in the matter of his coveted license to build at Smithick.

"That mattered little," he concluded. "I knew these tales concerning me were abroad, and I held them in the same contempt as I hold their utterer. But he went further, Rose; he poisoned your brother's mind against me, and he stirred up in him the slumbering rancor that in my father's time was wont to lie between our houses. Today Peter came to me with the clear intent to make a quarrel. He affronted me as no man has ever dared."

She cried out at that, her already great alarm redoubled. He smiled.

"Do not suppose that I could harm him. He is your brother, and, so, sacred to me. He came to tell me that no betrothal was possible between us, forbade me ever again to visit Godolphin Court, dubbed me pirate and vampire to my face and reviled my father's memory. I tracked the evil of all this to its source in Killigrew, and rode straight to Arwenack to dam that source of falsehood for all time. I did not accomplish quite so much as I intended. You see, am frank, my Rose. It may be that Sir John will live; if so I hope that he may profit by his lesson. I have come straight to you," he concluded, "that you may hear the tale from me before another comes to malign me with false stories of this happening."

"You—you mean Peter?" she cried.

"Alas!" he sighed.

She sat very still and white, looking straight before her and not at all at Sir Oliver. At length she spoke.

"I am not skilled in reading men," she said in a sad, small voice. "How should I be, that am but a maid who has led a cloistered life? I was told of you that you were violent and passionate, a man of bitter enmities, easily stirred to hatreds, cruel and ruthless in the persecution of them."

"You, too, have been listening to Sir John," he muttered, and laughed shortly.

"All this I was told," she pursued as if he had not spoken, "and all did I refuse to believe because my heart was given to you. Yet—yet of what have you made proof today?"

He set himself to explain.

"I have told you what Sir John had done. I have told you that the greater part of it—and matter all that touched my honor—I know Sir John to have done long since. Yet I suffered it in silence and contempt. Was that to show myself easily stirred to, ruthlessness? What was it but forbearance? When, however, he carries his petty huckster's rancor so far as to seek to choke for me my source of happiness in life and sends your brother to affront me, I am still so brother to be no more than a tool and go straight to the hand that wielded him. Because I know of your affection for Sir John I gave him such latitude as no man of honor in England would have given him."

Then seeing that she still avoided his regard, still sat in that frozen attitude of horror at learning that the man she loved had imbrued his hands with the blood of another whom she also loved, his pleading quickened to a warmer note.

"Rose," he cried, and his deep voice quivered with intercession, "dismiss all that you have heard from out your mind. Consider only this thing that has befallen. Suppose that Lionel, my brother, came to you and that, having some measure of power and authority to support him, he swore to you that you should never wed me, swore to prevent this marriage because he deemed you such a woman as could not bear my name with honor to myself; and suppose that to all this he added insult to the memory of your dead father, what answer would you return him?"

Her eyes scanned now his face, every line of which was pleading to her and calling for impartial judgment. Her face grew troubled, and then almost fierce. She set her hands upon his shoulders and looked deep into his eyes.

"You swear to me, Noll, that all is as you have told it me—you have added naught, you have altered naught to make the tale more favorable to yourself?"

"You need such oaths from me?" he asked, and she saw sorrow spread upon his countenance.

"If I did I should not love thee, Noll. But in such an hour I need your assurance. Will you not be generous and bear with me, strengthen me to withstand anything that may be said hereafter?"

"As God's my witness, I have told you true in all," he answered solemnly.

"Then," she said, "I believe you acted rightly. I believe with you that no man of honor could have acted otherwise. I must believe you, Noll, for did I not then I could believe in naught and hope for naught. I am content so you be true."

"True I shall ever be, sweetheart," he whispered fervently.

She looked at him again, and now she was smiling wistfully through her tears.

"And you will bear with Peter?" she implored him.

"He shall have no power to anger me," he answered. "I swear that, too. Do you know that but to-day he struck me?"

"Struck you? You did not tell me that!"

"My quarrel was not with him, but with the rogue that sent him. I laughed at the blow. Was he not sacred to me?"

"He is good at heart, Noll," she pursued. "In time he will come to love you as you deserve, and you will come to know that he, too, deserves your love."

"He deserves it now, for the love he bears to you."

"And you will think ever thus during the little while of waiting that perforce must lie before us?"

"I shall never think otherwise, sweet. Meanwhile, I shall avoid him, and that no harm may come should he forbid me Godolphin Court, I'll even stay away. In less than a year you will be of full age, and none may hinder you to come and go. What is a year, with such hope as mine to still impatience?"

She stroked his face.

"Art very gentle with me ever, Noll," she murmured fondly. "I cannot credit you are ever harsh to any, as they say."

"Heed them not," he answered her.

CUT SLUG HERE

"I may have been something of all that, but you have purified me, Rose. What man that loved you could be aught but gentle."

He kissed her and stood up.

"I had best be going now," he said. "I shall walk along the shore toward Trefusis Point to-morrow morning. If you should chance to be similarly disposed——"

She laughed and rose in her turn.

"I shall be there, dear Noll."

"Twere best so hereafter," he assured her, smiling, and so took his leave.

CHAPTER III
THE FORGE

Sir Oliver's wisdom in being the first to bear Rosamund the story of that day's happenings was established anon when Master Godolphin returned home. He went straight in quest of his sister, and in a frame of mind oppressed by fear and sorrow for Sir John, by his general sense of discomfiture at the hands of Sir Oliver and by the anger begotten of all this, he was harsh in manner and disposed to hector.

The answer she returned him did not tend to soothe his sorely ruffled spirit.

"I know," she said. "And I believe him to deserve no less. Who deals in calumny should be prepared for the wages of it."

He stared at her in long, furious silence, then exploded into oaths, and finally inveighed against her unnaturalness, and pronounced her bewitched by that foul dog Tressilian.

"It is fortunate for me," she answered him composedly, "that he was here before you to give me the truth of this affair."

Then her assumed calm and the anger with which she had met his own all fell away from her.

"Oh, Peter, Peter," she cried in anguish, "I hope that Sir John will recover. I am distraught by this event. But be just, I implore you. Sir Oliver has told me how hard driven he had been."

"He shall be driven harder yet, as God's my life! If you think this deed shall go unpunished——"

She flung herself upon his breast and implored him to carry this quarrel no further. She spoke of her love for Sir Oliver and announced her firm resolve to marry him in spite of all opposition that could be made, all of which did not tend to soften her brother's humor. Yet, because of the love that ever had held these two in closest bonds, he went so far in the end as to say that should Sir John recover he would not himself pursue the matter further. But if Sir John should die—as was very likely—honor compelled him to seek vengeance of a deed to which he had himself so very largely contributed.

"I read that man as if he were an open book," the boy announced with callous boastfulness. "He has the subtlety of Satan, yet he does not delude me. It was at me he struck through Killigrew. Because he desires you, Rosamund, he could not—as he bluntly told me—deal with me however I provoked him, not even though I went the length to striking him. He might have killed me for't, but he knew that to do so would place a barrier 'twixt him and you. Oh, he is calculating as all the fiends of hell! So, to wipe out the dishonor which I did him, he shifts the blame of it upon Killigrew and goes out to kill him, which he further thinks may act as a warning to me. But if Killigrew dies——" And thus he rambled on, filling her gentle heart with anguish to see this feud increasing between the two men she loved best in all the world. If the outcome of it should be that either were to kill the other she knew that she could never again look upon the survivor.

But Sir John Killigrew did not die. He hovered between this world and a better one for some seven days, at the end of which he began to recover. By October he was abroad again, gaunt and pale, reduced to half the bulk that had been his before, a mere shadow of a man.

One of his first visits was to Godolphin Court. He went to remonstrate with Rosamund upon her betrothal, and he did so at the request of her brother. But his remonstrances were strangely lacking in the force that she had looked for.

The odd fact is that in his near approach to death, and with his earthly interests dwindling, Sir John had looked matters frankly in the face and had been driven to the conclusion—a conclusion impossible to him in normal health—that he had got no more than he deserved. He realized that he had acted unworthily, if unconscious at the time of the unworthiness of what he did; that the weapons with which he had fought Sir Oliver were not the weapons that become a gentleman or in which there is credit to be won.

Nevertheless in the hour of reaction he did not go so far as to admit that Sir Oliver Tressilian was a fit mate for Rosamund Godolphin. She and her brother had been placed in his care by their late father, and he had nobly discharged his tutelage until such time as Peter had come to full age. His affection for Rosamund was tender as that of a lover, but tempered by a feeling entirely paternal. He went very near to worshiping her, and when all was said, when he had cleared his mind of all dishonest bias, he still found overmuch to dislike in Oliver Tressilian, and the notion of his becoming Rosamund's husband was repellent.

Therefore being whole again he went to remonstrate with her as he accounted it his duty and as Master Peter had besought him Yet, knowing the bias that had been his, he was careful to understate rather than to overstate his reasons.

"But, Sir John," she protested, "if every man is to be condemned for the sins of his forebears but few could escape condemnation; and wherever shall you find me a husband deserving of your approval?"

"His father—" began Sir John.

"Tell me not of his father, but of himself," she interrupted.

"I was coming to't," he answered, a thought testily, for these interruptions which made him keep to the point robbed him of his best arguments. "However, suffice it that many of his father's vicious qualities he has inherited, as we see in his ways of life; that he has not inherited others only the future can assure us."

"In other words," she mocked him, yet very seriously, "I am to wait until he dies of old age to make quite sure that he has no such sins as must render him an unfitting husband?"

"No, no!" he cried. "Good lack! What a perverseness is thine!"

"The perverseness is your own, Sir John. I am but the mirror of it."

He shifted his chair and grunted.

"Be it so, then," he snapped. "We will deal with the qualities that already he displays." And Sir John enumerated them.

"But this is no more than your judgment of him—no more than what you think him."

"'Tis what all the world thinks him."

"But I shall not marry a man for what others think of him, but for what I think of him myself. And in my view you cruelly malign him. I discover no such qualities in Sir Oliver."

"'Tis that you should be spared such a discovery that I am beseeching you not to wed him."

"Yet unless I wed him I shall never make such a discovery, and until I make it I shall ever continue to love him and to desire to wed him. Is all my life to be spent so?"

"Why, here are wicked wrinkles of ill humor," she cried to him. "You are all undone, and by a woman's wit, and you do not like it."

"I am undone by a woman's wilfulness, by a woman's headstrong resolve not to see."

"You have naught to show me," Sir John."

"Naught! Is all that I have said naught?"

"Words are not things; judgments are not facts. You say that he is so, and so and so. But when I ask you upon what facts you judge him your only answer is that you think him to be what you say he is. Your thought may be honest, Sir John, but your logic is contemptible."

"Come, now, deal like an honest, upright judge, and tell me one act of his—one thing that he has ever done and of which you have sure knowledge—that will bear him out to be what you say he is. Now, Sir John!"

He looked up at her impatiently. Then at last he smiled.

"Rogue!" he cried—and upon a distant day he was to bethink him of those words. "If ever he be brought to judgment I can desire him no better advocate than thou."

"Nor could I desire him a more honest judge than you."

What was the poor man to do thereafter? What he did. Live up to her pronouncement and go forthwith to visit Sir Oliver and compose their quarrel.

The acknowledgement of his fault was handsomely made, and Sir Oliver received it in a spirit no less handsome. But when Sir John came to the matter of Mistress Rosamund, he was, out of his sense of duty to her, less generous. He announced that since he could not bring himself to look upon Sir Oliver as a suitable husband for her, nothing that he had now said must mislead Sir Oliver into supposing him a consenting party to any such union.

"But that," he added, "is not to say that I oppose it. I disapprove, but I stand aside. Until she is of full age her brother will refuse his sanction. After that the matter will concern neither him nor myself."

"I hope," said Sir Oliver, "he will take as wise a view. But whatever view he takes will be no matter. For the rest, Sir John, I thank you for your frankness, and I rejoice to know that if I may not count you for my friend, at least I need not reckon you among my enemies."

But if Sir John was thus won round to a neutral attitude, Master Peter's rancor abated nothing; rather it increased each day, and presently there came another matter to feed it—a matter of which Sir Oliver had no suspicion.

He knew that his brother Lionel rode almost daily to Malpas, and he knew the object of those daily rides. He knew of the lady who kept a sort of court there for the rustic bucks of Truro, Penryn and Helston, and he knew something of the ill repute that had attached to her in town—a repute, in fact, which had been the cause of her withdrawal into the country. He told his brother some frank and ugly truths concerning her by way of warning him, and therein for the first time the twain went very near to quarreling.

After that he mentioned her no more. He knew that in his indolent way Lionel could be headstrong, and he knew human nature well enough to be convinced that interference here would but set a breach between himself and his brother without in the least achieving its real object. So Oliver shrugged resignedly and held his peace.

There he left the affair, nor ever spoke again of Malpas and the siren who presided there. And meanwhile the autumn faded into winter, and with the coming of stormy weather Sir Oliver and Rosamund had fewer opportunities of meeting. To Godolphin Court he would not go since she did not desire it, and himself he deemed it best to remain away since otherwise he must risk a quarrel with its master, who had forbidden him the place. In those days he saw Peter Godolphin but little, and on the rare occasions when they did meet they passed each other with a very meagre salute.

One day, a week from Christmas, he had occasion to ride to Helston on some trifling affair. For half a week a blizzard had whirled about the coast, and he had been kept chafing indoors, what time layer upon layer of snow was spread upon the countryside. On the fourth day, the storm being spent, the sun came forth, the skies were swept clear of clouds and all the countryside lay robed on a sun-drenched dazzling whiteness. Sir Oliver called for his horse and rode forth alone through the crisp snow. He turned homeward very early in the afternoon, but when a couple of miles from Helston he found that his horse had cast a shoe.

He dismounted, and bridle over arm tramped on through the sunlit vale between the heights of Pen dennis and Arwenack, singing as he went He came thus to Smithick and the door of the forge. About it stood a group of fishermen and rustics, for, in the absence of any inn just there, this forge was ever a point of congregation. In addition to the rustics and an itinerent merchant with his packhorses, there were present Sir Andrew Flack, the parson from Penryn, and Master Gregory Baine, one of the justices from the neighborhood of Truro. Both were well known to Sir Oliver, and he stood in friendly gossip with them what time he waited for his horse.

It was all very unfortunate, from the casting of that shoe to the meeting with those gentlemen; for as Sir Oliver stood there, down the gentle slope from Arwenack rode Master Peter Godolphin.

It was said afterward by Sir Andrew and Master Baine that Master Peter appeared to have been carousing, so flushed was his face, so unnatural the brightness of his eye, so thick his speech and so extravagant and foolish what he said. He was of those who turn quarrelsome in wine—which is but another way of saying that when the wine was in and the restraint out, his natural humor came uppermost untrammeled. The sight of Sir Oliver standing there gave the lad precisely what he needed to indulge that evil humor of his, and he may have been quickened in his purpose by the presence of those other gentlemen. In his half-fuddled state of mind he may have recalled that once he had struck Sir Oliver and Sir Oliver had laughed and told him that none would believe it.

He drew rein suddenly as he came abreast of the group, so suddenly that he pulled his horse until it smost sat down like a cat; yet he retained his saddle. Then he came through the snow that was all squelched and muddied just about the forge, and leered at Sir Oliver.

"I am from Arwenack," he announced unnecessarily. "We have been talking of you."

"You could have had no better subject of discourse," said Sir Oliver, smiling, for all that his eyes were hard and something scared—though his fears did not concern himself.

"Marry, you are right; you make an engrossing topic—you and your debauched father."

"Sir," replied Sir Oliver, "once already have I deplored your mother's utter want of discretion."

The words were out of him in a flash under the spur of the gross insult flung at him, uttered in the momentary blind rage aroused by that inflamed and taunting face above him. No sooner were they sped than he repented them, the more bitterly because they were greeted by a guffaw from the rustics. He would have given half his fortune in that moment to have recalled them.

Master Godolphin's face had changed as utterly as if he had removed a mask. From flushed that it had been it was livid now and the eyes were blazing, the mouth twitching. Thus a moment he glowered upon his enemy. Then standing in his stirrups he swung aloft his whip.

"You dog!" he cried, in a snarling sob. "You dog!" And his lash came down and cut a long red wheal across Sir Oliver's dark face.

With cries of dismay and anger the others, the parson, the justice and the rustics got between the pair, for Sir Oliver was looking very wicked, and all the world knew him for a man to be feared.

"Master Godolphin, I cry shame upon you," exclaimed the parson. "If evil comes I shall testify to the grossness of your aggression. Get you gone from here!"

"Go to the devil, sir," said Master Godolphin thickly. "Is my mother's name to be upon the lips of that bastard? By God, man, the matter rests not here. He shall send his friends to me, or I will horsewhip him every time we meet. You hear, Sir Oliver?"

Sir Oliver made him no reply.

"You hear?" he roared. "There is no Sir John Killigrew this time upon whom you can shift the quarrel. Come you to me and get the punishment of which that whiplash is but an earnest."

Then with a thick laugh he drove spurs into his horse's flanks, so furiously that he all but sent the parson and another sprawling.

"Stay but a little while for me," roared Sir Oliver after him. "You'll ride no more, my drunken fool!"

And in a rage he bellowed for his horse, flinging off the parson and Master Baine who endeavored to detain and calm him. He vaulted to the saddle when the nag was brought him, and whirled away in furious pursuit.

"The young fool is drunk," said Sir Andrew, shaking his white head. "He's in no case to meet his Maker."

"Yet he seems very eager," quoth Master Justice Baine. "I doubt I shall hear more of the matter."

CHAPTER IV
THE INTERVENER

The parson had notions of riding after Sir Oliver, and begged Master Baine to join him. But the justice looked down his long nose and opined that no good purpose was to be served; that Tressilian were ever wild and bloody men; and that an angry Tressilian was a thing to be avoided. The pedler deemed them a couple of madmen, whose ways were beyond the understanding of a sober citizen. The others—the fishermen and the rustics—had not the means to follow even had they had the will.

They dispersed to put abroad the news of that short, furious quarrel and to prophesy that blood would be let in the adjusting of it. Tois prognostication they based entirely upon their knowledge of the short Tressilian way. But it was a matter in which they were entirely wrong. It is true that Sir Oliver went galloping along that road that follows the Penryn River and that he pounded over the bridge in the town of Penryn in Master Godolphin's wake with murder in his heart. Men who saw him riding wildly thus with the red wheal across his white furious face said that he looked a very devil.

He crossed the bridge at Penryn, a half-hour after sunset, as dusk was closing into night, and it may be that the sharp, frosty air had a hand in the cooling of his blood. For as he reached the river's eastern bank he slackened his breakneck pace, even as he slackened the angry galloping of his thoughts. The memory of that oath he had sworn three months ago to Rosamund smote him like a physical blow. It checked his purpose; and, reflecting this, his pace fell to an amble. He shivered to think how near he had gone to wrecking all the happiness that lay ahead of him.

What was a boy's whip-lash, that his resentment of it should set all his future life in jeopardy? Even though men should call him a coward for submitting to it and leaving the insult unavenged, what should that matter? Moreover, upon the body of him who did so proclaim him he could brand the lie of a charge so foolish.

A mile or so below Penryn, he turned up the road that ran down to the ferry there, and took his way home over the shoulder of the hill with a slack rein. It was not his usual way. He was wont ever to go round by Trefusis Point that he might take a glimpse at the walls of the house that harbored Rosamund and a glance at the window of her bower. But tonight he thought the shorter road over the hill would be the safer way. If he went by Godolphin Court he might chance to meet Peter again, and his past anger warned him against courting such a meeting, warned him to avoid it lest evil should betide. Indeed, so imperious was the warning, and such were his fears of himself after what had just passed, that he resolved to leave Penarrow on the next day.

Whither he would go he did not then determine. He might repair to London, and he might even go upon another cruise—an idea which he had lately dismissed under Rosamund's earnest intercession. But it was imperative that he should quit the neighborhood, and place a distance between Peter Godolphin and himself until such time as he might take Rosamund to wife.

The resolve was firmly implanted in him by the time he reached Penarrow, and he felt himself uplifted by it and by the promise it afforded him that thus his future happiness would be assured.

Himself he stabled his horse; for of the two grooms he kept, one had, by his leave, set out yesterday to spend Christmas in Devon with his parents; the other had taken a chill and had been ordered to bed that very day by Sir Oliver, who was considerate with those that served him.

In the dining-room he found supper spread, and a great log fire blazed in the enormous cowled fireplace, diffusing a pleasant warmth through the vast room and flickering ruddily upon the trophies of weapons that adorned the walls, upon the tapestries and the portraits of dead Tressilians. Hearing his step, old Nicholas entered bearing a great candlebranch which he set upon the table.

"You'm late, Sir Oliver," said the servant, "and Master Lionel bain't home yet neither."

Sir Oliver grunted and scowled as he crunched a log and set it sizzling under his wet heel. He thought of Malpas and cursed Lionel's folly, as, without a word, he loosed his cloak and flung it on an oaken coffer by the wall where already he had cast his hat. Then he sat down, and Nicholas came forward to draw off his boots.

When that was done and the old servant stood up again, Sir Oliver shortly bade him to serve supper.

"Master Lionel can not be long now," said he. "And give me to drink, Nick, 'Tis what I most require."

"I've brewed ee a posset o' canary sack," announced Nicholas; "there'm no better supping o' a frosty winter's night, Sir Oliver."

He departed to return presently with a black jack that was steaming fragrantly. He found his master still in the same attitude, staring at the fire, and frowning darkly. Sir Oliver's thoughts were still of his brother and Malpas, and so insistent were they that his own concerns were for th moment quite neglected; he was considering whether it was not his duty, after all, to attempt a word of remonstrance. At length he rose with a sigh and got to table. There he bethought him of his sick groom, and asked Nicholas for news of him. Nicholas reported the fellow to be much as he had been, whereupon Sir Oliver took up a cup and brimmed it with the steaming posset.

"Take him that," he said. "There's no better medicine for such an ailment."

Outside fell a clatter of hoofs.

"No doubt," agreed Sir Oliver. "No need to stay with him. Here is all he needs. Carry that to Tom ere it cools."

It was his object to procure the servant's absence when Lionel should arrive, resolved as he was to greet him with a sound rating for his folly.

He took a deep draft of the posset, and as he set it down he heard Lionel's step without. Then the door was flung open, and his brother stood on the threshold a moment at gaze.

"So—" he began, and got no further.

The sight that met his eyes drove the ready words from his lips and mind; instead it was with a sharp gasp of dismay that he came immediately to his feet.

"Lionel!"

Lionel lurched in, closed the door, and shot home one of its bolts. Then he leaned against it, facing his brother again. He was deathly pale, with great dark stains under his eyes; his ungloved right hand was pressed to his side, and the fingers of it were all smeared with blood that was still oozing and dripping from between them. Over his yellow doublet on the right side there was a spreading dark stain whose nature did not intrigue Sir Oliver a moment.

"My God!" he cried, and ran to his brother.

"What happened, Lak? Who has done this?"

"Peter Godolphin," came the answer from lips that writhed in a curious smile.

Never a word said Sir Oliver, but he set his teeth and clenched his hands until the nails cut into his palms. Then he put an arm about this lad he loved above all save one in the whole world, and with anguish in his mind he supported him forward to the fire. There Lionel dropped to the chair that Sir Oliver had lately occupied.

"What is your hurt, lad? Has it gone deep?" he asked in terror almost.

"'Tis naught—a flesh wound; but I have lost a mort of blood. I thought I should have been drained or ever I got me home."

With fearful speed Sir Oliver drew his dagger and ripped away doublet, vest and shirt, laying bare the lad's white flesh. A moment's examination and he breathed more freely.

"Art a very babe, Lal," he cried in his relief. "To ride without thought to stanch so simple a wound, and so lose all this blood—bad Tressilian blood though it be."

"Stay thou there whilst I call Nick to help us dress this scratch."

den fear in the lad's voice, and his hand clutched at his brother's sleeve. "Nick must not know. None must know, or I am undone else."

"I gave better than I took, Noll," said he. "Master Godolphin is as cold by now as the snow on which I left him."

His brother's sudden start and the fixed stare from out of his, slowly paling face scared Lionel a little. He observed, almost subconsciously, the dull red wheal that came into prominence as the color faded out of Sir Oliver's face, yet never thought to ask how it came there. His own affairs possessed him too completely.

Lionel dropped his eyes, unable longer to meet a glance that was becoming terrible.

"He would have it," he growled almost sullenly, answering the reproach that was written in every line of his brother's taut body. "I had warned him not to cross my path. But to-night I think some madness had seized upon him. He affronted me, Noll; he said things which it was beyond human power to endure, and——"

He shrugged to complete his sentence.

"Well, well," said Oliver in a small voice. "First let us tend this woun of yours.

"Do not call Nick," was the other's swift admonition. "Don't you see, Noll?" he explained in answer to the inquiry of his brother's stare, "don't you see that we fought there almost in the dark and without witnesses. It——" he swallowed—"it will be called murder, fair fight though it was; and should it be discovered that it was I——"

He shivered, and his glance grew wild; his lips twitched.

"I see," said Oliver, who understood at last, and he added bitterly, "You fool!"

"I had no choice," protested Lionel. "He came at me with his drawn sword. Indeed, I think he was half-drunk. I warned him of what must happen to the other did either of us fall, but he bade me not concern myself with the fear of any such consequences to himself. He was full of foul words of me and you and all who ever bore our name. He struck me with the flat of his blade and threatened to run me through as I stood unless I drew to defend myself. What choice had I? I did not mean to kill him—as God's my witness, I did not, Noll."

Without a word Oliver turned to a side-table, where stood a metal basin and ewer. He poured water, then came in the same silence to treat his brother's wound. The tale that Lionel told made blame impossible, at least from Oliver.

When he had washed the wound he fetched some table-linen from a press and ripped it into strips with his dagger; he threaded out one of these and made a preliminary criss-cross of the threads across the lips of the wound—for the blade had gone right through the muscles of the breast, grazing the rib these threads would held the formation of a clot. Then with the infinite skill and cunning acquired in the course of his rovings he proceeded to the bandaging.

That done, he opened the window and flung out the blood-tinted water. The cloths with which he had mopped the wound and all similar evidences of the treatment he cast upon the fire. He must remove all traces even from the eyes of Nicholas. He had the most implicit trust in the old servant's fidelity. But the matter was too grave to permit of the slightest risk. He realized fully the justice of Lionel's fears that however fair the fight might have been, a thing done thus in secret must be accounted murder by the law.

Bidding Lionel wrap himself in his cloak, Sir Oliver unbarred the door and went upstairs in quest of a fresh shirt and doublet for his brother. On the landing he met Nicholas descending. He held him a moment in talk of the sick man above, and outwardly at least he was now entirely composed. He dispatched him upstairs again upon a trumped-up errand that must keep him absent for some little time, whilst himself he went to get the things he needed.

He returned below with them, and when he had assisted his brother into fresh garments with as little movement as possible so as not to disturb his dressing of the wound or set it bleeding afresh, he took the blood-stained doublet, vest, and shirt, which he had ripped, and flung them, too, into the great fire.

When some moments later Nicholas entered the vast room he found the brothers sitting composedly at table. Had he faced Lionel he would have observed little amiss with him beyond the deep pallor of his face. But he did not even do so much. Lionel sat with his back to the door, and the servant's advance into the room was checked by Sir Oliver with the assurance that they did not require him. Nicholas withdrew again, and the brothers were once more alone.

Lionel ate very sparingly. He thirsted and would have emptied the measure of posset, but that Sir Oliver restrained him, and refused him anything but water lest he should contract a fever. Such a sparing meal as they made—for neither had much appetite was made in silence. At last Sir Oliver rose, and with slow, heavy steps, suggestive of his humor, he crossed to the fireplace. He threw fresh logs on the blaze, and took from the tall mantelshelf his pipe and a leaden jar of tobacco. He filled the pipe pensively, then with the short iron tongs seized a fragment of glowing wood and applied it to the herb.

He returned to the table, and standing over his brother, he broke at last the silence that had now endured some time.

"What," he asked gruffly, "was the cause of your quarrel?"

Lionel started and shrank a little; between finger and thumb he kneaded a fragment of bread, his eyes upon it.

"I scarce know," he replied.

"Lal, that is not the truth."

"How?"

"'Tis not the truth. I am not to be put off with such an answer. Yourself, you said that you had warned him not to cross your path. What path was in your mind?"

Lionel leaned his elbows on the table and took his head in his hands.

"'Twas that wanton at Malpas was the cause of all," he complained.

Sir Oliver's eye flashed at the words.

"I deemed her quite other; I was a fool, a fool! I——" he choked, and a sob shook him—"I thought she loved me. I would have married he I would so, by God!"

Sir Oliver swore softly under his breath.

"I believed her pure and good, and——" He checked. "After all, who am I to say even now that she was not? 'Twas no fault of hers. 'Twas he, that foul dog Godolphin, who perverted her. Until he came all was well between us. And then——"

"I see," said Sir Oliver quietly. "I think you have something for which to thank him, if he revealed to you the truth of that strumpet's nature. I would have warned thee, lad. But—Perhaps I have been weak in that."

"It was not so; it was not she——"

"I say it was; and if I say so, I am to be believed, Lionel. I'd smirch no woman's reputation without just cause. Be very sure of that."

Lionel stared up at him.

"O God!" he cried presently. "I know not what to believe. I am a shuttlecock flung this way and that way."

"Believe me," said Sir Oliver grimly. "And set all doubts to rest." Then he smiled. "So that was the virtuous Master Peter's secret pastime, eh? The hypocrisy of man! There is no plumbing the endless depths of it!"

He laughed outright, remembering all the things that Master Peter had said of Ralph Tressilian—delivering himself as though he were some chaste and self-denying anchorite. Then on that laugh he caught his breath quite suddenly.

"Would she know?" he asked fearfully. "Would that harlot know—would she suspect that 'twas your hand did this?"

"Aye—would she," replied the other. "I told her to-night when she flouted me and spoke of him, that I went straight to find him and pay the score between us. I was on my way to Godolphin Court when I came upon him in the park."

"Then you lied to me again, Lionel. For you said 'twas he attacked you."

"And so he did," Lionel countered instantly. "He never gave me time to speak, but flung down from his horse and came at me snarling like a cross-grained mongrel. Oh, he was as ready for the fight as I—as eager."

"But the woman at Malpas knows," said Sir Oliver gloomily. "And if she tells——"

"Indeed, I think you are right," agreed his brother with relief. "She dare not for other reasons—when I come to think of it. Her reputation is already such, and so well detested is she, that were it known she had been the cause, however indirect, of this, the countryside would satisfy certain longings that it entertains concerning her. You are sure none saw you either going or returning?"

"None."

"All should be well, then, I think," said he at last. "You were best abed. I'll carry you thither."

He took up his stripling brother in his powerful arms and bore him upstairs as though he were a babe. When he had seen him safely disposed for slumber, he returned below, shut the door of the hall, drew up the great oaken chair to the fire, and sat there far into the night smoking and thinking.

He rose up at last, cursing that wanton at Malpas who had come to fling this fresh and terrible difficulty where already he had to face so many. He stood leaning upon the overmantel, his foot upon one of the dogs of the fender, and considering what to do. He must bear his burden in silence, that was all. He must keep this secret even from Rosamund. It split his heart to think that he must practise this deceit with her. But naught else was possible short of relinquishing her, and that was far beyond his strength.

TOURIST RECORDS IN EUROPE BROKE

PARIS, September 8 (United Press). — Although French business circles were disappointed with the Olympic Games because they failed to attract the great foreign crowds anticipated, the fact remains that this season is breaking all records for tourist travel. The American invasion is remarkable, and in addition the British Isles and South American countries are contributing big quotas.

It is estimated that the American tourists will spend $300,000,000 in Europe this season. The apex of travel has been reached, but the number of late arrivals is astonishingly high, and business from foreigners will boom well into the autumn months.

The increase in American tourist business is told of by H. K. Brooks, vice-president of the American Express Company. Last year the amount dealt in by the company in purely tourist business for Europe was 2,225,000,000 francs, whereas this year it is anticipated that the amount will reach nearly three million francs. He estimates, without including the passage money, that Americans dealing with the company alone will spend here well over a billion francs in Europe. He points out that this has been a factor in the recent rise of European currencies.

Few Go to Germany.

Americans have been spending most of their time in France and Switzerland, with passing visits to Britain. Only a small minority has gone to Germany this year, probably as a result of the unpleasant treatment accorded Americans there last year. The most accurate figures possible place the number of American tourists that booked passage this year at 300,000, which is a big increase over the corresponding period of last year.

It is calculated by tourist agencies that most Americans spend from about 8,990 francs to amounts running into scores of thousands. The richer visitors in many cases spend hundreds of thousands of francs. On an average bankers and shipping agents calculate how much French business depends upon American patronage.

British tourist travel has been increasing ever since the war and this class is represented chiefly by heavy spenders. Argentine and other South American countries who never pass to France, and usually visit Belgium, Italy and Spain.

No Olympic Crowds.

Owing largely to the enthusiasm of the French press, Paris anticipated an overwhelming rush during the Games, an influx that would swamp the hotels and create a heavy demand for accommodations in pensions and private homes. Preparations were made to receive this trade, but the business never materialised. Hotels were quite capable of handling all business, and although they were about crowded, the overflow was never seriously noticeable.

Furthermore, it quickly became apparent that tourists were not greatly interested in the Games. The travellers and pleasure seekers were largely content to read the scores in the newspapers, and reserve their time for the bigger idea of seeing France. In this way, the limited season of the Games proper was somewhat of a disappointment, but incontestably the year has been remarkable for tourist travel, and the shopkeepers and business houses are rapidly recovering from their grief.

German Proposals For National Monument and Burial of Unknown Soldier.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—(Associated Press).—On the tenth anniversary of the beginning of the World War a movement was launched for the erection of a national monument in Berlin to the memory of the soldiers who died as an outcome of the conflict.

There have been several proposals here to bury an unknown soldier, with proper ceremonies on behalf of the unknowns, but the Government opposed the idea on the ground that to do so would be following too closely in the footsteps of the allied nations, where the custom originated.

SOCIAL MEETING AT CAVANVILLE

About Fifty Ladies Gathered For Missionary Meeting.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 6.—The parsonage at Cavanville was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Thursday afternoon when about fifty ladies from the three appointments of the circuit, and a number from Millbrook as well, were present for a special missionary meeting and the opportunity of enjoying a social good time together.

The pastor, Rev. R. T. Richards, occupied the chair, and among the opening numbers of the programme was a most interesting paper on "The Sin of Omission," by Mrs. R. S. Staples, and a vocal solo, "Calling me home to you," by Miss Annie Tinney.

Among the guests were Rev. S. G. and Mrs. Rorke, of Peterboro, who are always warmly welcomed in Cavan and especially so on this occasion, as accompanying them was their daughter, Miss Luella Rorke, now on furlough from her missionary work in Japan. The ladies of the Cavan circuit have been particularly interested in Miss Rorke's labors in the Orient, and have given her generous support financially, and in other ways as well.

According to the rules of the Women's Missionary Society, under whose auspices Miss Rorke serves in Japan, no returned missionary may deliver a formally-prepared address until three months of their furlough have expired, but, as a special favor, some vivid sidelights on a few phases of the work being so effectively carried on were given at Thursday's gathering. The whole talk was of an informal nature, with illuminating references to the table full of interesting curios from the Island Empire, which Miss Rorke had brought with her the better to illustrate the homes, toys, gods, dress, lacquer work, embroidery, etc., of the people to whom she has devoted her life service.

That even the priests and their families are, in some instances, being won to Christianity through the educational work was made clear by an incident, coming under the speaker's personal knowledge, which was told in a convincing manner and interested her hearers throughout. The social service was the next point touched upon, when the slums of Tokyo, with their narrow, winding streets and alleyways, lack of fresh air and sunshine, overcrowded houses and immoral living conditions, their indescribable filth and lack of the most ordinary comforts, were made real with a vivid word picture by one who has labored amidst their unsanitary and unsavory conditions. "The ordinary chicken houses on the farms in Canada are far superior to the houses where the poor of the slums dwell in Tokyo."

Forty thousand yen were promised from the city and district government authorities to assist the missionaries in their uphill effort to raise funds to build a "Settlement House" in the slums, and even though the earthquake, fire and flood came early in December last year, with awful loss and suffering in their wake, yet by April of this year fifty thousand yen were paid over to the great relief of the faithful workers bravely laboring at their gigantic task.

The Japanese Imperial family have a custom of marking such events as weddings, deaths, etc., by gifts to social work, and the Institute at Tokyo has been placed on their list so that the missionaries are now assured of help from this source it will come at irregular intervals. In the very ruins of the buildings, in rough lumber shacks, kindergarten classes, medical clinics, and other forms of Christian service are being carried on, a native Japanese gentleman being most active in helping toward their success. As soon as possible the new building will be proceeded with when the present workers, with their crude equipment, will seek quarters elsewhere until the new plant may be occupied.

"Street" Sunday Schools were most interestingly described by the speaker in her closing remarks, a number of photographs showing classes of bright children who attend these Bible instruction meetings being shown. They are not held on the street, as the name would seem to imply, but the workers rent a room in some house in a community and then gather the small folk of the neighborhood for a Sunday School. The fewness of the workers makes it impossible to hold all such gatherings on Sunday—rather it is on every day of the week that the school assembles for Scriptural instruction. Buddhist Sunday Schools, patterned after the ones conducted under Christian auspices, endeavor to lure the children into their fold by adding attractive cards, and dainty cakes to the menu, but, even then, success does not always attend their efforts.

The hearty thanks of the meeting were tendered Miss Rorke for her most instructive talk, and later on the Japanese dress was donned that all might admire the beauty of the fine silk and embroidery which make up the toilet of a well-to-do lady in that land of sunshine.

Special Meeting.

The executive of the Women's Institute, having found it necessary to call a special business meeting for Wednesday, September 10, will hold same in the Council Chamber at 8 p.m., instead of at the home of Mrs. W. G. Rowland, as previously announced. The corn roast, which was to have furnished the social part of the evening, will, of necessity, be postponed until a later date. Members are being notified by card of the business meeting when some important matters must be definitely decided.

APSLEY CHARGES WERE DISMISSED

Furious Driving On Highway Alleged—Sunday the Hottest Day.

APSLEY, Sept. 6.—Police Magistrate Langley visited Apsley on Tuesday to hear two charges laid by William Staples against Vernal Windsor, the first for racing or driving furiously on the highway, and the second for using threatening language, neither of which was substantiated by the evidence submitted.

On the first charge the defendant pleaded guilty to furious driving but not to racing, but later changed his plea to not guilty. None of the three witnesses for the prosecution testified that Windsor was driving furiously, the nearest definition being that of Isaac Lean, who described the rate of speed as "pretty fast," while Staples refused to commit himself as to the speed, except that it was faster than ordinary driving, or than was necessary. Windsor, in his defence, said that he owned two race horses which he was exercising on the evening in question, and admitted that he might have been travelling at the rate of fifteen miles per hour. The magistrate found that no evidence of speed had been submitted and he dismissed the case.

On the complaint of using threatening language, Staples had five witnesses subpoenaed, none of whom corroborated his evidence, but on the contrary, went directly against it. The complaint was, therefore, dismissed, the magistrate declaring that it had the appearance of being a case of vindictiveness and spite on the part of complainant, none of his own witnesses supporting his statements as to the language used. Complainant also had to pay costs, amounting to $9.35.

Sunday was the hottest day of the year, the thermometer registering just over 89 in the shade. On account of the excessive heat the evening service at St. George's Church was held in the open air, a concession that was much appreciated by the worshippers. In contrast to this, during Tuesday night the mercury fell to 32, and a thin coating of ice was observed on standing water Wednesday morning.

FABLES ON HEALTH

SAVE THE VITAMINES.

Once his interest in vitamines had been aroused, Mr. Mann of Anytown went more deeply into the subject—as do most people when their eyes are opened to modern discoveries.

He learned that in cooking, much of the value of vitamine C is destroyd. Thus raw beets have considerable quantities of this vitamine, whereas cooked beets lose a great deal in preparation. The same is true of carrots and some other vegetables which, however, retain other vitamines when cooked. Fresh cabbage contains vitamine C in good quantity.

Thus some uncooked vegetable food such as carrots cabbage, or onions, should be on the menu to ensure getting this vitamine.

Vitamine B—Dairy products of all kinds, celery, peas, cabbage, carrots, potatoes, in grain products and cereals, in nuts and apples, grapefruit, oranges and lemons ;also to some degree in pears.

Vitamine C—In all dairy products; the same vegetables mentioned under Vitamine B, and in bananas, apples, grapefruit, oranges, pears, and in lemons.

DUCK HUNTERS WERE HUNTED

Chased From Bigelow's Pond By Angered Owner With Gun.

AGAINST SHOOTING.

CAVAN, Sept. 6.—Ducks were plentiful on Cavanville pond on Sept. 1. Between 75 and 100 were swimming about in the centre of the pond—beyond gun range. Only one hunter was lucky enough to secure any.

Two hunters who were there, and were out of gun range when the ducks rose, had slightly better luck on Douglas' pond, and then decided to try Mr. Herb. Bigelow's pond. They had shot several times at wood ducks and black ones, hitting a couple, which dropped into the water, when, in the middle of their fun, Mr. Bigelow appeared in great haste, carrying a large pump gun. The moment he came within earshot, and perhaps sooner, he began calling to the hunters, "Halt!" Stop that! Cut that out!" etc.

The hunters, seeing how excited he was, turned and fled, acting on the principle that it is better to be a coward for two weeks than a dead man the rest of your life.

Seeing them run, Mr. Bigelow called "Halt! halt! halt!" in his strongest voice. Hardly had he the third "halt" out, when he pulled up his repeater and shot at the nearest hunter, who was getting farther away all the time. Several pickles struck him, but the distance was so great that none of them lodged. Seeing the first shot had no effect, he blazed away again, this time completely missing.

The hunter hid in the woods behind the dam, and Herbert sat on the dam nursing his pop-gun. When the second hunter showed himself, the old gun spoke again — and scored a clean miss. Both hunters got away without any severe casualties, ducks (which they left regretfully), or anything else of importance.

Mr. Bigelow declares he will shoot anyone else on his property as quickly as he can. He himself never hunts ducks and will not allow others to do so either.

Save Fuel in Cooking

The illustration shows an interesting test you should try in your own kitchen. It proves the superiority of good enameled ware for cooking purposes. Take an SMP Enameled Ware Sauce Pan, and a sauce pan of equal size made of aluminum, tin or other metal. Into each pour a quart of cold water. Set both sauce pans over the fire. The water in the SMP Enameled Ware Sauce Pan will be boiling merrily in about five minutes, while the water in the all-metal sauce pan will come to the boil in about eight minutes—three minutes longer. Save fuel in cooking. Use

"GO FORWARD" IS A CAMPAIGN SLOGAN

Temperance Question Discussed By Pastor of St. Paul's Church

In the course of a sermon on Sunday morning on the text, "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward," the minister of St. Paul's church, Rev. R. Pogue, applied the message of his text to the present temperance situation. He had suggested that his people take "Forward" as their motto for their work for the kingdom of God and His church throughout the coming winter. He said in part: The command of the Lord to His church to-day is, "Speak to my people that they go forward." How has the church interpreted that command in the past in relation to the liquor problem? She has been laboring all through the years for the curtailment of the sale of intoxicating liquor beverages with the object in view of eventually reaching the conditions of things where its manufacture and sale would be completely prohibited, except for medicinal and necessary purposes.

It has been in that direction the church has always moved. That is what "forward" to the church has always meant. And so every amendment to the liquor act proposed in the past has had this as its object. Our present law is in advance of anything we have had in the matter of curtailing the manufacture and the sale of strong drink.

Now the question to be decided by every conscientious Christian voter in the coming weeks is just is: Is the legislation proposed in advance of what we at present enjoy? If so it is the duty of the Christian voter to support it. Does it mean that less and still less liquor will be sold? Is it a step in advance of what we now have? And does it bring us nearer to the time when this evil will completely pass away from human society, the time foretold by prophets when nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's Holy Mountain?

You see how that simplifies the issue. It is as plain as "two and two make four," that if we have so called Government control—which is not a Government control at all in the sense of further restricting the traffic, but a Government sale—that ten bottles of liquor will be sold where one is now sold—and that before long we shall have these same Liberty Leaguers, who are agitating for repeal of the O.T.A. asking for the restoration of conditions, where liquors shall once more flow as water. "Forward," not "backward," must be the Christian's watchword in his relation to so great an evil as the sale of intoxicating liquor, and "forward" must be his guiding principle when he records his vote in the coming contest.

FRANCE CELEBRATES MARNE ANNIVERSARY

Union of Allies Must Be Consolidated Says Herriot.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—(United Press).—Recalling France's darkest hour, Paris and the nation observed the tenth anniversary of the Battle of the Marne on Sunday. To-day's press devotes most of its space to the occasion, reporting the great celebration at Meaux, near Paris, where the invading Germans were turned back in 1914.

"The union of the allies in war must be consolidated in peace," Premier Herriot returned from a successful session of the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva declared in a speech at a banquet attended by "Papa" Joffre, hero of the Marne. Herriot reiterated France's need of security.

On the battlefields of the Marne a monument to General Gallieni, second in command to Joffre and the defender of Paris, who rushed troops from the capital to the front in taxi cabs, was unveiled.

GIRL TO BE TRIED.

SASKATOON, Sask., September 8 (Canadian Press). — Julia Strimbecks, 17, was committed for trial on a charge of murder on Friday at Dafoe, Sask., after a coroner's inquest into the death of her new-born child, whose body was uncovered in a chicken run at the rear of her employer's home.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that the child was born alive, and that it came to its death by strangling at the hands of its mother.

POPULAR CLOCHE NOW IN DISCARD

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 6. — (United Press). — The in-between hat this year will not be a 'cloche.' For as far as fashions go the cloche is dead. Perhaps no other style seemed so suited to the 'bobbed' head and the women will be reluctant to give it up. 'What's what' in Paris soon becomes 'what's what' in America and the Parisians have completely done away with all hats of cloche shape for the fall season. This is probably due to the fact that there are not nearly so many bobbed haired women in France as there are in America. The Parisian has been wearing the wide-brimmed hat all summer, although we have seen very few of these in America.

Paris is turning to the high, square-brimmed hat with narrow soft brims which turn upwards in back, front or at the side to suit the wearer.

American milliners are showing the Parisian shapes in modified degree, as few American women like the very stiff high crown. Round, head-fitting crowns, however, are not being shown by smart milliners. Small hats will remain in favor in America as long as women wear short hair. This season they all show the small brim, most of which turn up in front or at the sides with the short back.

Millinery Fabrics.

Black hatters plush is the most important of fall millinery materials and may either form the entire hat or be used with black satin or felt. Whether women will choose this heavy material for the in-between season hat is yet to be seen, although its later popularity is assured.

Felts are still popular. Two-shaded felt combinations are new, such as the black felt crown and upper brim with the Hadonna blue felt facing. Brims of felt bats are slashed in various ways. Often they form winged points at the sides or in the back. Brick is a new felt shade sponsored for the tailored costume. Replacing the cloche felts which were so popular with the younger girls are introduced little poke shapes which have rather wide front brims and are almost brimless in back. A lovely model of this type is made of orchid felt with folds of fushia and violet velvet extending about the crown.

Heavy ribbed ribbon forms many early models and ribbon plays an important part in millinery this season. Black satin also is favored for early wear, although it is usually combined with black velvet. For instance, a hat with a stiff crown of black satin has its tiny brim faced with scallop-edged velvet and a scalloped band of velvet extending about the crown.

Colors.

Black will be as popular as ever this season for millinery purposes. Browns and all wood shades will be extensively worn. Blonde is considered a good shade for the early fall hat and is being worn in Paris at present. Pansy purple and Venetian fushia hats are shown in almost every Fifth avenue shop window, but whether these shades are real forerunners of fashion remains to be seen. One would naturally suppose such tones to be a bit mature for the American woman, although everything has been done to insure their popularity and to add youthfulness. In most cases grade tones are used—three blended tones of one color—and this gives a more youthful effect.

Russet is a new fall millinery shade which will doubtless have many followers. Black combined with vivid colored embroidery or trimming is well liked by milliners.

Trimmings.

Ostrich pompoms, aigrettes and fancies of all sorts are to be worn this season. Graded color effects in ostrich are new and quite lovely. Feathers in small pompom effects will be among the most effective trims.

Ribbons ranging from very wide to very narrow types will be used in numbers. It has been a long time since the very wide ribbon bow has been used as a hat trim, but this season finds it in favor.

Toadstool Trim.

Among the newest of ribbon trims are the toadstool effects which are made from very narrow ribbon set on end and closely massed together so it resembles the under side of a toadstool. The ribbon is sewed onto buckram which is then attached to the hat.

Fur Cocardes.

From Paris come the fur cocardes which adorn the sports hats. Burunduki or chipmunk is a favorite cocarde for the felt hat. Flat, close clipped fur is cut into medallion and appliqued onto felt with gold thread.

Another unusual trim is used on the black felt hat which is in cloth with cretonne appliques outlined in gold thread. Silvercloth facings are used on many dressy hats.

The prune and cottage cheese sandwiches suggested for the luncheon are nourishing and easy to eat. Uncooked prunes are carefully washed and put through the food chopper, the stones, of course, being removed. An equal amount of cottage cheese is added and the mixture moistene dwith orange juice. Put between thin slices of whole wheat or gluten bread.

Try chopping beets very fine instead of in coarse dice. When your vegetables must be so plainly dressed it's sometimes a relief to find them served in a bit different shapes and sizes.

The kale is served with lemon juice, salt and pepper.

If vegetables for the reducing diet are "dished" before the seasoning is added for the family the cook will find herself above criticism and free to add butter and cream to suit her taste and judgment for the family.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

He was so surprised to see them.

"I think I'd kind of like to visit Buster Bear on my vacation," said Weeny, the elephant, to the Twins. And I'm sure Buster would like to have you, too."

"Where does he live?" asked Nick.

"In a woods on the side of a mountain," said Weeny. "Nancy, will you please shake the wrinkles out of my nighty and pack it up for me? I can't go to Buster's house all wrinkled up. And where are my specs?"

"Ha, ha, ha! I declare!" laughed Weeny. "If they'd been a snake they'd have bitten me. That's me for you! Here, Nancy, I'll take them off and you can pack them, too."

So Nancy packed the specs and then she and Nick trotted off—I mean Weeny trotted off with them on his back, not the specs.

I don't know what places they crossed but it was about a dozen things, and by and by they came to the tree-covered mountain side where Buster lived in a cave house with his mother and daddy.

When Weeny climbed up and rang the door-bell, Buster answered it, for indeed there was no one else to do it. He was all by himself.

He was so surprised to see them that all he could say was, "Good-night!"

"You should say, 'Good-day,'" said Weeny, wrapping his trunk around Buster's neck and giving him a kiss.

"Good-ni—I mean 'Hello,'" said Buster, doing a little dance. "I'm as glad as sixty to see you. Where are you going?"

"Here," said Weeny, sitting down to let the Twins slide off his back. "We've come to pay you a visit. Have you got any room?"

"Oodles!" said Buster. "Ma and Daddy are away on a trip and I'm all by myself. And I was just wondering what I was going to do. But now we can have a good time. Four is a dandy number. We can't play ball or prisoner's base, but we can play tig and hi-spy and five hundred and casino and loads of things. Can you cook, Nancy?"

"Yes, I can cook anything in cans," said Nancy, "and boil eggs and make tea."

"We'll have a perfect picnic," said Buster Bear. "Come on in and take off your things and we'll have a game of hi-spy right away. Talk about circuses!"

Well, I haven't got much room left to tell you all about it, but the visitors stayed five days with Buster and then Mr. and Mrs. Bear came home.

"Buster, did you get the cellar cleaned as I told you?" said Mrs. Bear,

"No, ma'am," said Buster, hanging his head.

"Or the fence whitewashed or the ash-can emptied or the wood cut or—"

"Oh, ma, we had such a good time I forgot," said Buster.

"I think we'll be packing and moving along," said Weeny to the Twins.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor, The Examiner,

So much interest has been taken in the judging competitions for young men and women, that have been held at the Peterboro Fair, in past years, and as increased interest is being taken in this year's competitions I would like to lay the particulars of the competitions before the young people of the county. In addition to the usual competitions, in which the boys judge beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep swine and heavy horses and the girls judge sewing, a new feature has been added this year to the girls sections in which the girls will judge dressing. Fifty-per cent. will be given for correct placing and fifty per cent for reasons.

The contest will be held next Thursday at 9.30 a.m. and will be open to all the young men and women under 26 years of age, who have not won in any previous competition It will be open to the city and county of Peterboro, as well as the townships of Cavan and Emily. Ninety dollars is being given in prizes, in addition to which President R. Denne has offered a free trip to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, for the boy and girl making the highest scores.

In order to assist the young women contestant, Mr. F. C. McRae, Agricultural Representative, Norwood, is arranging to bring an experienced woman speaker to Peterboro to instruct intending contestants. This meeting will be held in the young people's U.F.O. Hall, Simcoe street, September 9th at 8 o'clock. A large attendance is desired.

Further particulars about the competition may be obtained from Mr. McRae or from members of the committee, including Wm. Steinkraus, Robt. Grandy and Thos. McIndoo.

HELD A CORN ROAST

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Friday last when the employees of the C. Poolman Co., motored to Warsaw to grind corn around the camp fire of Mr. Jack and Mickey Doleman.

The visiting guest of the evening, Mr. J. W. Bartlett, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Maidwent, after touring Canada from coast to coast in the interest of several English newspapers, enjoyed the roast very much, although the first he has attended and managed to put away several cobs in veteran style. Mickey who posed as an old time camper, supplied the cooking utensil, consisting of a one quart kettle, there being eighteen in the party. They were grateful to Miss Marjorie McConkey for bringing along a wash-boiler. Mr. Jack Doleman supplied the illumination for the occasion, with a half candle power lantern. The only ruffle of the evening occurred when Maggie manipulated an over grown corn cob on Jiggs, in the absence of her ever ready rolling pin. Nick, who lost her spoon had occasion to call on Jack to help her out, otherwise a very enjoyable evening was spent.

PRINCE OF WALES MOVED BY POLICE

Constable Brogan Gains Notoriety By Ordering the Prince From the Race Track.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—(Canadian Press).—Entering Belmont Park unheralded on Saturday afternoon, and avoiding the crowd, the Prince of Wales succeeded so well in achieving the status of a private person as to get a rough order from a park policeman to move on. Arriving after the first race, the Prince crossed the tracks and took a position near the last jump of the steeplechase course. There was so little fuss in his vicinity that Policeman Brogan and another park policeman came running after him. "Hey you, there," shouted Brogan, "get out of that, get back out of that, you can't go there."

The Prince, taken aback, turned to Joseph E. Widener, who was near him. "Must I get out?" he asked. "I think they will let you stay here," said Mr. Widener Enlightenment came to Brogan and he backed off, muttering apologies.

The Prince was sleeping late because he had not returned until 4.30 o'clock on Friday morning. He rose later in the morning and had a swim at the Burden pool and then drove over to the Grace Polo Field, where he called for his ponies and rode about the field practicing alone.

Seven polo ponies belonging to the Prince will be offered at an auction sale on September 16. The sale will be held at Posts Polo Field at East Williston, L.I. The disposal of the ponies comes about, says the announcement of the sale, because the Prince "will be away from England next season and will therefore not be able to play polo."

This accords with the story printed last week to the effect that His Royal Highness was getting in all the polo possible here during his stay on Long Island, because he contemplated a long trip after his return to England.

BENEFIT FROM TANLAC LASTING, HE ASSERTS

Ontario Man Says It Put Him In Such Fine Condition 2 Years Ago, He Hasn't Needed Any Medicine Since.

"Well, sir, it looked like I was going to have to give up my job, but Tanlac kept me on the payroll, and of course I'm strong for it," is the striking statement of William Cranker, 84 Louis street, Brockville, Ont., who for 30 years past has been employed by the Canadian National Railroad.

"My stomach went wrong 10 years ago and then I gradually got out of fix in lots of ways. I couldn't eat or sleep to do any good for nervousness and indigestion and had got to where I simply had to drag myself to the railroad yards in the mornings.

"I could feel the good effects of my very first few doses of Tanlac clean to my finger-tips. This was two years ago and three bottles put me in such good shape that I have not had to spend a cent for medicine since. I eat and sleep fine, never miss a day's work any more and feel fine. You just can't beat Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitutes. Over 40 million bottles sold.

SHIPWRECKED MEN FOUND EXHAUSTED

SYDNEY, N.S., Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Five of the fifteen men missing from the three-masted schooner Raymond, which was torn from her moorings in St. Pierre Harbor during last Thursday's gale and wrecked on the rocks at Fortune Bay, Nfld., were picked up in the Gulf of St. Lawrence by C. G. Sarah Friday and landed at North Sydney. The men were practically exhausted and unable to stand on being taken aboard the rescuing craft. Hope is expressed for the safety of the remainder of the Raymond's crew. The rescued five stated that they saw other boats early on Friday morning and an unidentified sailing vessel, which came in stays several miles from Arras, and shortly after resumed her course, leads to the belief that she had hove to, to pick men up.

AMAZING DOUBLE LIFE OF WOMAN "RAFFLES" REVEALED

Accident Brought About Arrest of Remarkable Feminine Jekyll and Hyde — Sentenced to 14 Months in Jail

One of the most amazing characters in the criminal world of recent times, a young and attractive woman is now in Holloway Gaol, having been convicted for the first time.

Bertha Crouch, devoted wife, the mother of two nice little children, and now expecting an addition to her family, has proved herself to be a veritable feminine Jekyll and Hyde, with a very strong mixture of the "Raffles" type in real life.

Although married to a respectable, industrious man, and the proprietress of a small but prosperous confectionery and tobacco shop, she has for many months past been engaged in a series of crimes which mystified the police as to the identity of the culprit.

Eventually that ever-existent aid to the detection of the wrong-doer, accident, brought her to book, and she was revealed in her true colours.

The case was the more interesting perhaps, by reason of the suggestion put forward in explanation of her extraordinary conduct that, in some measure, it was due to the delicate state of her health. This, it was urged, brought about an absolutely irresistible impulse to annex other people's property.

Sir Montagu Shrap, K.C., chairman of the Middlesex Sessions, in passing sentence of 14 months' imprisonment in the second division, pointed out that for her third baby to born in prison would be no stigma upon the child—the stigma was upon the offending mother.

Her apprehension was brought about in a dramatic manner. Shortly before 11 o'clock on July 3 Mrs. Fosgagard, of the Ridgeway, Golders Green, returned to her house, and found to her astonishment, that she could not open the front door. She informed a neighbor, who immediately telephoned to the police, while other residents in the vicinity proceeded to surround the residence. In response to the message, Detective Sergeant Finnis, accompanied by uniformed officers, motored to the Ridgeway. They found that a window had been broken, the front door bolted, and the garden door opened, apparently to facilitate the escape of the intruder, if necessary. The neighbors' prompt action had prevented this, and the officers, entering, found Mrs. Crouch sitting silently on a chair in the drawing-room awaiting events. Near her was a suitcase she had found on the premises. In this was a lady's evening dress, some cloaks, a silver hand mirror, and other silverwars, value £100. In her possession were implements she had used in the course of her many burglaries. These consisted of two very common articles, an ordinary, everyday, much worn table knife, the notched edge of which showed to what illicit use it had been put in pushing back window catches, and a penny cast-iron "toffee" hammer. The latter was used to break the glass near window catches or locks in porchways. Mrs. Crouch was in no way disconcerned by her discovery. She wore a black figured costume, a black satin cloak, a brown hat trimmed with a bunch of cherries, a brown fox fur, black shoes, with red heels, and white stockings. Taken to Golders Green police station, many hours elapsed before she would say a word. Then, realizing that her husband would probably be making inquiries as to her absence from home, she disclosed her identity and her address. Proceeding to the little shop at Shepherd's Bush, the detectives discovered in a bedroom a large, plain black wooden box. On opening this they found an astonishing collection of ladies' apparel, lingerie of superior quality, and silver articles. More important still, they came across a bundle of pawntickets and contract notes. Some of the articles in the black box proved to be the proceeds of a burglary committed at the house of Miss Cynthia Horrocks, Finchley road, Golders Green, on January 30 last. She and her brother Cyril are well-known professional dancers, and the place was left unattended while they were fulfilling their engagements. Miss Horrocks lost jewelry, rings, brooches, etc., valué £500. Some of the pawntickets conected the woman with a series of thefts, all more or less in the same neighbrohood.

The King Takes the Wheel

The king, as everyone knows, is a keen yachtsman. During the handicap for yachts exceeding 100 tons at Cowes, His Majesty himself took the wheel during part of the race. This was the first occasion on which the King had undertaken this task. In the result Britannia finished third, her two opponents, Lulworth and White Heather, taking advantage of weather in which the royal yacht is not usually seen at her best. In other races, where the weather was more favorable, this thirty-year-old cutter has done remarkably well. The picture reproduced here shows the King (wearing his peakless yachting cap) at the wheel, with Major Philip Hunloke, the King's yachtmaster, keeping a look-out by his side.

DOUBLE SHOOTING TRAGEDY IN LONDON FLAT DUE TO PRESSURE OF DEBT

A too-expensive honeymoon attempted by a young Indian Army officer who had no means other than his pay was revealed at the inquest as the cause of the shooting tragedy in the Jermyn-street flat, where Captain Thomas John Roy Geddes and his wife Joan, were found dead.

The story of Captain Geddes' life and death was disclosed as that of a young man who obtained a war-time commission in the Indian Army, cut himself adrift from his mother, and ran himself heavily into debt soon after his marriage in India to the daughter of Sir Frank Sly, Governor of the Central Provinces, with whom he served as an aide-de-camp.

Beginning his honeymoon in January with a bank balance of £450 and his Army pay of £57 a month, Captain Geddes took his bride to England, installed her in an eight guineas a week Jermyn-street flat, and embarked with her on a round of social pleasure.

Seven months of matrimony left him penniless. On the eve of their departure for India his Bank account was overdrawn, he had given a cheque for £95 which he had no funds to meet, there were unpaid bills of some £400 due to hunting expenses, and a creditor in India was threatening legal proceedings in respect of a bill of £90 for motoring.

A letter written by him to his wife was read by the coroner as follows:—

I propose, Joan, after I have written this that I am going to kill myself. I love you more than ever I did. Please try not to think too badly of me.—Roy.

"There were maturing bills," said the coroner, summing up "and there were bills of some £400 due to be met for hunting expenses.

"I think it is quite plain that this young man, having suddenly discovered that his happiness had cost such a large sum, and that he was unable to discharge his debts, took the matter very seriously to heart, and his brain seemed to yield to a sudden impulse to end his troubles by taking his life.

STUNNED BY SORROW.

"There is evidence that, both physically and mentally, he was not quite sound and strong.

"A sensitive man, I should think, such as he was, would feel the position keenly. He had just married a wife, to whom he was devoted, whom he found himself unable to support.

"In a moment of utter despair, a kind of insanity, he has taken his own life.

"It is easy to see what happened. The wife discovered the husband dead, with a revolver by his side.

"While stunned by this overwhelming sorrow, in a state of frenzy, she also appears to have yielded to an almost insane impulse to join her husband by killing herself. It is a terrible tragedy."

The coroner recorded a verdict in each case of suicide while of unsound mind.

DILEMMA OF DOG FIGHTS ARISES

Bath Solons Fine Man for Not Stopping Combat

EPSOM DIFFERS

Butcher Penalised for Interferring in Canine Quarrel

Edward George Burgess, a bookmaker, was, at Bath, fined 40s. with costs for having permitted unnecessary suffering to be caused to a crossbred dog of which he was owner by unreasonably omitting to stop a dog fight.

P. C. Timbrell said that, looking through the window of the Popular Hotel, Monmouth street, he saw a big white dog on the floor covered with blood. A big brown Irish terrier had it by the throat, and seemed to be tearing it to pieces. The white dog was absolutely exhausted. Burgess made no effort to part them.

Mr. Toner, a veterinary surgeon, said the white dog was "fairly chewed up." After treating it for seven days he destroyed it. It had no idea of fighting.

Burgess, in evidence, said a man who tried to stop a fight like that was asking for trouble.

Mr. Hillier, for the defence, ridiculed the idea that a human being must stop a dog fight or be branded as a criminal.

Sir Harry Hatt (chairman) said the magistrates were of opinion that there was a very great distinction between this fight and an ordinary street dog fight.

TRIED TO STOP IT.

Stated to have given a dog 35 blows with a golf club, which broke in three pieces, to have kicked it, stamped on its stomach and jabbed it in the eye with a broken portion of the club so that the sight was destroyed, Albert George Finch, a butcher, of Heath View, Walton-on-the-Hill, was fined £5 and £2 2s. costs at Epsom.

The dog which was struck and a dog in charge of Finch started fighting on Walton Heath, and Finch was trying to stop the fight.

Finch admitted breaking the club over the dogs, but said it was an old and brittle one. He denied the kicking, stamping or jabbing.

HEIR TO PRINCESS NOW SOUGHT FOR

Next-of-Kin of Samuel Stoddart is Advertised For

BACK TO FAMILY

Lady Who Married Russian Prince Had Life Interest Only

Advertisement columns often contain the elements of romance, and in Unclaimed Money announcements this week there is an interesting story behind a seemingly prosaic quest for the next-of-kin of one Samuel Stoddart, who died as long ago as 1861. For generations the Stoddarts had been coach-builders in the City of London, and after Samuel Stoddart's death a life interest in his estate was inherited by his grand-daughter, Miss Frances Fleetwood Wilson, who afterwards became Princess Alexis Dolgorouki.

The Princess died childless in 1919, and her life interest in her grandfather's property goes back to the surviving branches of the Stoddart family. Some of them have been traced to Australia and New Zealand Princess Dolgorouki, who, a decade ago, played no inconsiderable part in the social life of London, was born in 1850 at Alpha House, Regent's Park.

The death of an only brother made her heiress to a large fortune amassed by her father, the late Mr. Fleetwood Wilson, who ran a line of ships trading between England and South America. On her father's decease she began giving in Rome those important entertainments for which her house in Portman-square afterwards became famous.

During the London season she gave luncheons and dinners almost daily; several concerts always took place during June and July, with all the operatic stars in the bill. The winter she usually spent on the Riviera, and it was while wintering at Cannes that she met Prince Alexis Dolgorouki, to whom she was married in July, 1898, at the Russian Chapel in Welbeck street, and at St. Margaret's, Westminster.

The Prince, who died in 1915, was Chamberlain to the late Tsar of Russia and had served in the Russo-Turkish war. He had not his wife's genius for entertainment, but he was often with her at Brasmar Castle, which she rented for 20 years, and his tall figure compared favorably with that of the Highlanders indigenous to the soil, who with their families were on the best of terms with the Princess.

Seventeen years ago Princess Alexis was seized with a desire to provide herself with a country cottage of her own creation, and the proposed cottage developed into a massive pile that now, under the name bf Nashdom, arrests attention in the neighborhood of Dropmore and Clivedon. Soon after the war began, Princess Alexis joined her husband in Paris, and after his death she returned to the Pyrenes. In later years she continued her hospitable traditions at Biarritz and Pau, and her death, in August, 1919, took place in a nursing home at Bayonne.

HUGE PROFITS ARE NOW BEING MADE IN TEA TRADE

Companies Owning Plantations Reap Rich Harvest These Days

PRICES RISING

Increased Demand Follows Prohibition in United States

When the tax on tea was reduced from eightpence to fourpence a pound in the Budget the public expected that they would pay fourpence less during the ensuing twelve months, says the London Express.

They have been disappointed. There was an immediate reduction of fourpence, but since then most retailers—although not all—have increased the price by two pence, and still higher prices are probable.

Naturally, the public ask whether any rise in the retail price is justified, and, if so, what is the cause. The reply of the trade is that the rise is inevitable, and that it is due to the large increase in the world's consumption of tea.

Britain is drinking much more tea. Although our imports rose by 60,000,000 pounds for the twelve months ending in June, the stocks at the end of that period were only about 11,000,000 pounds higher. Stocks, indeed, are extremely low, compared with the past.

Figures for the Indian exports for the twelve months ended March 1924 show that many other countries also largely increased their demands. Prohibition, perhaps, was responsible for an additional 3,000,000 pounds sent to North America. France and Turkey each took twice as much, and Germany's imports rose from 66,810 pounds to 369,807 pounds.

There were astonishing increases in the tea drinking of Italy, Japan, Persia, Arabia, the Straits Settlements, China, Hongkong, Africa, and Mauritius. The net result was that India's exports of tea rose from 265,468,342 to 306,074,665 pounds in one year.

PROPAGANDA.

Extensive "drink-more-tea" propaganda in the United States and elsewhere is calculated to add still further to the consumption.

New tea plantations come into bearing very slowly, and the tea planters have recently shown discrimination in plucking, choosing only the finer leaves. Expansion in the supply of tea to meet the enhanced demand has thus been restricted, and higher prices have followed rapidly. That these higher prices are expected to continue is shown by the fact that some companies have already been able to sell their entire output for as far ahead as 1927.

Enormous profits are being made by the tea plantations. Four leading companies of the James Finlay group each declared double dividends this year. Within three years the profits of these four companies have increased from four to six times the earlier figures.

Recent dividends of other companies, chosen at random, have been 30, 50, 40, 30, and 32 per cent. One company earned last year £50,000 more than its entire capital of £200,000. Throughout the list of companies dealt in on the London Stock Exchange bonuses, higher dividends, and leaping share quotations have been the general rule.

ONE MAN DOES NOT FORM A CROWD

Act 300 Years Old Fails Against Motorist in Wales

There is no immediate danger of a man being fined for "congregating outside his own parish on Sunday" for games or sport.

The difficulty in enforcing the law on this point appears to be that as one man does not form a crowd, one man cannot "congregate."

This subtle point was settled when, under a 300-year-old Act, George Bray Barnard, a well-known member of the Liverpool Motor Club, was at Pwlheli (North Wales) summoned for—

It was stated that he had organized a motor-car reliability test at Screw Hill on Sunday, July 13.

The defending solicitor, pleading not guilty, said the summons did not disclose an offence under the Act, because no one person could be accused of assembling.

The case was dismissed, the Bench remarking, however, that they did not encourage motor trials on Sundays.

Passchendaele Hero Is Central Figure In Brighton Affray

A violent scene in West street, Brighton, in which Michael O'Rourke, V.C., the Irish-Canadian war hero, figured, had a sequel in the Brighton Police Court.

O'Rourke, under the description of Charles Garrett, was charged with Samuel Hardy, a stoker, with being drunk and disorderly. He told the magistrates that O'Rourke was not his proper name. Both men pleaded guilty, and were remanded in custody.

O'Rourke was fighting with another man and, said Inspector Jupp, both he and Hardy were very disorderly and a squad of police had to be called to quell the disturbance.

It was stated that O'Rourke served in the Army from 1896 to 1922, and during the Great War won three decorations. He won his V.C. at Paschendaele. He received 26 wounds during the war, has a 100 per cent. disability pension and is now a bookmaker.

LORD DARNLEY HAS TO SELL ESTATE

The Earl of Darnley told a reporter that high taxation had caused him to give instructions for the sale of a part of his Cobham Hall estate, near Gravesend, Kent.

The area to be offered is 4,700 acres, including 15 farms, and Lord Darnley added that he was disposed to part with the whole estate except Cobham Hall and the 750 acres surrounding it.

RELICS OF CARAUSIUS EMPEROR OF BRITAIN

On the Roman site at Folkestone another bath has been discovered, 5ft. 8in. wide and about 12 ft. long. A coin picked up yesterday shows an Emperor's head, with the words "Crispus Nob. Caes," and the letters N. Lon., which shows that it was minted in London. A piece of Samian ware found has on it the figure of Europa riding on a bull. Mr. Winbolt suggests that probably the ruins are those of the palace of Carausius, the Roman usurper and Emperor of Britain, who originally was Admiral of the fleet organized to protect the Channel coast. He proclaimed himself Augustus, and was eventually murdered by one of his own officers. He minted money in great quantities.

STOKER OF FIRST ENGINE IS ALIVE

J. Cowley Drove Stephensons Locomotive Now at Wembley Exhibition

Sixty-eight years ago John Cowley, a retired licensed victualler, of Belmont-gardens, West Hartlepool, stoked Stephenson's "Locomotive No. 1," which is now on exhibition at Wembley. Recently Mr. Cowley, a white-wiskered man of 83, visited the Palace of Engineering, and was able to compare "The Flying Scotsman," the biggest railway engine in Europe, with the little engine which drew the first passenger train at 10 to 15 miles an hour. Stevenson's engine was built in 1825, and 31 years later, when it was lent to contractors by the Stockton and Darlington Railway for carrying stone from Lemside in the building of Durham North-road Station, Mr. Cowley, as a lad of 15, was its fireman.

As his eye roved over the shining array of brass and steel controls in the cab of "The Flying Scotsman," Mr. Cowley remarked, "This is a palace compared with my old engine, and I would just love to fire her. 'No. 1' down there used to belch black smoke at us, puff and shake from side to side dreadfully. Why, I could walk almost as fast as she ran. It used to take her two hours to draw two bogeys of stone a distance of five miles. The engine driver had to keep his hand on the levers all the time he was on the footplate, and I had to fire her continuously or she would stop. 'No. 1' puffed too much and was soon returned to Darlington, and the engine 'Washington' was used instead. I must say that in her coat of black paint 'No. 1' now looks quite respectable in contrast to the days when she made me sweat on the footplate."

Mr. Cowley came up to see his old engine at the invitation of the L.N.E.R. He has served as a guardian of the poor, and was 11 years in the 4th Durham Volunteers, retiring as corporal in 1887.

Will Dead Figure In Gunner's Memorial Hinder Recruiting?

The suggested figure of a dead soldier in the Royal Artillery Memorial, to be erected at Hyde Park Corner at a cost of £25,000, has inspired the committee with the fear that the memorial may discourage recruiting for the Army!

Mr. Jagger showed a model of the memorial, as he wishes it to be. He desires to place at one end a full-size representation of a dead Artilleryman, the face covered with a warrior's cloak. Three fine models of living soldiers, in full accoutrements, will appear at the sides of the memorial—that is decided. But a slain one—will not that be a spectacle calculated to deter the hesitant recruit?

The symbolism of the covered face makes a strong appeal, for looking at the monument, relatives of fallen soldiers may each feel that it commemorates their own. Thus the appeal of the memorial is made particular, instead of general.

HALF INCOME IN TAX AT £150,000

A man or woman whose earned income is, say, £150,000 a year was liable for the payment of £80,100 in income tax and super-tax (1922-23) if single and only £22 less (£80,078) if married, while the liability was £80,055 if entitled to the allowance for three children.

These facts are given in the sixty-sixth report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the year ended March 31, 1923.

CURIOUS THINGS IN PRAYER BOOK

Clergyman Starts Flock Hunting for Little Known Prayers

Many English churchgoers have started hunting through their prayer books to find some of the "highly curious things" which the Rev. E. J. G. Forse, vicar of St. Katherine's, Southbourne, tells them are hidden in its familiar pages. For example:

Where in the Book of Common Prayer is the prayer for cheaper groceries?

Where is the prayer for the conversion of Presbyterian ministers?

Where is the prayer for the Pope?

Where does it say that no man shall be ordained a priest of the Church of England who can not say Mass intelligibly in Latin?

Can you find the prayer for the Sultan of Turkey and all the Mohammedan rulers?

Can you find the prayer on behalf of King Alfonso of Spain and for the Kabaka of Uganda, and for the conversion of the Dalai Lama of Tibet?

Letters to the newspapers express incredulity but the Rev. Forse insists that they are all in the Prayer Book, "some of them in big type."

SCOTTISH M.P. IS ACCIDENT VICTIM

White motoring in his constituency, near Kinlochbervie, Sutherland, Sir Archibald Sinclair, M.P., accompanied by Lady Sinclair, met with a serious accident.

On a stretch of rough mountain road the car failed to take a sharp bend, and fell over a sheer drop of ten feet.

The occupants of the car were all thrown out. Lady Sinclair's arm was broken, and Sir Archibald was badly bruised and cut on the face.

Another car passed shortly afterwards and took Sir Archibald and Lady Sinclair to Dalnawillan Lodge, Caithness, where they had intended staying for the shooting season.

PAUPER'S FORTUNE.

A further search of the Blue Boy street cottage, in which Henry Marsh, 84, who died in Sheffield Workhouse Infirmary, had lived for 16 years, shows that instead of £200 he was possessed of £1,286 — £856 in a bank and the remainder in filthy, mildewed coins hidden in odd corners. The coins weighed over 3 cwt.

Marsh received an old-age pension and made small sums as a "knocker-up."

ADMIRAL BEATTY IS INVITED TO FIGHT

Inventor Suggests Arbitration by Fists to Settle Claim

Aged 73 and weighing 11st., a London resident writes to The Daily Mirror stating that he has addressed to Earl Beatty, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty—through the Duke of Leeds, commodore of the Royal Yacht Squadron—a challenge to meet him n the ring of the National Sporting Club and box the best of ten rounds with 6oz. gloves.

The correspondent claims to have supplied the Admiralty before and during the war with certain inventions for which he considers himself entitled to the sum of £100,000, and he suggests as conditions of the fight that if Lord Beatty should win he (the correspondent) would drop his claim; but if the First Sea Lord should lose, then the Admiralty should pay the £100,000 within a month.

The correspondent states that he has lodged a Petition of Right.

COMPOUND INTEREST GOOD INVESTMENT

The American lawyers who visited Brasenose College and settled a debt of 17s. 10d. incurred by Washington's great-great-grandfather when a member of that college in 1633, were well advised in insisting that all question of interest should be waived.

Money at compound interest—the legal interest that could have been charged in this case—doubles itself in 14.21 years. Had that interest been insisted on by the college authorities, it is very doubtful if the lawyers would have paid up, as it would have necessitated, at 5 per cent., the handing over of a cheque for £1,307,530.

PAGEANT CONDUCTOR IN STRETCHER CHAIR

Though in considerable pain after the operation he underwent at the Exhibition ambulance station the previous day, Frank Lascelles, seated on a stretcher chair, conducted the Pageant of Empire from his box at the Stadium last night.

His foot was enveloped in bandages, and throughout the performance of the Pageant he was obliged to remain in the stretcher chair. He was removed to his home later in the ambulance.

COCKTAIL OF SOUND NEW LONDON JAZZ

Hyperprism, Composer Calls Latest Noise-Producing Aggregation

The latest creation in London in the name of music has been christened "hyperprism" by its composer. The critics have called it a "cocktail of sound" and a "really glorious noise". The things some of the people have said will not bear repetition.

Three cornets, seven slide-trombones, five brass horns, one tam-tam, six pairs of cymbals, Chinese clap-claps; Spanish castanets as desired, a thing that imitates a lion's roar, a thunder-making machine, a miscellaneous bunch of rattles, sleigh-bells and sirens, one bagpipe, one ordinary blacksmith's anvil.

The effect is all that could be expected.

Edgar Varese, composer, not to say inventor of the "hyperprism" orchestra, explains that just as a prism can split a beam of light into a number of shades so can music be resolved into an infinite variety of component sounds. That's what he does, and that's why he calls it "hyperprism."

"Sound is the thing!" he said. "I am not hampered by tones and semitones. I must have quarter-tones, at least. Harmony and melody are of secondary importance. Rhythm is vital—and sound is supreme!"

LADY CHICHESTER'S GIFTS TO SERVANTS

Lady Adolphus Chichester, of Moyola Park, Castle Dawson, co. Londonderry, Ireland, and of 61 Bouverie-road West, Folkestone, Kent, who died on June 19 last, aged 75 years, widow of Lord Adolphus John Spencer Churchill Chichester (third son of the fourth Marquis of Donegall), left unsettled property in her own disposition of the gross value of £12,063. Testatrix left:

"To my husband, highly-trusted, and faithful friend and maid, Margaret Josephine Casey . . . . in remembrance of me . . . . and in most grateful remembrance of her devotion to me, my husband, and our children for many years," a life annuity of £300 free of taxes, three months board wages, the expenses of her return to her home in Ireland, a selection of carpets, clocks, plate, linen, glass, and china to the value of £200 her engagement ring in the form of a cross with "Spencer," inside the statuette of our Saviour, her gold carriage clock, all her wearing apparel, furs, and laces, numerous pictures, ornaments, and articles of furniture specially mentioned ,and the bulk of her household effects at Bouverie-road, Folkestone.

A life annuity of £90 free of taxes, three months board wages, and the expenses of her return to her home in Ireland to Mary McIntyre, of Ballaghy, Castle Dawson, now or late in her service, "and I desire to thank her for her most faithful service to me during many years."

EX-SOLDIER WINS £1,000 FOR SHILLING

Dame Fortune has smiled on Arthur Ridout, an ex-Serviceman, living in Stedham, near Midhurst, Sussex. He bought a shilling ticket in the British Legion sweepstake on the Goodwood Cup, and has won the first prize—£1,000. Ridout delivers newspapers in the morning and helps his father on a small farm afterwards.

PIRRIE ESTATE SOLD

The witley Park estate, Haselmere, which belonged to the late Viscount Pirrie, has been sold on behalf of the executors to Sir John Leigh, Bart., M.P. The estate extends to about 3,857 acres, and includes Witley Park, the manorial rights over parts of Witley and Thursley Commons, 1,800 acres of woods and plantations, several farms and cottages, and the greater part of Brook.

City Fathers Of Bath Have Problem In Forbidden Fruit

The City Fathers of Bath are puzzling how to grapple with a present-day aspect of a problem first staged in the Garden of Eden.

A year ago the corporation had apple trees planted in the streets with the double purpose of beautifying the city and strengthening the moral stamina of covetous boys.

Now, when the trees are heavy with fruit, an unexpected factor—the moral stamina of horses—has rudely upset the calculations of councillors.

While a drayman was delivering liquid refreshment to a customer, his horse made a delicious meal off the city apple trees, consuming not only the fruit, but entire branches.

Small boys of the city whose power of withstanding temptation was impugned are smiling broadly over the raids, which take place in broad daylight, and so can be brought home to the culprits.

People are asking, "Will there be a muzzling order for horses?"

SHINGLING HAIR POPULAR VOGUE

London Hair Experts Say Custom is Growing in Favor

Has shingling come to stay?

Experts declare that it has, and contend that in this method of dressing their hair women have found the ideal. The arguments in favor of shingling are:

It discloses the natural beauty of the head.

Helps the growth of the hair.

It suits women of all ages.

Arguments against it are:

It is not suitable for social functions.

Is too "mannish" for a woman.

"At least 75 per cent. of our women clients have had their hair shingled," a member of a firm of London hair experts said. "It is good for the scalp, for there is no need to use hairpins and combs, and most women have the hair which was cut off in the shingling made up for use on social occasions, as it can be attached quite naturally.

"Shingling suits almost everyone, including elderly women with white hair. Nothing worries a woman more than to find that her hair is coming out, and this is less noticeable after shingling. The vogue is having the effect of reducing the sale of combs and similar articles."

DREAM READERS FEAR COMPETITION

So many quacks, it is said, are rushing into the field of psycho-analysis that English experts in "dreams" and "complexes" are demanding that the bars be put up.

They want to make it impossible for anyone to practice psycho-analysis for professional gain who does not have a diploma in "psychological medicine" from an accredited school.

NEW LOCOMOTIVE SUCCEEDS ON TRIAL

Severe 100 Miles Test for Hydraulic Transmission Idea

LOW FUEL COST

Gears Obtained by Regulating Oil in Circulation

A novel type of locomotive, embodying an important British invention, has had a highly successful 100-miles trial trip on the London and North-Eastern Railway.

The engine which underwent this test was a 60 h.p. Diesel, fitted with the Lentz hydraulic transmission—named after the inventor, H. Lentz, a British-born subject.

Primarily this locomotive was designed for shunting and yard work, but in order to give it a thorough trial and to judge its value in passenger service, particularly branch line running, it had to take a train of three corridor coaches and a brake van on a return journey between Tottenham and Cambridge. The weight of the train, including the engine, was 113 tons.

The test was made as exacting as possible, but schedule times were more than maintained, the average speed being 13.55 miles an hour.

SUCCESS ON THE CONTINENT.

The engine is of the 0-4-0 type, and the power is transmitted through the new Lentz hydraulic (oil) transmission mechanism. Speeds forward and reverse are provided. The three gears are obtained by regulating the quantity of oil circulating in the gear.

On the down trip the maximum temperature of the oil was 108 deg. F., well within safe working limits. The engine required no attention, except occasional oiling.

The trial showed that hydraulic transmission as applied to locomotives is a practical proposition. Indeed, the trial marked a notable advance in railway traction, and triumph for the Lentz hydraulic transmission.

This mechanism has given such satisfaction on the Continent that engines up to 1,000 h.p. have been equipped, and orders are being placed for large numbers.

WOMAN AGED 102 SAW HIGHWAYMEN

Peeping out of a stage-coach and seeing the passengers robbed by highwaymen is one of the early recollections of Mrs. Janet Ann Newberry, who has just passed her 102nd birthday in the Whiston Infirmary, near Prescot, Lancs.

Mrs. Newberry, who married a soldier, served as a nurse in the Crimea under Florence Nightingale and afterwards in the Indian Mutiny and in the American Civil War. Her faculties are almost unimpaired.

Her husband, having been killed in the American war, Mrs. Newberry married again, and had fifteen children.

Mrs. Edward Stopford, who would have celebrated her 106th birthday on September 2, died at Falconers View, Daventry, Northamptonshire, yesterday. Mrs. Stopford was descended from French Huguenots. Her two sons predeceased her without issue, but her daughter, Lady Kennedy, has one daughter, Mrs. George Stopford, who has no children.

Ulster Mobilises Specials On Border Says Strabane Report

A report from Strabane, Ulster, states that the "B" Special Constabulary, with full equipment, were mobilised on the Tyrone and Donegal part of the border between Ulster and the Free State.

It is added that they lined the border between Strabane and Lifford last night, and that the action has caused a sensation in the neighborhood.

No reason for the mobilization has been announced.

Strabane and Lifford are little more than a mile apart, Strabane being in Tyrone, which belongs to Ulster, Lifford, in Donegal, which is part of the Free State.

The "B" Specials are an emergency force, armed with rifles. It seems probable, from the reports, that only a local section of the force has been mobilised.

The Ministry of Health has issued the final order amalgamating the two Derbyshire Spas, the Matlocks. The unity comes into force on Oct. 1.

Ald. Albert Porter, ex-Mayor of Portsmouth, had his house broken into, and jewellery worth £700 taken while he was away at Southsea Castle fete.

Mr. Lloyd George, who is to address a Liberal meeting at Portsmouth on Sept. 27, will receive the freedom of the borough on the same day.

TOWN-CRIER WILL DEFEND HIS TITLE

Quaint Contest Not Held Since 1914 — Welsh Champion

He is W. Powell, of Panrhiwceiwales, who won the distinction at a contest held in Savernake Forest, near Marlborough, Wiltshre, on that never-to-be-forgotten Bank Holiday in August, 1914.

Mr. Powell says that, although he is now not in the best of health, he is willing to defend his title against any town-crier in Great Britain.

Such contests are a picturesque affair. Each competitor, in uniform, advances in turn, rings his bell and proceeds to recite the test piece, which, in 1914, was the following:

OYEZ! OYEZ! OYEZ! LOST

in admiration! The thousands here assembled unite in praise of the glories of Savernake Forest, the grandeur of the rolling downs, and the beauty of the fine old town of Marlborough; and wish success to this great festival of sport and pageantry.

The forthcoming competition (the details of which are not yet arranged) will be the first since 1914.

Family Rivalry Sent Auction Bid From £3 To £452,000

The bidding for a portrait at an auction of household furniture in the Suffolk seaside town of Aldeburgh started at £3 and did not stop until £452,000 had been mentioned. The picture was described as a portrait of "Maurice of Nassau," by Mirvelt.

Those present at the sale were amazed when they heard two people bidding for family reasons against each other into hundreds of thousands.

The auctioneer, who was selling the picture by the instructions of the executors of the late Miss Margaret Brandeth, of Aldeburgh, told a Daily Mail reporter that the result of the bidding will not mean that a sale has been effected. "It was all a mistake, of course," he said, "and the whole matter will be straightened out. We shall not draw a commission according to the amount bid."

MAYOR TURNER C. N. E. GUEST

Luncheon With Directors — Conveyed Congratulations of Peterborough.

ALWAYS GROWING.

His Worship Mayor Turner was a guest on Friday of the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition at luncheon in the Administration Building, when he conveyed the felicitations of Peterborough on the success of this year's exhibition.

Among the speakers, President Miller, of th Exhibition Board, remarked on the credit due Sir. Alex. Cregg for his work in removing the embargo from Alberta cattle.

Mayor Turner ,who was accompanied by Mrs. Turner, remarked that the Toronto Exhibition is only in its infancy ,as yet, magnificent as it may appear to present-day visitors.

He pointed to the exhibits of Peterborough industries, including Brinton carpets, Peterborough canoes, Patte & Wolff foxes, and J. J. Turner & Sons' tents, as evidence of the activity of this district, and spoke optimistically of the growth of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which may develop into as important a function as the Canadian National Exhibition.

Campbellford There.

One of the most interesting corners in the entire exhibition was the Ontario home in the Women's Building, presided over on Friday b Mrs. Macoun of Campbellford.

The exhibit showed the furnishing of four rooms, done at a cost of $487. The well appointed kitchen cost $207, the dining-room $120, the bedroom $30, and the sitting-room $130. This included rugs, curtains, and all furnishings, and the material was of good quality. Probably more interest was shown in this corner than in any other single exhibit in the women's building.

BRITAIN DEMANDS CANADIAN CHEESE

Exhibits at Wembley Exhibition Did Wonders For Canadian Industries.

LONDON, Sept. 8. — Canadian Cheese has found a splendid market directly through the exhibition one of the Canadian Trade commissioners at Wembley announced to-day. Eight thousands pounds of cheese per week is used in the grounds by the caterers and they have also introduced it in all their London cafes. A Canadian dry milk dealer has just sold his output for the next five years to a British firm, an output valued at $800,000. Our fruit display has brought European orders for more than 1,000,000 boxes.

European orders have come pouring in and the firm has decided to spend $100,000 on the opening of a permanent establishment in London.

I can say that sixty per cent. of the exhibitors here, are delighted that they came to Wembley. Indirectly business amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars has been stimulated and new channels of commerce opened. The Canadian Pacific report that the flow of visitors to their pavilion is as great as ever.

FLAGS FOR FAIR.

Quaker Oats Company Will Close Down One Afternoon of Fair.

The Quaker Oats Company is cooperating in a whole-hearted manner in efforts to make this year's Peterboro Industrial Exhibition a real success, by announcing that they will close their plant at noon on Thursday, to allow their employees to attend the Fair. It is hoped that other commercial establishments may follow this excellent example, and that the citizens generally and places of business will respond to the request to decorate during the Fair days.

Pedestrians may enter by either the Lock or George street gates, but only the Lock street gates may be used for vehicles of any description. Any variety of wheeled conveyance must enter by this gate, where a traffic officer will direct the owners as to parking. No cars will be allowed inside the race-track ring.

The Exhibition Board have spent a great deal of money to put the grounds in shape for baseball and other sports, and for that reason a change in the parking arrangements will have to be made this year. All cars will park on the east side of the grounds, and entrance will be through the Lock street gate only. Cars will be under police supervision.

GRAIN MOVEMENT.

LINDSAY, Sept. 8—Railroad men on both the C.N.R. and C.P.R. are looking forward to brisk movements of Western grain from Port McNicholl and Midland in the course of a short time. The past summer has been the dullest in the history of both lines in this district so far as grain and freight movement are concerned, and now that reports are in that grain is arriving at the head of the lakes, the employees anticipate a busy fall.

Both lines are ready with rolling stock to handle the grain, and it is anticipated that there will be quite a movement until navigation closes on the lakes.

The C.N.R. has, during the past season, been improving conditions on the Missing Link line between Lindsay and Peterboro. A new bridge has been built over the big gully between Omemee and Best's Station and other improvements made along the line.

FELL UNDER TRAIN.

Montreal Man Slipped While Boarding Eastbound Train at Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Albert Proul of Montreal, had his life foot taken off at the ankle when he fell beneath the wheels of a train at the eastern yards here of the Canadian National Railway early to-day. With Henry Drow of Montreal, he was attempting to board an eastbound freight. Drow when he saw his chum hurt jumped off and stayed with him. C.N.R. Special Constable Harris rendered first aid and had Proul taken to the hospital and then arrested Drow on a charge of vagrancy.

SEND RESOLUTION HOWARD FERGUSON

Local Branch O. M. L. Will Not Support Gasoline Tax Unless Auto Fees Are Lowered.

At a meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Branch of the Ontario Motor League to-day a resolution was passed in reference to the proposed gasoline tax by the Ontario Government which has been forwarded to the Honourable Howard Ferguson and the Minister of Highways.

According to the resolution, the local branch express approval of the proposal, which, it is stated, they will support, provided the Government lowers the license fees, now payable by car owners.

The tax, it is stated, will compensate for the decrease in automobile fees.

The local branch feel that the Ontario motorist is sufficiently burdened, and the new arrangement will shift to the tourist part of the taxes now gleaned from the Ontario motorist, as the tax on gasoline will affect him.

FAIR WEEK MEANS END YEAR'S WORK

Directors Are Working the Year Around To Make Success Certain.

At midnight last night trucks and waggons were busy unloading the trade implements of the amusement company that will entertain exhibition visitors this week, and all day to-day the work of building went on at the grounds. This has been a disastrous seasons for amusement aggregations, the bad weather keeping away the crowds on which the shows thrive. This particular show, however, probably because of its great size, has weathered the storm and is here in full force to add to the enjoyment of fair week in Peterborough.

People get so accustomed to hearing "bigger and better than ever" applied to the exhibition and the midway that they fail to appreciate the fact that every year in Peterborough sees a bigger and better collection of amusements and exhibits. No sooner is one year's exhibition closed than the energetic workers are busy collecting their forces and seeking new attractions for the next year. Webber Turner, in charge of amusements, is one of the busiest men on the directorate, and acquits himself with honor every season. President Denne is always on the lookout for larger buildings as the increasing number of exhibitors makes them necessary. The dircetors are working in various ways for the good of the big show that opens no Wednesday.

The addition to the grand stand this year will enable many more persons to see the vaudeville performance than has been possible in other years, and the new barn will attract breeders of high class livestock who have been afraid to leave their cattle out in the open.

The deal has been in progress for a considerable time, and in speaking of its consummation W. H. D. Gladstone, of Bristol, England, said they had taken a step which would greatly increase their trade.

"It is our aim not only to share in Canada's future ,but to aid and help its realization in every way. We feel that an era of great prosperity has begun and look forward to good times in Canada. We regard the present deal as the first link in a chain of such connections."

LINDSAY ASSIZES START SEPT. 29

Two Murder Trials Are on the Docket.

LINDSAY, Sept. 8. —(Special).—Court officials have served the members of the Grand Jury with their notices, relative to the session of the Fall Assizes to be held in Lindsay on Sept. 29. Two murder trials are on the docket for the Assizes, at which Justice Logie, of Kingston, will preside. Fred McGaughey will stand his trial for the murder of Beatrice Fee of Omemee, in Ops township, two months ago. The accused, who has been confined in the county jail, is said to be in good health, but has had little conversation with anyone save his solicitor, Mr. L. Frost.

Robert Bacon, the Haliburton County man, who is serving a term in Kingston Penitentiary for incest will be brought back from that institution to answer to the charge of murder, the victim being a child of his daughter. The circumstances surrounding this case are of a revolting nature Mr. L. Frost will defend the accused.

ON WAY TO N.Y.

BOSTON, Sept. 8. — (Canadian Press).—United States world fliers hopped off from here for New York at noon Eastern daylight saving time to-day.

Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry in Rex Ingram's "The Arab," at the Capitol, to-day and Tuesday.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

FAMOUS BLONDE ALICE TERRY, HAS RED BROWN HAIR.

Shows Her Bobbed Tresses for the First Time in "The Arab."

SHE IS PRETTIER THAN EVER.

Since Alice Terry first flashed into fame as the heroine of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," she has been identified in the minds of her admirers as one of the lovliest blondes who ever appeared on the screen.

And now comes a surprise.

When Rex Ingram's new Metro picture, "The Arab," is seen at the Capitol Theatre To-day and Tuesday Miss Terry will be revealed as a dark-haired beauty. And the hair is her own!

It is disillusioning to think that Miss Terry was never a blonde, really, but the truth will out, and "The Arab" gives truth its opportunity.

Hair is Reddish-Brown.

Miss Terry's hair is, in fact, reddish brown, a glorious auburn of fiery tints, but on the screen, it shows dark,

And, instead of being piled high in golden waves, as picture-goers remember it in "Scaramouche," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and other Ingram successes, it is bobbed!

It is because her hair was bobbed that Miss Terry wore a wig in her other pictures, which emphasized romantic rather than modern styles. The blonde wig was selected to harmonize with the star's fair skin and violet eyes.

It was Mr. Ingram who determined that the wig should be abandoned for the production of "The Arab." Like all those who know her, the producer felt that she was much more beautiful in her own natural color.

AT THE GRAND.

"SO THIS IS LONDON."

So this is London opens at the GRAND to-night for a three day engagement, with matinee Wednesday This is the play that ran for more than a year at the Hudson, New York, another year at the Prince of Wales Theatre, London, and is acknowledged to be Cohan's greatest comedy hit of all time.

There are more wholesome laughs in this highly amusing hit which throws brickbats and bouquets at the national characteristics, than there is in a circus full of clowns. Whether the spectator is the son or daughter of the revolution, or whether he or she is a direct descendent of Sir Somebody or other, K. C. B., he or she will laugh right out loud when they see themselves as others think they are.

Americans and British alike are certain to enjoy a good laugh, each at the expense of the other. In fact, no matter what the nationality of the spectator is, he's going to enjoy the proceedings hugely. With just enough romance to be romantic and just enough drama to be dramatic the play is, in truth, a clever comedy. A clever comedy of bad manners. The cleverest comedy Cohan ever produced.

AT THE ROYAL.

AT THE ROYAL. VIOLA DANA GIVES RULES FOR TRUE MARITAL BLISS.

Metro Star, following work in "Don't Doubt Your Husband," has advice for Couples based on Problem Raised by Story of Picture.

(By Rose Adleman.)

Even motion picture stars are not immune to environment, Viola Dana the vivacious little Metro star, proves the truth of this statement.

Now that she's been the heroine of her latest comedy, "Don't Doubt your Husband," she's ready to hand out advice to suspicious wives with gusto. She's almost as caustic in her advice as the author of "Sayings of Mrs. Solomon," and has compiled a list of rather snappy sayings apropos of doubting eyes and doubted husbands that is worthy of quoting:

"All quarrels can be avoided if your husband will do just as YOU say."

"Jeaousy and doubt don't get you anywhere — but they keep you going."

"What you can't hear hubby say, or see him do—you can IMAGine!"

"A man would never have time for anything else if he lived up to a jealous wife's idea of him."

"Never apologize to the woman who is trying ot break up your home —your husband will do it for you."

But Miss Dana in her friendly, girlish manner can be equally as serious as she is flippant about the subject of matrimony.

"A suspicious woman will always find something to be worrying about and to be jealous of. Women who trust their husbands usually instill in them a feeling of self respect which they do not care to lose. Many men are so harrassed by suspicious wives that they are driven to many things they themselves would never have thought of—until their wives put the idea into their heads. Mutual trust and kindness are the only means of avoiding unhappiness in married life, and I think that if nothing else will convince a suspicious wife, this picture will. Of course one naturally thinks about things of this nature but it's actually living the part that makes you realize how serious a drawback to happiness suspicion can be."

Viola's pert little face, with its devilish blue eyes and roguish smile are familiar to all picture goers, and her saucy roles and ability as a comedienne are a treat whenever shown on the screen. But there's something of sound common sense in her face that lets you know she'd never be so foolish as to make herself unhappy about idle suspicions and jealousies, and she frankly admited that this was the case.

"Everywhere you go you hear people saying that 'Life is short and you must make the most of it.' Yet these very same people are the ones who often waste it in foolish worry and suspicion. Have faith in people if you want to be happy—you can't expect that all of us will have the same standards yet you can reasonably expect that others are as good as you are. 'Don't Doubt Your Husband' is a good title for the movies—and 'Don't Doubt People in General' is a good motto to live up to!"

"FAST STEPPERS" AGAIN AT THE ROYAL.

The half hour features with Billy Sullivan under the title "Fast Steppers," are making a name for themselves at the Royal, where they are shown every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The stories were well received in the Red Book Magazine, and make ideal screen entertainment. "The Hot Dog Special" is the title of the showing to-day.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8. — An explosion which killed two men, hurling one of them high into the air ocurred on barge No. 25 of the Texas Company, moored to a pier at the foot of First street, Bayonne, N. Y.

TROTSKY'S AID ENDS LIFE.

Suicide of Michael Glassman Shocks Moscow Communists.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—(Associated Press.)— Russian Communist circles was shocked Saturday when informed of the death by suicide of Michael Glassman, one of the most valued aids of Leon Trotsky. He was the secretary and confidant of the Soviet War Minister for six years. No motive was assigned by the authorities for the act, which was committed during Trotsky's absence in the coutry.

Glassman, who was only 27 years old and very talented, had an impressive military funeral this afternoon. The long cortege which passed Lenin's tomb included the entire membership of the War Council and many Cabinet members, who walked to the cemetery.

SERTH ENQUIRY WAS POSTPONED UNTIL TUESDAY

Kingston Furnish $50 Bond For His Appearance — Overslept on Boat.

BEGINS PLAYOFFS

Oshawa Goes to Belleville on Wednesday for First Game.

(Special to the Examiner)

OSHAWA, Sept. 8.—The sub-committee of the Central Ontario Baseball League, after morning and afternoon sessions here Saturday to hear the Kington protest against the residence qualifications of Pitcher Charles Serth of Peterboro, considered they did not have sufficient evidence to render a verdict.

Several telegrams from the Limestone City were received as to the non-appearance of Serth at the meeting, one of which was signed by B. Noble Steacy, President of the Kingston Club, dated September 6th, which read as follows: "If evidence already produced is insufficient for Protest Committee, we demand further adjournment until Ottawa produces Serth's sworn statement of entry into Canada in April. Serth over-slept on boat and taken to Clayton, otherwise, would have appeared before committee today."

Decide Tuesday.

A decision was left over till Tuesday morning, September 9th. W. L. Kennedy, who represented Kingston, furnished a fifty dollar bond that Serth would appear for examination before the sub-committee as to his arrival in Peterboro. In case Serth appears and it is proved he is not eligible under the residence rule the bond given Mr. Kennedy will be returned and Peterboro will be eliminated from further participation in league play offs.

Games Ordered.

In order to be ready for the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association play-offs the sub-committee ordered Oshawa to play in Belleville on Wednesday afternoon, September 11th, with the return game in Oshawa on Saturday afternoon, September 13th and a third game if necessary to be played in Cobourg on the Monday or Tuesday following.

Providing the Kingston protest against Peterboro is not sustained, the winner of the Belleville-Oshawa series will play a sudden death game with Peterboro in Cobourg on Wednesday or Thursday, September 17th or 18th and the winner of these games will likely be ordered to meet Orillia, providing the Simcoe Lake town wins the Northern play-off with Coppercliff, but in case the mining town wins the Central Ontario winner will meet the champions of the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association, which is likely to be the Oslers of Hampden Park League as in the first game of the T.A.B.A. on Saturday they won from the Strollers, Eastern Toronto champions, at Scarboro Beach Grounds, 5-4, the return game to be played at Hampden Park on Saturday next.

Thistles and Woolens To Play For Second Place.

On Tuesday evening at 5.45 p.m. the softball fans will have the opportunity of seeing the first game of the play-off for the Bradburn shield, emblematic of the second place in the League standing. Canadian Generals finished on top in both sections of the schedule and win the Bond Cup without a play-off. In the first section Thistles finished in second place, while Canadian Woollens were the runners-up in the second half. All the games between these two teams have been real battles, and Tuesday's game should be no exception to the rule. This game will start sharp at 5.45 p.m., and a good crowd should be on hand to root for their favorites.

FIRPO POSTED BAIL.

Will Appear Sept. 15 On Immigration Charge.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—The arrest of Luis Angel Firpo on a warrant from Washington, charging him with violating the immigration law, his subsequent admission to bail, and postponement of the hearing in the case until four days after his scheduled meeting with Harry Wills, September 11, were the outstanding developments over the week end in the deportation proceedings instituted by Canon William Sheafe Chase, of Brooklyn.

There was a broad grin on the Argentine's face as he stepped off the Ellis Island ferry Saturday, free again, after his attorney, Hymen Bushel, had deposited $1,000 in liberty bonds with the immigration officials. Firpo re-asserted his innocence of the two charges brought against him and said he was more worried over protecting the name of the woman in the case than he is over his own predicament.

LAKEVIEWS HIT THREE PITCHERS FOR FIRST WIN

Circle Six of Kingston Badly Mauled By Local Juniors.

SCORE WAS 11 TO 6

Cold Weather Handicapped Whitehouse But He Lead His Team at Bat.

With a cool west breeze blowing and the weather more suitable for rugby the Lakeviews and Circle Six team of Kingston battled it out at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon in the third round of the O.B.A.A. play offs for the championship of Eastern Ontario, the Lakeviews winning the game by the score of 11 to 6. In Kingston last Wednesday the local boys held the Circle Six to a tie game so this gives Peterboro a nice start in the series.

Although it was too cold for good ball the two teams put on a scrappy game and although it was rather slow at times, the many long hits by both sides helped to make the game interesting.

Break in Fifth.

For the first four innings the game was fast and close, but when the Lakeviews went to bat in the fifth and chased four runs across the plate, to make the score 8 to 5 things began to look a little dull for Kingston, and when the young Petes came back in the sixth and collected three more tallies the game was shot as far as Kingston was concerned.

The Petes did no more scoring but Kingston managed to scrape through with one in the eighth, to make their total 6 to Peterboro's 11.

Of the three pitchers Kingston sent out to hold the Petes, the last got along the best, although he is ranked as a third stringer. The Lakeviews managed to score four runs off Smith in the first three innings but did not collect a hit. They got to him in the fourth for two more runs and three hits and he was dericked in the fifth after the first two men up had touched him for a double and a single respectively. He was replaced by Clarke who held the Petes in Kingston last Wednesday to eight hits, but he was clouted harder than Smith and in the 1 and 2-3 innings he pitched the Lakeviews got seven hits and six runs off him. Blomely a left-hander was then rushed to the mound in an attempt to pull the game out of the fire but although he held the Petes to two hits, one in the seventh and one in the eighth his team-mates failed to chalk up any runs.

Whitehouse Fanned Seven.

Whitehouse pitched steady ball but was not up to form, due to the cold day. He was touched for thirteen hits while he fanned seven batsmen. His team-mates gave him good support, all the local boys turning in a nice game. Cameron at short was the fielding star of the Lakeviews. He accepted eight chances and had only one error. Whitehouse led the Lakeviews at bat when he had four hits in five times at bat. Whitlow was a close second with three hits while Ash had a double and a single, McIntyre a double and LeBarr a double.

Tetro for Kingston batted 1000 when he had four hits in four times up. Buck and Smith each got two safeties. Lovett at short stop was the outstanding player on the Kingston roster while Tetro caught a very good game.

PROPOSAL THAT C.G.E. GIRLS MEET THE TORONTO WINNERS IN SOFTBALL SERIES

(From Toronto Sunday World.)

From Peterborough comes a discreet but none the less intrepid challenge to Toronto girl softballers.

During the week, the C.G.E. girls won the city softball championship, and an ardent admirer in Peterborough has gone so far as to state publicly that they have nothing to fear from the fastest girls' team in Toronto. Beyond question this is an expression of local sentiment. The girls won 20 out of 21 games in the schedule, and win the last game by 27 to 0.

By all means let a match be arranged between the Peterborough champions and some good local team. And let none of the Toronto crowd sneer. If the fag end of this summer's fortball season has taught only one lesson to devotees of the sport, that one lesson is this "You never can tell!"

Of course, that makes everybody think of the feat of the Hope girls' team, conquerors of the redoubtable Hinde and Dauch girls. There have been other examples. The Greensville team made the Toronto ladies step lively in the Dundas tournament. The Old Orchard girls have come along wonderfully since the beginning of the season.

Softball has made such tremendous strides that its heroines cannot possibly remain "stars" any more than the movie heroines of the early days if the pictures kept their position against the rising tide of new faces. The tide of softball is rising steadily, and it is bringing new girls and new teams to the fore. It is impossible indifferent game against a "scrub" for even a champion team ti play an outfit these days, because the girls from the stoney country may jump into the game and walk away with it.

Softball is anybody's game to-day, and next spring will see some surprising changes. The team that is at the bottom of the pile one minute may snatch the crown the next.

So, if the Peterborough outfit want any Toronto competition then by all means let them have it. All they will have to do will be to write to a Toronto team, or, if they don't know how to reach a Toronto team, then to a Toronto newspaper; and if their challenge is received before the snow flies they'll get their game all right. And the joke is, they will have a mighty good chance of winning it!

NORTH DUMMER TIED PACKERS

JAMES PROMINENT

The C.P.C. Juniors entertained North Dummer in League game at King Edward Park on Saturday after noon and an excellent game was witnessed which resulted in a draw of 2 goals each, James again doing all the scoring.

North Dummer won the toss and had the advantage of a strong wind James and Mitchell made at once for the Township goal, Bryan bringing off a great save in the first minute. G. Little sent Rufus Payne away and from his centre W. Bell nearly beat Bradley. The Juniors were having the best of the Arguments. James and Mitchell were very prominent and by some nice cimbinations James beat Bryan by a beautiful shot.

From the centre kick W. Bell made a run and sent out to Payne who tested Bradley with a great drive Bradley falling full length to save. The Township men were doing their level best to get on equal terms. Their efforts were rewarded by R. Payne who sent in a cross shot which W. Bell met and placed out of the reach of Bradley. Half time arrived with the score standing 1-1.

Second Half

With the wind in their favour the Packers were soon near the Township goal. M. Millan who was now among the forwards played much better than at half back. Garveth missed by inches Strudley sent James and Mitchell away A. Jory headed out of danger when Bryan was out of goal.

H. Jay gave a corner. This was taken by Mitchell,; who sent the ball well onto goal. James got his head to the sphere and directed it past Bryan. This infused new life in the Township men. Payne, who played a good game made one of his characteristic runs and sent in the best shot of the day and made the game even. Both teams were now in earnest and some nice football was seen; the work of James and Mitchell was a treat and backed by a fine trio of half backs was a source of danger to the Township men. The Brothers Jory were in great form. W. Bell tried to break away. Halliday relieved with a huge kick.

Both goals had narrow escapes. There was however no further scoring and one of the best games of the season ended in a draw of 2 goals each after the game the Township men were entertained to supper by the Packers.

TWO PETERBORO TEAMS DEFEATED IN QUEEN CITY

Kiwanis Lost to McCormicks in Midget Series By 11 to 1.

HITS WERE FEW

Sacred Heart Midgets Blanked 6-0 By Humewood of Toronto.

Saturday afternoon, at Willowvale Park, two Toronto teams, playing on their home lot, won both games in the first round of the O.A.B.A. junior league play-offs from Peterborough. In the first game, the bantam group, the McCormicks beat Peterboro's Kiwanis youngsters 11 to 1, and Humewoods turned over a 6 to 0 victory on the Sacred Heart in the Midget series.

The brand of ball shown in both games was exceptionally good. Many of the youngsters handled themselves like big leaguers. Play-off games are nothing new to either of the Toronto teams, as they had to meet and dispose of the winners of the three other districts in their series before they met the young Petes. The Peterborough youngsters on the other hand, were certainly not playing under usual conditions and showed it in nervousness, which caused some bad plays in throwing the ball to the bases. The ground at Willowvale Park is as solid as cement and a hard hit ball takes mean bounces and dips. The diamond around home plate is closely caged even to roofing, which hampers the movement of any catcher who is in the practice of making a try for foul flies. A heavy wind sent up clouds of dust which went whirling across the diamond toward the batter during the greater period of both games.

First Game.

The first game, in spite of the score, was no walk away, but was really very close until the seventh. Up until then it was anyone's ball game.

McCormicks got a lucky run in the first innings owing solely to the nervousness of the visiting youngsters. Demers walked and went around to third when the Kiwanis juggled the ball around the bases and then came in on an error. The Kiwania evened in the second when Hope drew a walk, stole second and came in on Cripps' hard clout through second. The teams then battled on with most of the batters never reaching first base, retiring hurriedly on strikes. In the sixth another walk and a two-base drive gave the McCormicks the lead of one run. In the seventh the break came and the young Petes blew. Four runs were chased across when easy drives went for hits. In the final frame the score jumped up five more and the total of eleven was reached.

"Dimp" Trebilcock, the Kiwanis pitcher, deserved a better score. He twirled splendid ball in spite of the poor support and handled himself coolly throughout. Trebilcock struck out fifteen and allowed nine hits.

"Sten" Glatt the Tooronto hurler, received better support and therefore could take more chances. He retired nineteen on strikes and only two drives went for hits.

When these two pitchers hook up here next Saturday the fans should certainly have something interesting to watch, for the local kids will certainly show a reversal of form on the home green.

Second Game.

All credit for the Humewood victory of 5 to 0 goes to Duff, the pitcher. Duff has speed to burn, and the manner in which he whiffed the Sacred Heart batters grew monotonous. He struck out nineteen. He is no flash in the pan either, for last Saturday he struck twenty-four batters, and the week before twenty. He allowed but one hit, and this went to "Casey" Masterson.

The only way the Sacred Heart could cope with Duff's speed was to hold their bats in the path of the ball. This they did in the last few innings but most of these hits rolled out to the infielders. However, by next Saturday, when Humewoods come here, Bill Prindible's players will have more confidence in themselves ,and should have more success with Duff, for after all, from appearances, the whole Humewood team is nothing but Duff.

"Casey" Masterson pitched ball that would win any ordinary game. He struck out twelve, burning them across with speed that nearly equalled that of Duff. Even the older Sacred Heart boys showed their nervourness due to their inexperience in playing on a strange diamond. For all these players it was their first game out of Peterborough. They, too, threw the ball around too much.

FEARS CHAMPION SPRINTER THROUGH

Cambridge Star Doubts He Will Ever Run Again.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(Associated Press).—Harold Abrahams, sensational Cambridge University sprinter who won the Olympic 100-metre championship, defeating four of the fastest American speed stars, has retired temporarily from competition to take a rest and resume his studies for the bar.

Shortly after the Olympics, Abrahams was reported to have broken down from the effects of his exertions at Colombes, but he explained that he had had an overdose of competition and needed time to recuperate. While he is studying he does not intend to don his spiked shoes, as he believes his profession and athletics will not mix successfully.

"Nothing below first-class form is good enough for me," Abrahams was quoted as saying, "so it is better to leave the track alone altogether. The odds are I shall not run again, but I expect to try to get to Amsterdam as a 'rubber.'"

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

THISTLES GAINED PAIR OF POINTS FROM WOOLENS

Spectators Witnessed an Excellent Brand of Soccer Last Saturday.

WOOLLENS UNSETTLED

Young's Beautiful Goal Was Applauded—Blowers Unlucky.

The Thistles won on Saturday by two goals to nothing against the Canadian Woollens in one of the best soccer games seen in years in this district. Spectators were well rewarded by their attendance in witnessing such excellent tactics upon the field of play by the two full elevens. All the old time craftiness from the clean tackle and off-sides playing that was demonstrated by the full backs of each team. This was backed up by refereeing that could not be improved upon and Referee Clarke's decisions were never questioned during the full 90 minutes at King Edward Park.

Opening Very Fast.

The Woollens won the toss and Capt. Chambers decided to take advantage of the strong wind in his favour.

Richmond set the ball rolling to Hillman, who cleared. Mitchell transferred the play to the other end, where Rae held the attack at a safe ditsance.

Ross shot the ball down the right wing to Young. Blowers intercepted at the critical moment, passed to the Woollens' centre forward, but Jackson's head robbed him. Blowers caught on again to test Curtis from 20 yards range. Laidlaw appeared to complete the Jags' eleven men and was no sooner present than he was placing the ball into the goal mouth, then tested Hillman with drives from the touch-line.

Jackson was Brilliant.

The Plenty Cup captain, Jackson, was always busy in frustrating the Woollens' attack. It was evident that Mitchell was the dangerous man because the Thistle centre-half hung on to him like a leach, and never allowed him any latitude. This, no doubt, told upon the Woollens' forwards who never seemed to get settle down to the game. He was backed up by Burgess at left half and Ross at right, who never seemed to weaken. Nevertheless Blowers was right there with his favorite shots, which Curtis handled with accuracy.

Richmond Scored from Penalty.

The ball was travelling in mid-air, Richmond tried to gain hold, but but Chambers met it with his left foot, and unfortunately hit his hand in transit that brought the Jags a penalty kick which Richmond placed past Hillman with a low ground shot for the opening goal. This sudden set-back made the play very uninteresting thereafter, as the Woollens whole team added pressure that could not penetrate the solid defense of their opponents. The spectators were treated to an excellent exhibition of soccer by the 22 players at this period, as the ball travelled from end to end in quick fashion. Burgess tried "a la Blowers'" shot, which Hillman found had a sting behind it. Likewise, the Woollens' left half was conspicuous against the Thistle goal keeper. A rocket drive left his favorite left foot at a fast pace but Rae's cranium popped up at the vacant spot that was picked, to save a sure goal, just as half time was announced.

Half time: Thistles 1; Woollens 0.

HALF TIME.

No sooner was the ball set in motion in the second half than a Thistle player gave away a foul kick that was trusted to Blowers. The Thistle packed their goal to prevent a score but the parting shot was intended for the corner of the upright and good fortune smiled upon them as the ball hit the cross bar to drop out of play.

Young's Beautiful Goal.

Anderson from the goal kick sent the McPhail and Young wing into the Woollens' territory. The combination ultimately left the Thistle centre forward with the ball, the defence clased in on him, but he parted out to Young who scored the most beautiful goal in many years of local soccer. It was one of the great Mauder's type—the great C.G.E. forward. It would be useless to try and describe the play from now on because it was full of thrills. One in particular was very amusing. A raid lead by Mitchell ended in the latter dropping the ball into the goal in below the bar. Curtis threw himself up in the air to fist out. He ran out again to fist it from Ward's head. Clark followed the play closely but in his excitement he thought that he would act like the goal-keeper in handling the ball, which only penalized his team mates. Laidlaw and Williams went down to Cridland's and Foster's position to gain two fruitless corners. Clark also gained two unsuccessful corner-kicks thereafter. At this period Burgess, who was playing one of his best games, required attention, and changed places with Richmond. There was not a dull minute until the final blow of Rerefee Clarke's whistle ending one of the best soccer games this season, that the Thistle gained meritoriously.

Thistle 2, Woollens 0.

Goal scorers: Richmond and Young.

Canadian Woollens: Hillman, goal, Cridland and Chambers, backs; Foster, Monkman and Blowers, half-backs; Clark, Ward, Mitchell, Hoddgson and Sayers, forwards.

Thistle: Curtis, goal, Anderson and Rae, back

POLO FASTEST SAYS FARRELL

Only Sport to Compare With It Is Canada's Winter Game.

FULL OF THRILLS

By HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Polo to horse lovers is the most fascinating game played. To ordinary sportsmen who like plenty of action and assorted thrills it is the fastest. Hockey is perhaps the only game that can match polo for speed, sustained action and skill of stroke, but in handling a mount, the polo player must have more skill than the hockey player who can control his movements by instinct.

With the exception of the many technical rules on fouls, polo is a simple game to watch and follow. It has many regulations covering the method of riding, approaching and handling of the ball that the ordinary spectator does not understand, but in this respect it is not nearly so complicated as college football.

In many respects football, both soccer and the college game, are closely related in principle to polo. The idea in soccer is to get the ball across the goal line between the goal posts, and the same holds in polo.

Polo rules stipulate that the game should be played on a field not longer than 300 yards and not wider than 200 yards when there are no sideboards. When the field has sideboards it should be no longer than 300 yards and not wider than 160 yards.

The goal posts should be no further apart than 250 yards and must be 10 feet high, eight yards wide, and built of material that will give way before weight. The regulation ball is 3 1-4 inches in diameter and 4 1-2 ounces in weight.

There can be no more than four players on a side, and they have to wear protected hats or helmets. When they become dismounted they must mount and continue play unless, in the opinion of the referee, they have been injured.

The match is in charge of an umpire, where the captains of the team agree on one official, or in charge of two umpires when each captain wants to nominate a choice. In the case of two umpires a referee is appointed to cast the deciding vote when the umpires do not agree. A score-keeper and a time-keeper are also named as officials.

The match is divided into eight periods (or chukkers) of seven and one-half minutes each, making a total playing time of one hour. Between periods a three-minute rest is allowed. Time is never called out to permit a player to change mounts. At the end of a period a bell is rung, but the players continue until the ball is put out of play. In the event that the score is tied at the end of the eighth period, the game continues with periods of seven and one-half minutes and rest periods until a goal has been scored.

In the event that darkness, weather, or any other reason stops a match, play is resumed at the earliest convenience.

CANOEISTS COMING HERE.

On Extended Trip From Algonuin Park To Toronto.

Dick Valkenberg, Intercollegiate diving champion of Canada, 1923, and Rogers Plaxton, of Rugby and hockey fame, will shortly pass through Peterboro on their canoe trip from Algonquin Park to Toronto.

His Worship Mayor J. J. Turner was informed of the above visit in a letter received to-day from J. Alex. Edminson, ex-Boy Mayor of Toronto. They expect to spend a few hours in the city and will visit Mayor Turner, who was requested by Mr. Edminson to make their sojourn here as pleasant as possible.

There are more motor vehicles in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland than there are in the rest of the world outside the United States.

VETS DEFEATED QUAKER OATS

Quakers Were Leading at Half-Time But Lost in Second Half.

QUAKERS TEN MEN

The G.W.V.A. got two valuable points from the Quaker Oats on Saturday afternoon in a league game played at the Oval before a fair attendance. Referee Mitchell handled the game with his usual precision and decisions.

First Half.

At two-thirty both teams lined up for a league game. The Vets had a full eleven while the Quaker Oats, through working conditions could not furnish a strong eleven. With only eight men the Quakers hammered the Vets into their own area. Try as they liked, the porridge boys could do anything but score, until Gardener gained possession in his own to put his team ahead during the first half. Throughout the early part of the game the Quakers were masters of the situation but very unfortunate in front of goal. Half-time —Quakers 1, Vets 0.

Second Half.

Upon resuming, the Vets settled down to their usual game and it was not long until Dyer equalized from a shot that the goal-keeper could not prevent. The Quakers, with only ten men found the pace too hard and had to admit defeat as Bryce added to the score, that was followed up by Griffin making it three before the final whistle was blown. This gives the Vets another two more valuable league points while the Woollens lost two to the Jags. Vets 3, Quakers 1.

Goal scorers—Vets: Dyer, Bryce and Griffin; Quaker Oats: Gardener.

The line up follows:

Quakers—Bain, goal-keeper; Willshaw and Honor, backs; McLellan, Scott and Walker, half-backs; Gunn, Hemphill, Gardener and T. Williams, forwards.

G.W.V.A.—Frick, goal; Crowe and Wasson, backs; Underwood Mann and Frost, half-backs; Monks, Griffin, Bryce, Dyer and Gash, forwards.

Referee—Alex Mitchell.

PRINCE ON FOX HUNT.

He Will Likely Take Part in Hunt at Long Island.

SYOSSET, N.Y., September 8 (Canadian Press). — The Prince of Wales expected to take part in the fox hunting on Long Island now that the season has commenced.

He is very fond of this form of sport, and it is likely that he will try his skill at jumping Long Island rail fences within a few days.

The heir to the British throne planned to-day to go over to Mineola to greet the United States fliers completing the round the world flight.

He will accompany Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, who will officially welcome the fliers.

It is not likely that the Prince will stay on Long Island after next Sunday, his scheduled day of departure for his Alberta ranch.

SHANGHAI THREATENED.

Military Dictator of Manchuria is Obliged To Marshal His Forces.

PEKING, Sept. 8. — (Canadian Press).—General Chang Tso Lin, war lord and military dictator of Manchuria, has notified foreign Consuls stationed at Mukden, the principal city of Manchuria, that in view of the approach of rival Wu Pei-Fu forces in the vicinity of Shanghai, he would be obliged to marshal his forces with Tienence, Manchuria, as assembling place, foreign official circles reported here to-day.

LIKE DONNELLY'S WORK.

Donnelly, a southpaw, went the entire route for the winners and turned in a mighty fine game. He has plenty of speed for a youngster and good control, only allowing two walks. He was given good support by Catcher Delehaye. He had 10 strikeouts to his credit and thereby won the game.—Lindsay Post.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Youth must be served, is an old adage of much truth, but it doesn't go out in the great open spaces.

Veteran pitchers, former big league stars, are making a pennant contender out of Seattle in the Pacific Coast League.

"Wheezer" Dell, late of Brooklyn; Jim Bagby, who last toiled with Pittsburgh and previous to that starred for Cleveland, and Vean Gregg, long regarded as through, are keeping Seatle in the running

Perhaps it is the climate.

Ten years ago Gregg was the big noise at Cleveland, a second Rube Waddell in ability, also possessing a few of the late Rube' eccentricities.

Gregg at 40, after practically having retired from the game because of a lame arm, is doing one of baseball's greatest comebacks. He is the pitching sensation of the coast league.

Only the other day the New York Yankees were reported to have offered two players and a big sum for Gregg, provided immediate delivery could be given. The offer was turned down.

In 1920 Jim Bagby won 31 games for Cleveland. The Indians won the pennant that year. Bagby played a leading role.

Dell for several years has been doing minor league service, regarded through as a big leaguer.

Yet these three veterans labeled passe by the majors, are making baseball history on the coast.

In baseball, the wise old head often triumphs over the brawn of youth. Bagby, Dell and Gregg are outstanding examples of such a truth.

The uncertainty of baseball makes it unwise to bank too strongly on any one player, no mattr how big a star he may be.

This is particularly true of the pitching end of the game. The twirlers fail to run true to form more often than any other player in the game.

If Morrison of Pittsburg, conceded to be the best curve ball pitcher in the National League, was delivering in 1923 form, the Pirates would be pressing New York much harder.

Morrison has the same stuff, pitches in the same way, but in unable to win consistently. There is no logical explanation that can be offered for his showing, he simply isn't running true to form.

Luque of Cincinnati, Uhle of Cleveland and Reuther of Brooklyn are just a few other star pitchers who are not delivering up to expectations.

"When a pitcher is having a big year he is getting his share of the breaks," is the way I once heard Walter Johnson sum it up.

"Timely hitting by his teammates a tight defense that makes it hard for the opposition to score and a dash of pure luck are just a few of the breaks a winning pitcher must get" added Johnson.

Pitching is one of the most uncertain features of the game, incidentally the most important.

BRITISH TEAM WON.

EAST LONDON, South Africa, September 8 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). — The British rugby team that is touring South Africa defeated the Border team here on Saturday by 12 points to 3.

SOCCER GAMES REAL BATTLES

First Division Games Produced Great Struggles On Saturday.

ASTON VILLA TIED

LONDON, September 8 (Canadian Press Cable). — There were some tremendous battles in Saturday's Association football league games, particularly in the First Division.

Aston Villa had rather the better of the scoreless tie against Newcastle United, but Hampson and Hudspeth defended gamely.

Emphatically the best win of the day was Sunderland's 4 to 0 defeat of Birmingham. The latter team were outclassed in the second half, but to their credit it must be remembered that they were badly handicapped through the absence of Dale on account of an injured thigh.

The first half of the Leeds-Cardiff City match was without a score, but after the interval Davies matched two fine goals for the Welshmen, and near the end Lawson added another. Downs, their goalie, saved Leeds from a much heavier defeat.

Burnley at Preston scored a rather lucky goal through Kelly, three minutes from the kick-off. Approaching the interval, Preston overwhelmed their opponents and were most unlucky not to score more than once. The visitors went further ahead in a poorly played second half, Perkin scoring with a single shot and the game ending 2 to 0 for Burnley.

Arsenal Clever.

Arsenal showed some clever football in a very fast game at Highbury against Liverpool, which the Londoners won 2 to 0. The Lancastrians were unlucky when Johnston hit the uprights with the Arsenal goalkeeper, Robson well beaten, but matters were balanced when Woods for Arsenal skimmed the Liverpool cross-bar with a great shot. Woods made up for his bad luck by heading the second goal through.

The Huddersfield-Sheffield United game, won by the former 2 to 1, was full of thrills in which Cook and Stephenson had accidents.

Stanley Earle scored West Ham's solitary goal in the Londoners' away win against Blackburn. West Ham generally had the better of the play, and the Rovers persistently over-did the close passing game.

Bury put up a great fight against Bolton Wanderers, and succeeded in sharing the points as the result of their 3-3 tie.

Four of the goals were scored in the first eleven minutes. Ball did the hat trick for Bury; Britton for Chelsea, and Dennison for Brighton.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. There is a runner on first base. He attempts a steal of second. The umpire back of the plate is working so close to the catcher that he interferes with that player in making his throw to second. The ball goes to right field and the runner reaches third. What is the proper ruling on such a play?—S. A. L.

2. Has a pitcher the right to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possesion? A contends that such an act is a balk. B claims that the pitcher has a right to get on the rubber without the ball, provided he makes no motion to pitch. Who is right?—D. A. D.

3. Is there such a thing as unitentional interference? If a fielder in making a play on a batted ball decides he will be in a better position to handle the hit if he takes one step backward, such step causing him to collide with base runner, therefore losing the ball, is the fielder or base runner considered at fault?—C. A. G.

ANSWERS

1. If the umpire back of the plate interferes with the catcher in making a throw to second the ball becomes dead. The runner who advanced from first to third on the play must return to his original base.

2. A pitcher has no right to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession. Such an act is a balk. A is correct.

3. There is no such thing as unintentional interference. The umpire cannot give that feature the slightest consideration. If the interference is committed he must call it, regardless of the intent.

In the cast cited, the runner must be declared out. The fielder always has the right of way. The base runner must avoid him. The fact that the fielder was in a sense at fault cannot be considered.

JUEVENILE TILT HERE TO-MORROW

Cobourg Juveniles will be here to-morrow evening for a second O.B.A.A. round game with the Maple Leafs. The game will be played at King Edward School grounds, starting at 4.15 o'clock.

The Lakeshore champs are reported much stronger than last season. The Leafs will have both Bradley and Donnelly in uniform to work against the visitors.

HOTEL PATRONS PAY FOR "SOUVENIRS" THEY COLLECT

MYSTERY may always surround the tale of the twenty-four gold coffee spoons that did or did not disappear from the Elysee in Paris during the visit of a party of Americans, but there is no mystery about the fact that in their native land Americans have the habit of collecting various and sundry "souvenirs" without as much as by your leave. On the books of the hotel companies, the facts stand out very plainly that the traveling public lacks a keen sense of property rights. It is not so easy to explain away or smooth over the losses that the hotels must be prepared to meet yearly resulting from the continual disappearance of their property from the guest rooms.

The American hotel man is said to have raised the art of pleasing his patrons to a new height in both service and accommodations. He has also learned to know intimately the foibles, weaknesses and sins of his guests. The American hotel man would never get highly excited about the incident that disturbed Paris, because, in the first place, he is used to that sort of thing, and, secondly, he takes care that he gets paid for the hotel's "lost" property. The word "souvenir" has come to cover not only a multitude of sins but a quantity of property as well.

The experience of one large New York hotel, which is probably typical of organizations catering to what is called a transient trade as opposed to the resident type, is illuminating. It has been found that on the average the departing guest speeds along with a little less than a dollar's worth of hotel property concealed in suitcases or trunks. In other words, for every thousand changes in registrations the hotel must be prepared to meet a loss of from $800 to $900.

Hotel Man Protects Himself.

In a year's time the loss will run up into thousands of dollars, depending upon the volume of business handled. The only thing that keeps the hotel man from shutting his doors, taking down his sign and going into some other line of business is that he has provided, must provide, as a matter of fact, for this loss by charging just that much additional for the rental of his rooms.

So when the travelling public is so gayly collecting souvenirs from the hotels, it is also, as the French say, "paying for it through the nose." Of course, it does not follow that all hotel guests try to take away property that does not belong to them, but, as usual, the innocent suffer with the guilty.

Years ago there was a fad for collecting souvenir spoons. One hotel man said that this was in part responsible for the present "carelessness" of the traveling public with hotel property. But styles in souvenirs change, as well as those in dress. During the old days a considerable amount of silverware, particularly spoons and smaller articles, disappeared, to be tucked in waistcoat pockets for the "missus." Now the vogue is for other things, articles of utility holding chief place.

Towels are first in popularity, and they disappear in quantity. Then come bathroom rugs, blankets, linen from the beds, pictures from the wall—anything, in fact, that is not nailed down or too big to get in a suitcase or trunk. Where blankets bear the stamp of the hotel at top or bottom, this will perhaps be cut off and left.

One hotel manager told of a particularly avaricious guest who, besides trying to beat his bill, had taken the little table on which the telephone stood. The legs had been unscrewed and the whole neatly packed in a trunk.

The hotel man endeavors to cut down his loss as much as possible. One system is to have a girl make a hasty survey of the room as soon as the patron has left. If property is missing the departing guest is stopped at the desk on "checking out" and asked to return the "borrowed" souvenirs. If he is gone, then a police letter is dispatched requesting the return of the property. It is a curious thing that people usually send money rather than return the article itself. Perhaps the reasoning is that to return the property is to admit that it was stolen, while to pay for it merely means that it was accidentally taken and is now being paid for to save the trouble of returning it.

While many travelers are notoriously careless about property rights, others, of course, observe them religiously. One New York hotel had as patrons a young man and his bride. Tea had been served in their room one afternoon and the young couple made the discovery that the hotel initials lettered on the set corresponded with those of the groom. The management was so astonished at the request that a price be put on the set, that it was forthwith given to the young couple with best wishes.

There is another amusing yarn, again on the shady side, about the unexpected finding in a hotel room of a silver serving tray bearing the initials of another hotel. The conclusion was that the occupant of the room had previously collected this silver tray. Then he had found a more attractive tray and the exchange had been made. The moral salve in that case might have been, "A fair exchange is no robbery."

College Boy Breaks and Pays.

Many people would say that the college boy is at times a lawless and irresponsible youngster. From the hotel man's point of view, however, he can almost be held up as an example. He may come in and raise cain and break up things, but there is this difference, he pays for what he breaks without argument.

Of course, the losses of a hotel serving a transient type of type are greater than those serving people who make the hotel their home. Once a person takes anything from the hotel it is for his own use. Naturally, if the hotel is your home you have little cause to rob it.

"After all is said and done," said a hotel manager, "it must be admitted that the traveling public thinks lightly of taking things that do not belong to it. By no other method of reasoning can you account for the disappearance of a quantity of valuable property in the course of a year. And the joke, if it is a joke, is on the public, for it pays the bill."

But if the public is careless about carrying off hotel property it is also careless about leaving its own. One chain of hotels, operating eight units, found that the property returned to its departed patrons each year amounted to approximately $100,000. This caused the head of the department making the returns to say that the "traveling public is the most careless fraction of the population."

The material left behind is a strange assortment of valuable and worthless property, including poetry, theatre tickets, pearl necklaces, wedding rings, engagement rings, stock and mining certificates, postage stamps, a Thomas A. Edison questionnaire and a corkscrew.

As things stand, the hotel man feels that he has ground for complaint on the score of both souvenir collecting and carelessness.

JUDGE CAVERLY MAKES DECISION

Fate of Chicago Murderers Was Sealed Yesterday.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press). — The fate of Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, sons of Chicago millionaire families, who kidnapped and murdered ten-year-old Robert Franks on May 21 last, has been sealed. Judge John H. Caverly has completed the decision he will render on Wednesday as the last act of his connection with the Criminal Courts of Cook County.

Three sheets of ruled manila paper, containing approximately one thousand words, embodies the decision of Judge Caverly, written yesterday after he had attended church under escort of a police guard.

YOUNGSTERS GIVE PIRATES NEW LIFE

BY BILLY EVANS

Look out for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Five recruits have transferred the club into a pennant contender.

Manager Bill McKechnie may not win the National League bunting with his Buccaneers, but he is going to make the race decidedly interesting.

In the spring prior to the opening of the season, in doping out the chances of the National League clubs, I leaned strongly to the Pirates. I picked Pittsburgh as the one team with a great chance to make trouble for the Giants.

During the first two months of the race the play of the Pirates made me feel as if I didnt' know a single thing about baseball. When the pitchers worked well the batters didn't hit and vice versa. The club lacked consistency, simply couldn't win with regularity.

Perhaps too late, the Pirates have struck their gait, are playing the fine ball the team is capable of, and pressing New York hard, despite the big lead gained by the Giants while Pittsburgh was floundering about.

Five Classy Recruits.

In the fine showing of the Pittsburgh club the work of five recruits stand out prominently. Usually if a club is fortunate enough to have a couple of recruits develop into regulars it is satisfied. Five recruits, Wright, Cuyler, Yde, Moore and Kremer, have delivered for the Pirates.

While the great hitting of Outfielder Cuyler, the fine work of Moore when substituting for Traynor at third and the excellent pitching of Yde and Kremer have helped greatly, the acquisition of shortstop Wright has done much to make the Pirates a strong pennant possibility.

Seldom has a club, lacking a brilliant shortstop, won a pennant. A fast-working pair around second base is most essential to success. Wright has made good the fine things said about his fielding ability. He has exceeded expectations at the bat. Many of his biggest boosters had a fear for his hitting.

Wright supplanted Maranville at short. What to do with Maranville was a problem. He was shifted to second base and has fitted in perfectly. No doubt Wright has profited greatly from having so able a head as Maranville playing alongside him.

Moore Stars as Sub

While Moore hasn't enjoyed so strong a spotlight as the other four rookies, his work has been no less meritorious.

When substituting for Third Baseman "Pie" Traynor, Moore played great ball and hit a la Rogers Hornsby. In 35 games played he has an average close to .400.

If the Pirates pull the unexpected and nose out the Giants, the major portion of the credit for the win must go to the five rookies, Wright, Cuyler, Yde, Moore and Kremer.

While the veteran stars of the club have performed nobly, it must be conceded the new men have added the strength that has made the Pirates a potential winner.

PROTEST HABIT NEEDS NEW LAW

Teams Allow the Law To Be Broken Until They Are Defeated and Then a Howl Goes Up.

There is a bad habit creeping into amateur baseball, and some legislation should be enacted that would prevent its growth. The disease is not peculiar to Toronto patients alone, but is also an epidemic throughout Ontario.

This year Oakmounts had certain evidence pertaining to the eligibility of a St. Clair player, but this evidence was never used until it appeared that Oakmounts might lose the championship.

Then other clubs in the Toronto Senior League were acquainted with the fact that Pitcher Cairns failed to qualify under a residence rule, but no advantage was taken until Judeans beat Beavers and won the league honors.

Last year Oshawa and Belleville played a three-game series and the Motor City won. Then Belleville protested Dainty's eligibility and were declared winners. This year Peterboro lost to Kingston in elimination play-off and then Jake Soloman's crew protested the qualifications of two Limestone players.

The condition is rapidly becoming chronic. Managers and even league officials at times have knowledge of ineligibility of players but they reason in this manner: "If our team or our league can win without protesting let's do if and then we will appear to be good sports; but if we should lose then we will take full advantage of the constitution, play this card from out our sleeve and win on a protest."

This action is not creditable, and while the protesting group has the law at its back, it has not public opinion or the true spirit of sportsmanship.

Any club knowingly playing against an ineligible club is really a party to the decention and should be punished accordingly.

It might be desirable, and it would certainly eliminate executive room championships, if every protesting club was compelled to state when its evidence was received and if it played all later games under protest.

If a club had the evidence and did not immediately file its protest, then the games should stand as played—even though the defending player be declared ineligible.

Such a law would have saved Pres. Geo. Simonds and Pres. Dave Cohen a few anxious hours, and would have prevented recent bitter controversies. It would have also prevented the "clothes washing" now prominent in Central Ontario League.—Sunday World.

FELL OFF A PIER.

Nine Year Old Boy Drowned at St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 8. — (Canadian Press).—Nicholas Toronski, nine years old, St. Catharines, fell from the east pier at Port Dalhousie Harbor last night and was drowned. His playmates were too frightened to give the alarm, and it was some time before Ferryman G. McNulty began to search for the body, which was discovered.

In twelve years McNulty has saved fourteen persons from drowning and recovered eleven bodies.

PETERBORO BOY FINISHED TRIP OF 8,400 MILES

MADE GOOD TIME.

Philip Davidson Travelled From Here to Douglas, Arizona.

TORONTO September 8 (Canadian Press). — Completing a trip of 8,400 miles, Philip C. Davidson, aged 22, who will enter upon his final year in engineering at the University of Toronto, covered 5,700 miles of his trip by hiking and "want a lift" method.

He is a son of Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, of Peterborough, and his object was sight-seeing and to study metallurgy.

On his first day out he reached London, and next day he was in Detroit.

When he came to the great American desert in New Mexico, he started by accepting a lift, ten miles out into the desert, but one experience of attempting to hike in this arid region was enough, and he made certain thereafter that he rode from town to town.

From Douglas, he went to San Diego, California, and thence north, averaging 208 miles a day on his trip.

He visited Royal George in Colorado and Yosemite Valley in California.

The cost of his travels to Vancouver averaged less than 2 cents a mile. From the Coast, he travelled home by train without any cost, as assistant cook in a dining-car.

OBITUARY.

MRS. W. H. TAYLOR.

The following extract refers to the death of a former resident of Peterboro, Mrs. W. H. Taylor, mother of Mrs. W. H. Hill, of this city:

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 7. — The entire Niagara frontier joins with the Taylor family in mourning the loss of Mrs. Jeannie Taylor, who died at the family home at No. 28 Lundy's Lane, this morning, in her 88th year. Mrs. Taylor was the widow of Dr. W. H. Taylor, whose death occurred about 30 years ago. The funeral will be held from the late residence on Friday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Taylor was born in the township of Willoughby and later, during her early years, resided in Montreal and Peterboro. Thirty-five years ago she returned and made her home at Roseaire. Later she returned to the old home in the Lane. She was always an active member of the Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church, where her loss will be keenly felt. She is survived by two sons, W. M. Taylor, of Montreal, and Warren Taylor, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and four daughters, Miss Jean and Miss Hettie Taylor, at home, Mrs. Hill of Peterboro, and Mrs. A. C. Thorburn, of this city.

PLEBISCITE QUESTIONS.

Questions Will Likely Be Made Known Tomorrow.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General, stated this morning that the questions to be asked by the Government in connection with the forthcoming liquor plebiscite would most likely be known tomorrow with the return of Premier Ferguson from his home in Kemptville. The general feeling at the Parliament Buildings is that only two questions will be asked, one as to whether the people are in favor of the O. T. A., and the other as to the desirability of Government control under the local option system.

LOCAL BOY FIFTH C.N.E. MARATHON

Herb Tranter, Formerly of Peterboro, Finished High in Field of Leading Canadian and American Runners.

Local sport fans will be pleased to learn that Herb Tranter, formerly of Peterboro, is gradually working his way to the top ranks amongst the Marathon runners.

Saturday was sports day at the C.N.E., and Herb. Tranter, now of Rochester, came fifth in the 12-mile Marathon race, defeating Art Scholes and Jimmie Dillion, of the Gladstone Club, who have been outstanding long distance Canadian runners for years, as well as E. Jones, of Buffalo. There was a large field of Canadian and American runners, and the standing of the Peterboro boy is somewhat sensational considering his short experience.

The Marathon was the feature of the day, Frank Wending, of Buffalo, and Jimmie Cuthbert, of Guelph, finishing in a dead heat in 1 hour 11 minutes 11 1-5 seconds. Andy Lewis of Woodstock was third and Morton of Hamilton fourth.

Tranter obtained his early training in The Examiner road races. He gave promise here of becoming a crack runner as a youngster.

ARCHITECTS MEET.

City Planning Was the Subject of an Interesting Address.

Mr. Walter R. L. Blackwell, architect, of this city, has just returned from Toronto, where he has been attending the joint convention of the Ontario Association of Architects and the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, held on Thursday and Friday of last week.

Many representative architects from all parts of the Dominion were assembled for two busy days full of interest and profit, when, aside from the business end of the convention many important subjects were discussed.

City planning was the subject of an instructive address, which showed the tremendous value to the community that an intelligent plan, covering such features as civic centres, park areas, main arteries of approach, zoning (the restricting of factories, stores, residences, etc., to certain districts) may be, if made ahead of time and in anticipation of growth, instead of allowing such growth to take place in a haphazard way, to the detriment of valuable properties and the beauty and utility of the city. Instances were mentioned where immense sums might have been saved had properties for civic improvements, such as parks, public buildings, street widening, etc., been acquired before the growth took place, instead of waiting until the city had grown to such an extent that the development was so expensive as to make the scheme impractical.

A decided stand was taken by the convention against the further development of use of high buildings, which are in many way such a detriment to the neighborhood in which they are placed, though, fortunately, this is a problem which Peterboro will not have to consider very seriously for some time to come.

SENT TO ASYLUM.

LINDSAY, Sept. 8. (Special.) — Mrs. George Fanning, the unfortunate woman, who murdered her two little daughters by hanging them in the cellar of her home in Ops a few weeks ago, has recovered from the wounds which she inflicted on herself following the tragedy, and has been taken to the Rockwood Asylum at Kingston.

During her confinement in the hospital she made no reference to her children or to the fate which had befallen them.

LOST BARN AND CROP.

Finest Barn in the Woodville District Destroyed By Fire.

LINDSAY, Sept. 8. (Special.) — Fire completely destroyed the fine barn of Mr. Andrew Annis, who resides near Woodville. A large quantity of hay and grain was also destroyed. The cause of the fire is unknown but is believed to have been due to spontaneous combustion. The barn was one of the finest in the district and is the second to be destroyed in a mysterious manner in a few days. Mr. Annis' loss will be heavy, as he only carried light insurance.

MUST INSPIRE CONFIDENCE TO GAIN SUCCESS

Cannot Permanently Succeed In Business Without It, Says Speaker.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES.

Local Rotarians Listen To Fine Address By Milton Bergey.

Rotarian Milton Bergey, of Oshawa, who is an advertising specialist with General Motors, as one of his chief clients, was the speaker at to-day's luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club, giving a splendid address upon business principles. The automotive dealers of the city were the guests of Rotarian Andrew Brown for the occasion, and a number of other visitors was in attendance, including Martin Chenhall, Jr., who delighted the gathering with several splendidly played 'cello solos.

Rotarian Bergey laid down as the principal factor in business success —confidence. That is, that unless a business man or a firm succeeded by fair methods and honest service, in gaining the confidence of the public, there could be no permanent success. The speaker emphasized the desirability of keeping that faith in mind in salesmanship in their advertising campaigns and in every angle of their business, pointing out that it was quite possible for a $5.00 a week clerk to utterly destroy the confidence of a customer in a particular concern.

Dealing with the motor car industry, which he pointed out was now the third largest industry in the world, Rotarian Bergey declared that the tendency was more and more towards centralization. 5.2 per cent. of the manufacturers of motor cars had gone out of business, and the trend was in the direction of a still smaller number of firms until eventually the manufacture of automobiles would be confined to perhaps five or six large firms.

He stressed the fact that this specialization was being carried out by General Motors, referring to the work done at the research laboratories in Dayton, O., where many engineers were engaged in solving problems in regard to motor transportation and in seeking means to improve the cars turned out by the company.

Rotarian F. C. Hungerford was introduced to the meeting as the new vice-president of the Peterboro Club, and was greeted with loud applause.

President J. W. McDermid presided at to-day's luncheon. A new Rotarian in attendance was Ray Brown.

FIVE NATIONS ASK SAFE ZONE

Note to Chinese Foreign Office Demands Safety For Foreigners.

WAR SPREADS.

(By Ray G. Marshall, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PEKIN, September 8. — The United States, Great Britain, France, Japan, and Italy joined to-day in sending a note to the Foreign Office, asking proclamation of a neutral zone from Woo Sung to Shanghai for the protection of lives and property of foreigners.

The report was made following the intervention of Tso Lin, the powerful war lord of Manchuria, into the Civil War which now involves half of China.

Chang is reported to have informed the foreign consuls at Mukden that he is preparing a counter-action against the four divisions of Wu Pei Fu's (Pekin) troops, which he declares, are moving towards Manchuria.

Prince Is Old Fashioned; Doesn't Like Bobbed Hair

NEW YORK, September 8. Canadian Press. — A smartly bobbed and shingled young woman, who was chasing a "special" on the Prince for her paper, got out a pointed bit of copy from his Royal Higness the other day. She asked the Prince if he liked the style of bobbed hair. "No," he replied, "I'm afraid, I don't;" and then, seeing the correspondent's embarrassment, he added: "but, of course I may be old-fashioned."

But it was reported that the Prince confessed to choosing a dancing partner on the voyage over because she had not bobbed her hair.

TORONTO, September 8. — Mrs. W. Cotfrell, 31 years ago, swallowed a pen-nib, and it was extracted a few days ago by Dr. F. B. Wilson, from a swollen portion of her foot.

Dr. Wilson stated that the nib probably worked its way to the foot, owing to gravitation and to muscular action

CHINAMEN IN TROUBLE.

Light Fire in Stove and Find No Outlet For Smoke.

For the last few days the cold weather prevailing has caused considerable inconvenience one way and another. A couple of Orientals in the Chinese laundry at 232 Hunter Street, feeling the chill of the brisk easterly wind on Saturday evening, put some paper in a stove in their premises, from which stove pipes led to the flat above and presumably to a chimney. But no, for upon lighting the fire the Chinamen found that the stove pipes only led to the ceiling, and that the flames and smoke filled the bedroom above their shop.

Fortunately the firemen had a short run, and were able to extinguish the flames by the use of chemicals.

The fire department were also called to two chimney fires on Saturday, one to 168 Adeline Street at 10.47 a.m., and to 573 Division Street at 8.40 a.m.

The Provincial Police are investigating.

OPPOSE DANCING.

Dance on French Men-of-War in Port at Quebec, Cancelled.

QUEBEC, September 8 (Canadian Press). — The announcement was made to-day that the dance on the French men-of-war, in port, had been cancelled because of the opposition by the Catholic Church authorities here.

Yesterday Mgr. LaFlamme, parish priest of the Basilica, stated that the attitude of the Church banning modern dancing, as announced last year by Cardinal Begin, was unchanged.

He said no special permission had been given for dancing on British warships recently in port.

It is understood a plea for permission was made and refused.

Dancing, Mgr. LaFlamme said, came under the general interpretation of the occasion of sin.

TRAGEDY BROKE LOVE TRIANGLE AMONG ESKIMOS

HUSBAND SLAIN

Canadian Court Held on Deck of Ship Under Midnight Sun.

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.— (Canadian Press.)—From the far north comes a story of love, jealousy, violence, tragedy and finally justice administered under the midnight sun on the shores of the Arctic Ocean.

The case is that of Ikalupiak, copper Eskimo, who was charged with the murder of Havougach, another of the same race, ninety miles from Tree River, N.W.T., on November 15, 1921. The trial of Ikalupiak took place on July 5 of the present year, after a judicial party had travelled two thousand miles from Edmonton to Aklavik, on the delta of the Mackenzie River, to hold it. The result was a sentence of five years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary, Manitoba, on a manslaughter conviction.

The Old Triangle.

The story told at the trial on board the steamship Distributor was, briefly, that Ikalupiak (a boy of 18, had been taken in as a member of their family by Havougach and his wife, Khattiah, that Havougach became jealous of the young man, to whom it is supposed Khattiah was attracted, and that he gave Ikalupiak reason to fear an attack. Finally, on a day when the two men had gone for several miles away from the snow houses of the family camp to the frozen meat camp, the tragedy occurred. It was claimed by the defence that the prisoner had gone unarmed, while Havougach carried both a knife and a gun, and that the latter was surprised by Ikalpiak in the act of attacking him. Whether or not this is the fact, Havougach was found with a bullet in his head. Ikalupiak, it is said, voluntarily accompanied Havougach's other relatives to the police detachment, a distance of from five to ten days' jorney, where he was placed under arrest.

Married the Widow.

Ikalupiak became the husband of the dead man's wife. He and Khattiah lived happily totgether, it is said, and a child was born to them, which, however, died prior to the trial.

Under Midnight Sun.

Although the court held a night sitting which lasted from eight o'clock until 2.30 the following morning, there was no difficulty about lighting arrangementts. The midnight sun beamed broadly, providing daylight throughout the whole night it was reported. On the deck of the steamship "Distributor," ample accommodation having been provided for the several hundred spectators by moving a part of the cargo, the judge, jury, prisoner, Crown counsel, lawyer for the defence, and the curious Eskimos who had come to see the justice of the white man administered, gathered. Some of the witnesses travelled a thousand miles through the wilds to testify.

Government Aids Farmers To Leave South Alberta

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 9. —(Canadian Press)—Certificates issued by the Department of Agriculture to Southern Alberta farmers wishing to move to other parts of the province number eighty-five, representing about sixty families. Inquiries and applications are still coming in, and it is expected there will be a considerable number yet taking advantage of the free transportation privileges.

The farmers who have already moved have chosen widely scattered parts of the country in which to make fresh starts.

ALDERMAN LAYS GRAVE CHARGES

Immorality Alleged Against Certain Members of Montreal Police Force.

PROBE BY COUNCIL

MONTREAL, Sept. 9. — At the meeting Monday afternoon of the City Council, Alderman Dubreuil laid before his colleagues a scathing indictment of the Montreal police service. Among the more outstanding allegations were the following:—

In a northern parish of the city there is a house known to public scandal as the "Police Brothel". That house was denounced long ago by the parish priest, but the scandal continues.

A superior officer of police lived for five or six years as the lover of a woman who kept a disorderly house and he was known to go to the house with alcoholic drink in his possession.

A superior officer of police took money from a man for procuring him a position as police constable.

Protection Money

Tony Frank, one of the six bandits now awaiting execution in connection with the Hochelaga Bank collection- car looting and murder up to his arrest was a collector of protection money from certain houses of ill fame in behalf of the police.

Some of the six condemned bandits were keepers of evil houses and intimate friends of friends of certain police officers.

Officers of the police have been seen enjoying themselves in company with men of evil reputation.

Order was given to the police to stop supervising the Hochelaga Bank collection-car when it was known that the hold-up that actually took place was in preparation.

These were the points laid before the meeting by Alderman Dubreuil in support of his motion for a Royal Commission to investigate the administration of the Montreal police.

Has Affidavits.

He did not produce the affidavits which he states he has in his possession, but read and filed a summary of the charges they are alleged to contain and of which the principal points are given in the foregoing.

He was bitterly attacked by some of his colleagues for failing to produce the affidavits and Alderman Brodeur chairman of the council, expressed the open doubt as to the existence of the affidavits.

It was finally decided that investigation into police affairs in this city should be undertaken by a committee of the aldermen, instead of the wider system of enqutry by a Royal Commission or investingation by a Judge of the Superior Court.

OTTAWA, September 9 (Canadian Press). — Ordinary revenues of the Dominion of Canada for the five months of the present fiscal year ending 31st August show a decrease of approximately twenty million dollars when compared with the revenue figures for the five month period of last year.

Ordinary expenditures for the five months show : i increase of over two millions when the two periods are compared.

The monthly statement issued through the Department of Finance shows total ordinary revenue for the five months under review of $162,523,315 ,as compared with $182,163,286 a year ago. Excise Reduction.

A decrease of over seventeen million dollars in excise tax collections during the five month period of the present year, as compared with the same period a year ago, is largely responsible for the total revenue decrease. JUMPED FROM BOAT.

Russian Stowaway Wanted To Remain in Canada.

QUEBEC, Sept. 9. — (Canadian Press).—Making a last determined effort to remain in Canada, contrary to the laws of the country and of the high seas, probably cost Porfirs Ivanoff, Russian stowaway, his life when he jumped from the deck of the Canadian Pacific freighter Brecon about 11 o'clock Saturday night as the steamer was passing Crane Island on her eastbound trip from Montreal. Ivanoff, who was being deported, arrived in this country only recently and was detained pending deportation. On account of the storm it was found impossible to launch a boat, and Ivanoff's body was not recovered.

WHEAT CUTTING WELL ADVANCED

Frost Reported, But Damage Slight—Yield Is Gratifying.

PROSPECTS GOOD.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—With favorable progress in cutting of wheat in the three prairie provinces the yield is proving fully up to expectations and in many instances exceeding earlier estimates, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway Agricultural department issued Monday.

There is still considerable late grain in the more northerly portions of each province, which will not be past frost danger for another week, the report states. Frost has been reported from a number of districts, but the damage has been exceedingly light.

In Full Swing

In Manitoba favorable weather has prevailed and harvesting is now in full swing. Wheat yields generally are surpassing early estimates, while cereal crops are also showing up well. Southern Manitoba has eighty to ninety per cent. of cutting completed with the remainder of the province from forty to fifty per cent. All but very late fields have escaped rust damage.

With amout forty to fifty per cent of wheat cutting finished in Saskatchewan, threshing is expected to be fairly well under way next week. Well distributed rain during the early part of August greatly improved conditions throughout the province, especially relieving the feed situation Loss from saw-fly damage will be small, says the report.

Ripening Delayed

Favorable conditions continue in Alberta, although the cool weather of the past week has delayed ripening of late crops. In the southern parts of the province from sixty to seventy per cent. has been completed and in the north from ten to fifteen per cent. while in the south east where the crops are reported to be very light, use of headers has been necessary.

On the Edmonton Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, harvesting has been delayed by rain, but prospects are for more favorable weather Slight damage from frost is reported in the Berwin district. Prospects for winter feeding of stock are excellent the report concludes.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Three armed and masked men driving a closed automobile, blew the safe at the Melaval Post Office some time Monday morning and escaped towards the Montana border with $2,860 in cash. The safe stood in Johnston's store, which was considerably damaged by the explosion of nitro-glycerine which had been used to shatter the safe. Of the money taken, $2,800 belonged to a local elevator company, and had been placed there for security.

MAN WHO WROTE PRINCE THREAT SENT TO ASYLUM

Marcus J. Geroy Arrested at Williamston, N. J., Admitted Writing Letter.

MIND UNBALANCED

WILLIAMSTOWN, N.Y., Sept. 9. —Marcus J. Geroy was arrested in his home here Monday, charged with sending the Prince of Wales an alleged threatening letter received by the British heir last Thursday. Sheriff Vincent, who made the arrest, said Geroy admitted writing the missive.

Sheriff Vincent added that Geroy denied threatening to kill the royal visitor, but said he "had no use for the British Empire and would just as soon see it wiped out."

Geroy was arrested as he was leaving his home to take up residence in northern Michigan.

Mentally Unbalanced.

Later Geroy was taken to Pulaski for examination by physicians and upon their decision the man was mentally unbalanced he was ordered committed to the State hospital as Ogdensburg.

Sheriff Vincent said authorities had been seeking Geroy for some time, but only yesterday, as he was about to board a train for Michigan, were they able to approach him. They had watched the house he occupied in the woods near this village, but Geroy had managed to elude capture.

Geroy was born at Boylston, Oswego County, about 34 years ago, and since early youth has been roaming the world. In 1914 he enlisted in the Canadian army and served overseas, returning to take up life in his woodland hut at the close of the world war. Since that time he has been occupied with odd jobs about the countryside or simply in roaming the woods.

OCT. 23 SIX WEEKS AWAY

Local Branch Moderation League Distributes Literature.

LOCAL EXECUTIVE

The Moderation League has been misrepresented as urging the consumption of alcholic liquors for beverage purposes according to literature being distributed by the Peterboro branch of the Moderation League of Ontario. The particular pamphlet containing the above statement goes on to say that the League has nothing but approval for total abstinence when voluntarily applied and that many of its members are total abstainers, but it does not look on the moderate consumption of alcholic beverages as a sin, whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the wisdom of it.

In another small leaflet labelled "Where is your money going" on which is depicted a cartoon reflecting the prosperity of bootleggers, "Make a law that won't support the bootlegger," is written in prominent letters above which appears the following statements, in answer to the question "Where is your money going "

"Quebec, under Government control, received $4,000,000 from government vendors in 1923."

"Ontario with its larger population, would have received more."

"This money is now making Bootleggers wealthy."

Although little can be done by the local organization, until Premier Howard Ferguson announces the questions to appear on the ballots on October 23rd. next literature is being distributed throughout the County and the district organizer is busy lining up the League's forces in the smaller centres.

Realizing that only about six weeks are left until the electors will be asked to decide upon the issues to be determined by the Premier, the local branch are getting their machinery in order early.

Recount In St. Antoine Division Next Thursday

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—A recount of the ballots cast in the recent by-election in St. Antoine division which returned a majority of 938 votes in favor of Alderman Hushion, Liberal candidate will be held next Thursday at the local court house.

The order for the re-count was given after one of the scrutineers for the defeated Conservative candidate, William M. Birks, had presented a petition to Chief Justice Martin alleging irregularities in one of the polls. Irregularities in other polls of the division had also taken place, the petition states.

TEACHER FACED BEAR IN WOODS

Didn't Feel Afraid and Escaped Harm By Courage.

IN NORTH ONTARIO.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Sept 9.—It evidently takes more than a bear to scare Miss Thelma Bradley from the path of duty. She has just come to the district to take charge of Number one School in Pardee township, and one of her early experiences was an encounter with a bear as she was walking from her boarding place to her school house. The trail lay through a section of the woods, and after she had gone a short distance along it she looked up and saw a big black bear trotting along towards her. For a moment she thought of flight, but not for long. The bear had a peaceful expression on its face, which gave her confidence and she calmly continued her walk to meet it.

"I didn't feel a bit afraid," she said, "I was quite confident that if I did nothing to excite the bear's hostility, he would never dream of harming me." Sure enough when the two were a few paces apart, Bruin looked up, saw Miss Bradley quietly disputing the right of way, gave a snort and turning off into the bush by the side of the trail, vanished amid the rustling shrubbery.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Sept. 9. — (Canadian Press).—A deal has just been consummated by which the McKellar-Longworth gold locations, two and a half miles north of Schreiber, have been acquired by the Victoria Syndicate, Limited, which is virtually the same as the Mond Nickel Co., for a consideration of $250,000. There is about four hundred feet of tunnelling on the property and a number of shallow shafts. These claims, B.J. 122 and 123, contain nearly three hundred acres, and have been held by the McKellar family for thirty years. A mill test of six tons in 1899 yielded $21.60.

1100 MARINES LAND AT SHANGHAI TO DEFEND INTERNATIONAL ZONE

GENERAL WU ASSISTING IN ATTACK

SHANGHAI, September 9 (Canadian Press). — Eleven hundred marines from foreign warships yesterday morning were ordered to land in Shanghai at 4 a.m., and take up defensive positions on the boundaries of the international settlement.

The order for the landing of the marines followed a new assault in the railway sector directly west of the city, bringing the fighting nearer than it had been before in a week of fighting between troops of the rival Tuchus of Kiangsu and Chekiang.

The Allied Force.

Marines were ordered to be landed as follows:

At the same time the volunteer corps was ordered to mobilise at 6 a.m.

Headquarters of General Lu Yung Hsiang, commander of the Chekiang forces, admitted that the Kiangsu Army had launched a heavy night attack along the railway.

Wu's Forces Involved.

Troops making the attack, it was asserted, were from the Province of Honan, and were ordered to the fighting front by Wu Pei-Fu, military director of the Pekin Government.

If this report be true, it marks the first open participation by Wu Pei-Fu, who recently was reported to be preparing to take part in the Civil War.

Chekiang headquarters claimed that the Honanese troops, despite the weight of their attack, were thrown back on Hwangtu, the point at which the battle started.

Official circles in the international settlement do not expect any difficulty, but whatever happens, plan to be prepared to deal either with advancing or retreating soldiers.

FATHER COLLAPSES FROM SHOCK OF TWO DAUGHTERS' ELOPEMENTS

PREMIER TIRED

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press Cable).—In a speech delivered at Dundee, Premier Ramsay MacDonald, confessing to feeling "a little tired", said the price paid for the premiership was very high. He sometimes doubted whether anyone could ever hold the position more than twelve months.

HEART ATTACK STRIKES LOEB

Strain of Trial and Worry Over Son's Fate, Breaks Him.

HEART BROKEN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.— Albert H. Loeb, father of the boy in the Cook county jail who with Nathan Leopold, Jr., is awaiting Judge Caverly's sentence for the murder of Bobby Franks, has suffered a new heart attack, and is confined to his bed, it was learned yesterday. His condition now precludes any possibility of his coming to Chicago to be near his son, Dick, when sentence is pronounced, for he would be unable to make the trip, had it been his intention to come.

Chicago Specialist Called.

The strain of the days of waiting or the verdict that may send his son to the gallows is said to be the real reason for the new attack. A prominent Chicago specialist, who prefers that his name not be used, was called to Charlevoix, the Loeb summer home, last Saturday evening, and upon his arrival Sunday he put Mr. Loeb to bed.

"He will be unable to leave his bed for at least another week," the specialist said. "I found that Mr. Loeb's heart was behaving badly and that he was suffering from throat trouble. It is necessary that he remain perfectly quiet for some time.

"He had been overdoing, and the

Both Brides Independently Wealthy — Father Desired Them Never to Marry.

DEVOTED TO THEM

Gave Them Everything That Money Could Buy—Except Love.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—From his two-hundred-acre estate, Groton Place, at Lenox, Mass., word was received in New York Sunday of the complete collapse of Grenville Lindall Winthrop, wealthy retired banker, philanthropist and aristocrat, as a result of the elopement of his daughters, Emily and Kate, on Saturday with his chauffeur and a young electrician.

Mr. Winthrop knew nothing of the double wedding until Sunday, when he received a telegram from his daughters informing him of their marriages and asking his forgiveness. Immediately the father locked himself in his beautiful but lonely house, denying himself to all sympathetic callers. Finally his condition became so serious from the shock that two physicians and two nurses were sent for.

Devoted to Daughters.

The old banker had given the better part of his life to his two daughters. He was greatly devoted to them and, it was said, never wanted them to marry for fear of the parting. Everything that money could buy was theirs. Then came the elopement in search of the one thing money could not buy—love.

Berkshire and New York society was fairly stunned by the news. Emily, thirty-one years old, chose as her partner for life her father's chauffeur, Corey Lucian Miles, a widower three years her senior. Kate's choice was Darwin Spurr Morse, an electrician, who had been employed on the estate, but had been discharged, it is said, for making love to her.

On Saturday the young women, with the men of their choice, motored to Interlaken, five miles away, and were married by the Rev. John P. Trowbridge in the Congregational Church. They used two cars and kept hidden the place of their honeymoon.

Suitors Forbidden.

Out of the secrecy that shrouded the elopement came revelations of

HOME BANK CASE STARTED TO-DAY

Expected That Trials Will Last For Some Months.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press.)— After nearly a year of law's delays which traversed all the way from police court in Toronto to Privy Council in London, the trial of a score or so of criminal charges against the directors and officials of the suspended Home Bank of Canada, began this afternoon when the name of Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant of the bank was called before County Judge Emerson Coatsworth on a charge of making a false statement to the Minister of Finance, contrary to provisions of the Bank Act.

On a list before County Judge Coatsworth, on similar and other charges, are also the following names: R. P. Gough, S. Casey Wood, J. F. M. Stewart, C. A. Barnard, Clarence F. Smith, F. J. Brussel, all directors of the Bank at the time of the collapse, and Sydney H. Jones, auditor of the institution. H. J. Daly, president of the Bank, died since the charges were laid.

It is expected that the trials will last for some months. One hundred witnesses have been summoned. D. L. McCarthy, assisted by MacGregor Young, and James McRuer, Crown Attorney, are in charge of the prosecution. The array of defence counsel includes N. W. Rowell, W. N. Tilley, R. H. Greer, R. S. Robertson, D. T. Symons, George H. Kilmer and others.

STEAMSHIP "SOUTH AMERICA" BURNED

One of Finest Ships on Great Lakes Total Wreck.

HOLLAND, Mich., September 9 (Canadian Press). — The steamship South American, one of the finest passenger boats on the Great Lakes, was destroyed by fire which broke out early this morning while the boat was in dry dock for the winter here.

The crew of sixteen negroes who had been cleaning the vessel escaped.

The cause of the fire was undetermined.

The boat, an oil burner, had 560 gallons of fuel oil stored near where the fire started, and the explosions of oil tore large portions of the hull and endangered the lives of the firemen.

Several cottages nearby were ignited, but the flames were extinguished without material damage being done.

The warehouse and dry dock were badly damaged.

The total loss is not estimated, but the vessel, which had been running for several years between Buffalo and Chicago, was valued at half a million dollars.

CHILE PRESIDENT RESIGNS HIS JOB

(By Lawrence Haas, United Press Staff Correspondent).

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 9.—President Arthur Alessandri of Chile, who tendered his resignation Saturday night after a group of young army officers had forced him to re-organize his cabinet, was sheltered in the American Embassy here.

The military committee, which virtually has assumed control of affairs did not accept the President's resignation but announced he would be absent from the functions usually demanding his presence temporarily. The committee issued a statement guaranteeing the safety of the chief executive.

The National Congress yesterday afternoon approved by an unanimous vote all the projects presented by the new cabinet headed by General Altamiro and composed equally of army officers and civilians. The projects included the petition presented by a committee of young army officers to President Alessandri on Saturday demanding increased salary for commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the army and militarized police and the navy, modification of the income tax law and a general betterment in the economic status of civil servants.

No disorders accompanied the overthrow of the old cabinet and the new government proceeded with business like efficiency. The stock exchange was closed Friday evening but may re-open to-day.

General Altamiro was hailed as Chiles Mussolini every time he appeared in the streets.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 9. — A. H. McKeel ex-reeve of the town, who has done more than any other man in Campbellford on behalf of the memory of the men from this district killed in the Great War, as the memorial shaft in the erection of which at Trent River, he was the moving spirit testifies, made an address on patriotic lines, at the meeting of the Town Council last night. There are, he said many American yachts passing up and down the Trent Canal and he has noticed that few if any, of these fly the British flag as they are required to do. He suggested that the Council take some action to compel these visitors to comply with international regulations. When Mr. McKeel spoke to an American tourist regarding this matter the visitor's excuse was that he had broken his flag pole.

The Council did all that in the opinion of the Mayor was within their jurisdiction. On motion of Councillors Abernethy and Redden, Clerk McGregor was instructed to write Supt. Killaly of the Trent Canal, requesting him to instruct the lockmasters to allow no boat to pass through unless it flew the British flag.

More Practical Matters

Mr. McKeel called the attention of the Council to move practical matters. He asked for information concerning the bridge at Simpson street the construction of which was decided upon last year but upon which no work has yet been done. He also asked that the creek at that point be cleaned out so as to prevent floods during the spring session, and that an additional light be placed on Inkerman street, between Simpson and Pallister.

No Bridge This Year

There will be no bridge built this year at Simpson street. Mayor Meyers explained that of the $7,000 appropriated for work on roads and bridges nearly $6,000 has already been expended. Repairing the bridge over the Trent River was something for which the Council made no provision when the note was struck and the work had not been decided upon at the time. These repairs will cost the town nearly $4,000 or 25 per cent of the expenditure less the 40 per cent grant that will be received from the Provincial Government Mayor Meyers believes that this unforeseen expense should be paid out of current revenue instead of by the issue of debentures. For this reason he could not see much chance of building the bridge at Simpson street this year in view of the state of the towns finances.

After Mr. McKeel had heard this explanation he stated that so far as he was concerned he was willing to have the matter put over for another year. His mission, however, was not altogether fruitless. It was decided to spend $100 on clearing out the creek and to put up another light on Inkerman street near Simpson, this to be placed under the supervision of Engineer Scott of the Water and Light Commission.

Bonds for Sale

The remainder of the debenture issue $15,000, for the new High School will be advertised for sale as it is believed that they can be disposed of to outside dealers on better terms than if put on the local market These bonds are for 30 years and the rate of interest is 5 1-2 per cent.

Another Financial Question

W. Rutherford asked that King street he opened up and was told that while the work was advisable, the question resolved itself into one of finance.

Caring For Children.

Sanitary Officer Beavis was engaged at $1 a day to guard school children from the west side as they pass over the bridge to and from school during the repairing process. The sidewalk kept open for traffic is not regarded as safe for the younger children, and the contractor has notices posted warning the public that any persons passing over the structure, do so at their own risk. Officer Beavis will act as guardian of the school children in the morning and at noon, and Chief Duncalfe will take care of them on their way home after 4 o'clock.

No Auto Signs.

Councillor Johnston reported that signs to be placed on the main roads at the town limits for the benefit of visiting autoists could not be obtained on favorable terms. He suggested that the matter, be put over for another year, when it is hoped to have a camping ground for auto tourists.

Sewer By-Law.

The plans for the Kent Street sewer will soon be completed, and Clerk McGregor was instructed to have prepared the necessary by-law for its construction.

New Engineer.

J. C. Birmingham has finally been prevailed upon to give his services to the town in the capacity of engineer, and has been engaged to prepare the plans for the sewer on Oliver Road. Mr. Birmingham is an engineer of high standing and did important work for the Government during the construction of the Trent Canal through here.

No New Railing.

Warden W. M. Fowlds, of Hastings, asked, through Clerk McGregor, whether the town would be willing to pay its share of the cost of new railing for the bridge, estimated at $1,800. The Council unanimously decided that the old railing is good enough, as the main structure itself is not new.

The Council adjourned at 9.30, the shortest regular session that has been held this year.

Four members of the Campbellford Company of the Northumberland Regiment, have been promoted following the annual camp, which was held at Cobourg last week. P. J. Kelly, provisional captain for the past year, has been confirmed in that rank. Sergeants W. Ellis, Matt Sergeant and J. Evans, passed successfully the required tests, and now rank as Lieutenants.

Tourist Season Ends.

The last of the summer tourists left Percy Boom on Monday and J. H. Boyce, the proprietor, expects to close the place this week, and return to his home in Warkworth with his family. At present one of his daughters is too ill to move.

Mr. Boyce has had a successful season. At times there were not cottages enough to accommodate the the guests so that it was necessary to erect tents. The tourists included a number from the United States, from Rochester, Detroit and from cities in Ohio.

Mr. Boyce's son, George, who has spent the last three years in Vancouver, is on a visit home.

Quick Returns.

Joseph Hoey of East Seymour, near Campbellford, has an advertisement running in the Examiner offering for sale seed wheat of a special variety. Mr. Hoey has already received some orders, one coming from a farmer in Prescott county.

Hogs Bring $9.50.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY

Breakfast —Baked apples, rolled oats, top milk or cream, crisp whole wheat toast, poached eggs, coffee, milk or cocoa.

Dinner—Broiled porterhouse or sirloin steak, boiled potato wax beans in cream, shredded cabbage, baked pears, plain cup cakes, milk and tea.

Every child needs a substantial breakfast, but the foods must be easily digested. While cream is desirable for its butterfat and vitamins, many children fail to assimilate cream and thrive on rich milk with cereals rather than the heavier cream. Use little or no sugar over cereals. Long cooking brings out the natural sweetness of grain products.

The noon meal is perhaps the most difficult to plan. Salads and elaborate sandwiches that mean so much to grownups are not for youngsters. But a cream soup is liked by everybody and ideal for children. When school begins, the necessity for a nourishing but light luncheon increases. Growing brains and bodies need plenty of tissue-building material to grown on, but the food must be quickly assimilated.

The younger children should not eat meat for dinner. The clear "platter" gravy should be poured over whole wheat bread for their dinner protein.

Even if a child has all of his teeth he seldom masticates his food sufficiently, so keep in mind the necessity of finely chopping vegetables.

Green, fresh vegetables are valuable food for children and as soon as they can be trusted to "chew" they should eat these foods.

Peach Tapioca.

One cup tapioca, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons butter ¼ teaspoon salt, 8 large ripe peaches.

Pare and cut peaches in half. Arrange in a buttered baking dish, cut side up. Sprinkle with sugar and dot with bits of butter. Soak tapioca one hour in cold water to cover. Drain and add to three cups of boiling water. Cook in a double boiler until transparent. Season with salt and pour over peaches in baking dish. Bake thirty to forty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with sugar and cream when cool.

POWER LINE FOR OTONABEE

OVERDUE WATER BILLS.

In response to numerous requests to supply residents of Otonabee residing near the city with the conveniences of electricity, the members of the Utilities Commission at a meeting yesterday afternoon decided to instal a line along the River Road. As this is a Provincial county road it will be necessary to obtain the county's approval, thus arrangements are being made to meet the members of the County Council at an early date.

A lengthy discussion took place in reference to overdue water bills. According to the present system of collection, considerable time and expense is lost in unnecessary running about in the large truck, notifying delinquents that their bills are overdue, and ultimately turning off the power in some cases.

E. F. Mason was of opinion that Mr. Kerneghen could undertake this duty and handle it capably along with his other duties.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., thought that in some instances more money is spent on collection of accounts than the accounts themselves were worth, and suggested that unless satisfactory arrangements were made to the contrary with Mr. Henderson that after one notice the power should be turned off in default of payment.

It was suggested by Mr. George Henderson that the task of collecting water and light accounts and the severing of the power or water connection in default of payment should be left in the hands of one man. This proposel met with approval as it was felt that money could be saved by harmonizing the water and light departments in this regard. At the next meeting proposals will be brought in by Messrs. Henderson and Ross Dobbin, when the matter of collecting overdue water and light accounts will receive its disposition.

Mr. J. Oulette, formerly ace twirler for the Lindsay Greybirds and for two years past with Belleville Trunks was in town for a few hours this morning, having been called from his home at Fenelon Falls, back to Belleville. Jack does not know what is trump, exactly, but anticipates that Belleville will be called on to play off for the championship of the Central League against Oshawa. His throwing arm, he states, is in an A1 condition and he would like to get back into the game again after the long rest.

Referring to the Peterboro-Kingston episode which has upset the dope in the C.O.B.L., Jack has very little to say, except that Peterboro should have been the last club in the league to squeal after being so thoroughly beaten on the field.—Lindsay Post.

SEAN TRUIBHIS.

A memory of Highland Proscription.

At this season, when the Highland games in Scotland are in full swing, and expert performers of the Scottish national dances are much in evidence in Canada, a few observattions o none of these dances may be appropriate.

It is rather remarkable that of the five Scottish national dances three of them have Gaelic names—Gille Calum, Righil a' Thulaichaen (the "Reel o' Tulloch"), and Sean Truibhis; and the other two are called Highland— the Highland reel, and the Highland fling.

Sean Truibhis is often spelled phonetically — Shan, Shaun, and Shawn Trews— and the equivalent English is Old Breeches, and the Scots is Auld Breeks.

Historically, ,the dance is understood to have had its origin subsequent to the Prince Charlie adventure, when ths kilt was proscribed, and the Highlander was compelled to adopt the dress of the Lowlander which he scornfully designates as Sean Truibhis.

Though the name of the dance would not lead one to expect much in the way of dress, yet the dancer is always neatly attired in tight-fitting trews of tweed or tartan cloth, with suitable tunic, stockings, and bonnet.

In his evolutions,the dancer seems to aim at gracefulness rather than vigour (though vigour may also be displayed); as if the Highlander, whom he represent, were seeking to conform to the polish and refinement of the Lowlands, or to win the favour of some Lowland lass.

The tune invariably associated with the dance is the well-known common-time tune, ,"Whistle o'er the Lave o't," played at about march ing time. Towards the close of the dance, however, at a signal from the dancer, the piper quickens the music to Strathspey time, and the dancer finishes off with a step or two of the Highland fling, thus coming out in his true character of a Highlander in disguise.

The Paisley poet, Robert Tannahill (1774-1810), in enumerating the attractions of a rustic wedding, makes reference to a performer of this dance;—

Sawney M'Nab, wi' his tartan trews,
Has hecht to come down in the midst o' the caper,
And gie's us three wallops o' merry Shan Trews,, Wi' the true Highland fling o' Macrimmon the piper.

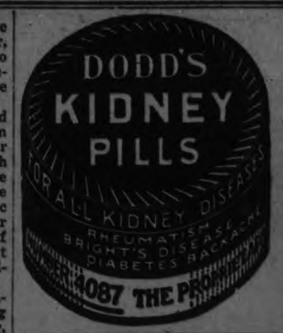
From what has been stated, it will be recognized that, though Sean Truibhis is occasionally danced in the kilt,, trews is the appropriate dress.

OIL THE WRINGER.

If the wringer works with difficulty, put a little kerosene oil on the cogs and work them for a few seconds, then wipe and put in a few drops of machine oil.



THE REASON.

Teacher was holding forth with reference to the circulation of the blood. Trying to make the matter clearer, he said:

"Now, boys, if I stood on my head, the blood, as you know, would run into it and I should turn red in the face."

"Yes, sir," chorused the pupils.

"Now," continued the teacher, "what I want to know is this: How is it that while I am standing upright in the ordinary position the blood doesn't run into my feet?"

PETERBOROUGH'S DUTY.

"Nineteen twenty-four registered a new record attendance for the Canadian National Exhibition, which ended Saturday night. This week the Western Fair at London and the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa throw open their gates.

"Scores of other Fairs—big and little—in all parts of the country follow in their wake. The Globe urges the good people of every community and district to make this a year of records 'All Down the Line.'

"Here is a homely and practical way of wooing 'good times,' in which every citizen can help. Cheerful crowds and gratified exhibitors everywhere do much to stimulate business and spread the heartening flavour of confidence which heralds prosperity."

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition opens tomorrow.

It is the plain duty of every citizen of this city and district to see that a new record is reached.

As the Globe's heartening message points out: "Here is a homely and a practical way of wooing 'good times' in which every citizen can help."

The effect upon business of a record-breaking Fair must necessarily be marked.

Canada is suffering to some extent from a lack of confidence on the part of Canadians in themselves and in the natural resources of their grea country.

A series of successful exhibitions in all parts of the country would have a very beneficial result in restoring confidence, and it is up to this district to see that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition takes its place in the list of those reaching new attendance levels.

TOO MANY LAWS.

The report that some ultra-modest residents of Michigan propose agitating for a State law that will prevent motorists from decorating the window-shields of their cars with pictures of girls with red bathing suits is another proof of the fact that this Continent is suffering from an overdose of silly laws, passed by weak politicians at the instance of fanatical groups.

Just where the habit of using these bathing girl pictures as decorations started is not clear.

There is nothing in the pictures that should jar the sensibilities of the most prudish citizen.

Yet good folks in Michigan propose to have the law step in and banish the bathing girls.

There could be only one thing more ridiculous than the use of these pictures for decorative purposes, and that would be a statute, making such a custom illegal.

As a matter of fact, the United States, as are we on this side of the line, is the victim of too much legislation.

There are regulations governing our almost every action—blue laws, blue sky laws, dry laws.

Hundreds of acts, their number added to each year as fresh groups with a bee in their bonnet snell out a new evil in something that seems quite harmless to the majority, are passed until no one is quite sure that anything he does is entirely legal.

What is the end to be?

CONFIDENCE IN THE WEST.

An experienced newspaper observer commissioned to investigate Western crops and general conditions thoroughly sums up his series of articles with the concluding statement: "The West has never been so imbued as today with down-right unadorned confidence in its own future."

That is most welcome news.

If the West has recovered its confidence the whole Dominion will sooner or later feel the benefit, even if the greater part of the money obtained from this year's crops will go toward reducing bank loans and into savings bank accounts, rather than to the purchase of Eastern goods.

During the last two sessions of Parliament it has seemed that the people of the West had lost all faith in the future of that section of the country.

Progressive member after Progressive member has stood up in the House and almost wept as he pictured the Prairie Provinces as a land of bankrupt, disillusioned families.

After reading two or three of these gloomy orations in Hansard, the average reader could not fail to arrive at the conclusion that the West was a country of blasted hopes, a desert from which the people were fleeing in dismay.

It is heartening, therefore, to find that there is a new spirit abroad west of Winnipeg, and that the people are looking forward to the future with hearty courage.

THE CANADIAN NATIONAL.

There is no stopping the Canadian National Exhibition.

Canada's big Fair, the greatest annual event of its kind in the world, closed its gates on Saturday night, having set up a record attendance for the two weeks of 1,519,000 people.

Only yesterday an attendance of one million seemed almost impossible of accomplishment.

Canadians will hail this showing as a concrete demonstration of what Canadian enterprise, vision, energy and perserverance can accomplish.

They will also rightly view the result as a sign of better times, as a barometer of conditions changing in Canada toward an era of prosperity.

Great is the Canadian National; there is nothing quite like it anywhere in the world, and every year finds it marching ahead to new triumphs.

Already plans are under way for huge extensions next year.

That is the spirit of the management.

No standing still—what is ample for 1924 will not suffice for 1925.

It is this optimism that makes it impossible to even conjecture when the Canadian National will reach the limit of expansion.

There are as yet no signs that that time is in sight.

USE OF TIME.

The cool evenings are here, and many preparations are being made for their utilization. Young people, particularly those of school-leaving age, have the choice of profitable recreation or of recreation which is not only not profitable but sometimes harmful. What shall the choice be? asks the Hamilton Spectator in an editorial for young people. These bracing Canadian autumn evenings invite to indoor occupation; the summer, with its round of open-air sports and pleasures, has gone; the place of these must be take nby something else, and there is no reason why that something else should not be just as enjoyable. It is the usual thing to envy people living in more equable climates—places where the temperature keeps warm all the year round; but they must experience a certain amount of monotony, and no healthy boy or girl would willingly give up the delights of the Canadian winter for the more enervating life of southern lands. One thing which the cool season brings with it is a greater desire and a greater capacity for indoor work. Work, perhaps, is not the right word—let us say, rather, the indulgence of hobbies. Now is the time to make ready for the fall and winter seasons; a program should be arranged and faithfully adhered to.

It is a regrettable, but perhaps not unnatural fact, that boys and girls leaving school are apt to put behind them all their past efforts, and concern themselves only with that which they consider immediately advantageous to their financial prospects. Past studies are looked upon merely as a phase of life which has been lived through and is done with for good and all. School, however, is only the preparation for after-years. Nothing that has been learned is entirely useless, from the point of view of the development of personality. School days never really end; there is always something new to learn, and the more that is learned the better it is for the well-being of the individual, whether or not material rewards may come. There are two alternatives before young people as to the way they shall spend their time. It can be wasted in idle pleasures, which, at best, bring only temporary enjoyment and frequently leave disappointment in their wake; or it can be invested in profitable pursuits which are bound to return large dividends in after-satisfaction.

HERRIOT REPLIES.

Premier Herriot, representing the radical and pacific wing of French opinion, goes just as far as the spokesman of a beleagured nation dare in endorsing the idealism of the British Prime Minister. He echoes every "Ah, my friends" and "alas!" in Ramsay MacDonald's rhapsodic address; but he also insists upon somewhat spoiling the harmony by dragging in the dissonant word "security." France is quite willing to attend the Labor leader's love-feast, and chant "Hosannas" as lustily as anybody; but it would like to have an armed guard set at the door to discourage any sons of Belial who might feel tempted to try "pot-shots" at individual members of the angel choir.

"Arbitration," by all means, says Premier Herriot. Far be it from him to even appear to oppose so noble and beneficent a policy. He will praise the lofty principle of "arbitration" with anybody, and as roundly condemn those unspeakably wicked persons and nations that will not loyally accept this bloodless method of settling quarrels; but it is nevertheless his duty as the spokesman of a country which has been invaded by Germany three times in a little over a century to mildly point out that "the principle of arbitration is not sufficient for security."

"Justice" is another fine principle. Show us the man who will admit that he is not ardently in favor of "justice!" But, says Premier Herriot, "justice without force is insufficient." Quite so. Our representatives who are keeping the condemned murderers of the Hochelaga Bank hold-up in Bordeaux jail—with more or less difficulty—have noticed this same fact. In Heaven, justice may be enough—arbitration may settle all angelic differences—right can be divorced from might. But down on this still somewhat imperfect sphere, in spite of the fact that we now have radical governments all the way from London to Moscow, the law would not be much of a terror to the intentional or determined criminal if there were no police, judiciary or prison gates behind it.

M. Herriot seemed minded to prove that he was as good a friend of arbitration as anybody. He also labored to show that he and his party in France were all for the League of Nations. Grim old Clemenceau was not. Poincare has more faith in French arms. But Herriot must keep in step with his Socialistic supporters. This accounts for his constant and repeated endorsement of the MacDonald position on this question.

But Herriot, the Frenchman, could not put all his eggs in that fragile basket. Small nations must be protected by large ones, as Belgium was in the late war. "Right must be mighty." Disarmament was not a task which could be accomplished hastily. Premier MacDonald had already expressed the opinion that the conference dealing with that delicate subject should be held in Europe, near to the scene of trouble. It is Europe which will have to undergo the operation of disarmament—not America. More would probably be promised in the beatific atmosphere of Washington, but more real progress would be made in Paris.

It is only fair for us of the British Empire to remember that, in urging arbitration and disarmament upon the French we are recommending medicine which we will not be asked to take. To invite the French to reduce their land forces below the strength which they regard as essential—and if they now keep a man above that limit they must be mad—would be very much as if Great Britain were asked to prove the sincerity of her belief in "arbitration" and international tribunals and the league of Nations by reducing her navy below the line of safety. Even MacDonald, in his most millenial mood, would no tbe allowed to do that.—Montreal Star.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, September 9 (Canadian Press). — Export business in grain in the local market yesterday was reported quiet, the prices bid being generally out of line with the advance in Winnipeg. There was a fair inquiry from New York exporters here for No. 1 and No. 2 Northern wheat at 18 3-4 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option for No. 1 and 11 3-4 cents per bushel for No. 2. The trade in car lots of spot oats was limited, the demand being slow.

The market for spring wheat grades of flour was weak and millers generally reduced prices 10 cents a barrel. An active business continues for export and especially so with the continent. There was no change in the market for winter wheat grades of flour.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for all grades of millfeed, and prices were cut $2.00 a ton. This is due to the limited demand and the steady accumulation if supplies. The tone of the rolled oats market is steady.

The market for baled hay was without new feature. A fair business continues in eggs under a steady demand. An easier feeling prevailed in butter owing to the somewhat limited demand and the liberal quantity coming forward.

A weaker feeling was shown in cheese and the prices were off 1-4 cent to 1-2 cents per pound, due to the small demand from English importers and the heavy stocks on hand. Business generally was very quiet.

Demand for old crop beans was good at $2.95 to $3.00 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 9 (Canadian Press).— Unfavourable weather conditions in Canada, as well as in Europe and Argentina, led to higher prices yesterday for wheat. Closing quotations in the wheat market here were firm at 1-4c to 7-8c net gain, with December $1.27 5-8 to $1.27 3-4 and May $1.34.

Corn finished at 1-4c decline to 1-2 advance.

Oats 3-8c to 5-8c off.

Unexpected firmness of wheat quotations at Liverpool helped to start the market upward here from the outset, especially as the Liverpool strength was associated with crop damage complaints from Canada, enseasonable cold and rain in Europe, and with drought and rain in Argentina. At first, however, export demand lacked volume, and this fact operated as something of a weight on values. Subsequently, export business became sufficiently energetic to offset hedging sales of new wheat and with further advices of injury by frost in Canada, the Chicago market showed a renewed upward swing.

Wheat closed at virtually the day's top figures here, influenced in particular by a bulge in prices at Winnipeg. Previous sellers in Chicago were active purchasers just before business ended. One of the incentives to buy was an assertion that pound for pound wheat is three cents a bushel cheaper than corn.

Wet, cool weather furnished some strength to the corn market, but was largely offset by increased offerings. On other hand, frost was predicted for last night over parts of the North-West, and the visible supply decreased 175,000 bushels.

ENGLAND LIKES SODA BARS.

Installed 37,920 American Fountains in Four Months.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—England is said to be buying more American soda fountains now than are being sold in America. Figures available for the first four months of 1924 place the number of fountains sold and set up in England at 37,920.

So popular is the soda becoming here that it is now a common sight to see fountains in chemists' shops (drug stores), a daring innovation. Many of the small villages also have soda fountains, not as competitors of the public houses, but installed in them.

PETERBOROUGH'S RECORD OF PROGRESS

Fourteen years ago Peterborough Industrial Exhibition offered $3,500 in premiums. This year $10,000 is offered in prizes.

Fourteen years ago the Exhibition was in its eighth year, a lusty child ministered to by such men as T. E. Bradburn, Hon. J. R. Stratton, D. W. Dumble, R. H. Leary, J. H. Garbutt and S. F. Redmond. Some of the men who were so ardent supporters in 1910 have passed on, but their handiwork remains. F. J. A. Hall is Secretary, as he was fourteen years ago, and many of the same firms patronize the prize list this year that were represented in 1910.

Progress in Everything.

The world has progressed much since Thursday, September 15, 1910, when the eighth Fair opened, and the advancement in all branches of industry and agriculture has been chronicled year by year in the exhibits at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Year after year has seen the latest dresses on display in the beautiful stalls of the retail merchants.

In 1910 the well dressed young woman viewed the exhibits decorously from the shadow of a large flowery hat, and was prevented from strenuous exercise by the limitations of a constrict waistline.

The young lady's mother, who probably wore her last year's dress for the occasion, was hampered by her multidudinous flounces from participating in any of the more active incidents of the Fair. Her principal duty probably was to chaperone her daughter, who was doubtless compelled to trail around many wearing exhibits when she would have preferred the excitement of the amusement park.

At this year's Exhibition it will be difficult to distinguish between mother and daughter, for modern women retain their youthful appearance in spite of passing years. The picture at the left, below, is of the latest in fall styles.

A comparison of these pictures will recall the old styles to all but the veriest flappers, and will conjure up pictures of the good old days for many who will take part in the festivities this year.

Men Change, Too.

Fourteen years ago an advertisement in the prize list drew attention to the "new ideas and style kinks" in evidence in the firm's fall suits, and accompanying the ad. was the picture at the right, below. Even the most old-fashioned person on the grounds this year would think twice before parading as this portly gentleman did in 1910.

While the ladies have forsaken the wasp waist for comfort, their men friends have given up the square coats for form-fitting suits.

And as a further commentary on the change that fourteen years has brought to the personal appearance of the Peterborough people who take part in this twenty-second Exhibition, the picture at the left of a then beautiful head of hair is eloquent.

As the Prince of Wales remarked in an interview, he may be old-fashioned in his preference of woman's retaining her mass of hair. When Peterborough Fair of 1910 favored the style in this picture the Prince was a mere schoolboy of 16.

This week will see the majority of girls, and probably their mothers, with the latest bob, a further step in the record of progress.

HEART ATTACK

strain and the worry of the last three months, and particularly of these days of waiting, is well nigh impossible to bear."

Resembles "Broken Heart."

Muscular weakness of the heart is the affliction from which Mr. Loeb is suffering.

"When people die of a broken heart, as the phrase goes, it is this muscular inflammation that causes death, largely brought on by grief and worry," said the specialist.

The average man in Mr. Loeb's physical condition would be unable to stand a shock, and the shock of Judge Caverly's verdict might be too much for a weak heart to sustain, but the specialist believes Mr. Loeb will be able to weather it, whatever it is.

"Mr. Loeb is a very brilliant and fine man and a philosopher as well—almost a stoic," he said. "He has prepared himself for either verdict, and I believe he will be able to stand the shock. But he will be physically unable to come to Chicago, had it ever been his intention to come."

Members of the family deny that such has been Mr. Loeb's intention. Allan Loeb, Dick's oldest brother, returned to-day from Charlevoix, where he has been since the Franks case was concluded.

DEAF HUSBAND KISSED OTHER WOMAN TOO LOUD

FULTON, N.Y., Sept. 8.—Because Harry Lefler, formerly of Fulton, now of Binghampton, kissed another woman right out loud, his wife, Catherine, of Campville, Tioga County, has been granted an interlocutory decree of divorce.

"He was hard of hearing, and I often heard him kissing the woman." This was the testimony of James W. Ullyette, of Danville, where Lefler is alleged to have lived with the "other woman".

"He called her 'Wninie,' and he often called her endearing names that I can't remember," Ullyette, who lived in an apartment adjoining Lefler's, testified.

LIBERIA ACCEPTS ARMS LIMITATION

Majority of Larger Powers Refused To Accept Any Restrictions.

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

GENEVA, September 8. — Little Liberia alone of all the nations of the world, to-lay flatly accepted a request by the League of Nations that as a preliminary to disarmament, the members promise not to exceed this year their 1923 naval, military, and aviation appropriations.

The majority of the Governments, including Britain, Portugal, Roumania, Spain, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, and Italy, replied announcing a desire to reduce armaments, but declining to accept any restrictions.

FABLES ON HEALTH

ON BLOWING NOSES.

Dirty noses might generally be found upon the Mann children, particularly after they had been playing in the streets and back yards.

This was always more than a little annoying to Mrs. Mann, who tried to teach them to keep their noses clean.

And like most mothers there was one thing she could not tolerate: that was the picking of the nose with their fingers. Alas, this is not confined to children, and, besides being a practice disgusting to most people, is most unsanitary.

Many infections have resulted.

Children playing about, paying little attention to what they handle, suddenly jab a germ-covered finger in the nose and send them into the body.

Also few people blow their noses properly. One nostril should be closed by pressure of the handkerchief, and each nostril should be blown separately. There should be no more force used than is positively necessary, as serious troubles have risen from this cause.

TIGER TRIMMING

Tiger and leopard are to be used extensively for bandings and trimmings on cloth dresses and coats.

RED FOX

Red fox used on black materials is an innovation this season and the effect is much more stunning than it sounds.

LOTS OF CAPES

SILK AND CRETONNE.

Silk and cretonne have joined their forces this year to the advantage of both.

USED DISTINCTIVELY

Fur is used very distinctively this season. Instead of the bands that are generally seen are triangles and disks of fur used like embroidery.

Home Made Bread is good for the Kiddies

FATHER COLLAPSES

the circumstances that resulted in the double wedding. The aged banker was revealed as so enamoured of his clever, beautiful daughters that he forbade them the company of any friends of their own set.

To keep his daughters exclusively to himself and to have them as his sole companions, he turned Groton Place into a huge girls' camp or convent for their use.

Seeking to keep romance entirely out of their lives, he engineered countless activities for the daughters, thinking that by banishing idleness from their lives, he could make them content.

For Emily, the elder, he built extensive kennels and stocked them with dogs of high pedigree. A lover of dogs, she welcomed the kennels. She specialized in Pe-

School Boys Employed.

For Kate, the younger daughter, he had constructed one of the finest chicken farms in the country. To help both daughters conduct their establishments, the father gave employment to high school boys after school hours.

Among the school boys who worked about the chicken farm a few years ago was Darwin Spurr Morse, son of the former garage man of Lenox. Young Morse did his work so well that on his graduation the aged banker instructed his superintendent to employ him full time.

Morse did not stay long in the Winthrop employ. One report is that the aged aristocrat caught the former high school boy making love to Kate and discharged him on the spot.

Morse went to work as an electrician for the Southern Berkshire Power Company. More recently he worked for Benaminj Rogers, a local contracting electrician. In this work he often did odd jobs about the Winthrop estate and renewed his romance with Kate.

Miles, bridegroom of the elder sister, Emily, was revealed Sunday as the widower whom he described himself to be on the notice of marriage intentions.

Chauffeur's Romance.

Several years ago Miles, then employed as gardener on the Winthrop estate, went to Pittsfield one night to see a play performed by the Mike Sacks Musical Comedy Company, then booked for a week in that city. He fell in love with one of the actresses, married her and took her to live with him in one of the cottages on the Winthrop estate. The actress soon tired of the simple life and left the Miles cottage.

Recently Miles started proceedings for divorce. A sheriff who tried to serve the papers learned that the former actress had come to New York to live, and changed her name and had died.

Lenox villagers said that they had remarked often this season that Emily Winthrop and Miles, the chauffeur, were constantly riding about the country roads. The stylish coupe was often seen parked on shady roads in the afternoon.

Village Matchmaker.

While the romances of the daughters flourished under the very nose of their stern old father, there entered into their life, villagers and the inevitable matchmaker.

Mrs. Thomas F. Morse, fifty-five, a widow, clever and a good strategist, also mother of young Morse, is credited with bringing the romances of the heiresses to a successful conclusion.

It was Mrs. Morse, say the villagers, who encouraged the chauffeur in his suit for Emily's hand. At any rate, Mrs. Morse was at the secret wedding. So were her daughter and the latter's husband, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hall, and Oscar Hutchinson, to whom Morse's father had taught the tricks of the garage business.

Mrs. Morse is rated by her neighbors as a very clever woman and a shrewd strategist. She refused smilingly to divulge any information she might have as to her new daughters-in-law's whereabouts.

Whoever planned the double wedding selected an opportune time. Winthrop was called to New York on Friday on business and it was known that he would not be in Lenox until late on Saturday afternoon.

Instead of Miles, his chauffeur, meeting him, as was his custom, Winthrop was met by a local garage chauffeur, who told him that Miles had been suddenly called away.

Father Suspicious.

The chauffeur disclosed that the aged banker sort of voiced his suspicions that something was in the wind even then. The local man said:

"He asked me a lot of questions,

Winthrop was met at the door of Groton Place by Miss Helen Holmes, fifty-five-year-old spinster, who has been acting as secretary to the Winthrop girls. She first went to the family as a governess and it was she who instructed the girls in foreign languages.

Since the girls had been pursuing their art studies and busying themselves with the dogs and chickens, she has acted as their secretary.

Winthrop immediately telephoned to Moses's garage, in Lenox. He learned that the Packard coupe of Miss Emily and the Packard runabout of Miss Kate were not in the garage. His suspicions were confirmed later when news of the elopement and wedding reached him from the village.

AUSTRALIA'S ANSWER.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—Federal Premier Stanley M. Bruce says that if the other Dominions desire a Dominions conference to be convened in London in October, Australia could be represented by the Commonwealth Attorney-General, Sir Littleton Groom, who is now at the Geneva Conference.

A physician's formula for excessive perspiration

SOMETIMES Nature's wisest provisions become a source of keen distress. Perspiration, for instance—a wonderful means of regulating the body temperature.

Yet it is a very common thing, even in the healthiest persons, for this function to become so extreme in certain parts of the body as to cause great discomfort and embarrassment. This is due to a local irregularity of the sweat glands which physicians call Hyperidrosis.

Medical authorities agree that this condition should be corrected by local application.

For this very purpose Odorono was first formulated years ago by a physician. It has been brought to scientific perfection by years of laboratory research and study of abnormal perspiration. Physicians and nurses recognize its value and use it in hospitals as a safe, scientific corrective.

The regular use of this clear, antiseptic liquid just twice a week gives complete relief from the discomfort of excessive moisture; keeping your clothing fresh, dry and unstained. And, most of all, you may have absolute assurance that you will never offend with that unpardonable lapse of personal daintiness—underarm odor!

3,000,000 people now depend upon Odorono as their one safeguard against disagreeable perspiration moisture and odor. You may enjoy perfect relief in this harmless way which physicians recommend. Odorono is obtainable at all toilet counters, 35c, 60c and $1, or sent by mail postpaid. Address The Odorono Company, Ltd., 107 Duke Street, Toronto.

FROST IN WEST.

Damage So Far Has Been Exceedingly Light.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—With favorable progress reported in the cutting of wheat in the three prairie provinces, the yield is proving fully up to expectations, and in many instances exceeding earlier estimates, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway agricultural department. There is still considerable late grain in more northerly portions of each province which will not be past frost danger for another week, the report states. Frost has been reported from a number of districts, but damage has been exceedingly light.

GERMAN LIGHTS TRAP PEST.

Millions of Moths are Cremated by Device Used to Save Forests.

BRESLAU, Silesia, September 8.—Searchlight traps to rid the country of a plague of insects have been tried out successfully along the German-Polish frontier, where the great pine forests suffered from the ravages of swarms of caterpillars, the larvae of a species of nocturnal moth.

Searchlights were set up at night at points in and near the forests, attracting the moths in myriads numbers and luring them into the powerful rays of light near the incandescent carbons, where they were created by the millions.

In some instance, electric fans were used to whirl the moths into the "flame" and bring about quicker results.

The light traps are to be used in other parts of Germany where the pest has appeared.

DIVIDE ON BRITISH TARIFF.

Labor Representatives Fail to Harmonize Differences at Hull.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Division in trade union ranks on the question of free trade or protection was recognized at the concluding session of the Trade Union Congress at Hull Saturday by introduction of a resolution inviting the new general council of the Congress to suggest to the Labor Party the establishment of a joint committee to investigate the problem of free trade, protection and imperial preference. It was pointed out that it would be necessary to investigate industries separately and consider how the various fiscal arrangements would affect them.

The resolution was proposed by a delegate from the Printing, Bookbinding and Paper Workers' Union, but it did not find favor in the Congress. The representation of the Lancashire weavers, who have always been stalwart free traders, opposed it. It was defeated and the attempt to harmonize labor differences of view, which, as was pointed out, came prominently to the front in the discussions concerning the McKenna duties, failed.

Mrs. Darling Died at Her Home in Dummer Last Tuesday.

WAS LONG ILL

WARSAW, Sept. 8.—Results of Douro and Dummer Agricultural Society field crop competition. Oats 1, Arthur Edwards, 92 points; 2, Gordon Payne, 76 points; 3, Fred Fitzgerald, 75 points; 4, David Rose, 73 points; 5, Fred Morgan 70 points; 6 William Hayes, 68 points; 7, James Hawthorne 67 points. There were three others in the competition, but prizes are given the first seven.

There are some beautiful fields of corn. Allan U. Payne has eight acres well worth anyone seeing. Theshed grain weighs very heavy.

Funeral of Mrs. Darling

The funeral of the late Martha Batten, wife of John Darling, Reeve of Dummer, took place this (Wednesday) afternoon. It was very large ly attended. Rev. F. G. Weir conducted the service. Henry Batten sang. The bearers were six nephews: Henry and Ernest Batten, Alec and Albert Batten, Hilliard and Richard Darling. There were very many beautiful floral tributes.

After a lingering illness, Mrs. Darling passed away Tuesday morning. She had apparently, been some better, and many entertained hopes she might be up again. So that the end came suddenly. She was a devoted wife and mother and had she lived until the 19th of this month would have celebrated the thirty-sixth anniversary of her wedding.

She was born fifty-nine years ago on the farm where her brother Richard Batten now lives. Besides her husband she leaves four children, Harold, married living near his father, William married, living in Douro Alberta and Rayfeld at home, also four brothers, all in Dummer, Richard William, Jacob and Albert Batten and two sisters, Mrs. Peter Carveth and Mrs. Tucker.

Mrs. Darling was a member of the Methodist church.

SEASON IS OVER FOR STONEY LAKE

Few of Cottages Still Open, But Will Soon Close Up.

STONEY LAKE, Sept. 9.—The campers have nearly all disappeared, the cool September nights have banished all but the very greatest of enthusiasts among campers and the cosy little nooks are minus the white canvas tent and the activity which prevails in the vicinity of the camp. While the tent season is nearly over there are still a goodly number of cottages open and many pleasant parties are held among the September crowd. Quiet little card parties, which lack the excitement of a large crowd are very attractive to many and given a fair day there is no time which is so pleasant for a picnic. One need not pity but can surely envy those lucky people who can spend September on Stoney Lake.

Call of the Loon.

As the days shorten and the evenings lengthen one hears at the lake more and more often the "laugh of the lonesome loon," it sounds over and over across the dark lake and is said to be a sign that rain is near. Whatever truth there is in the legend the cry of the loon is one of the sounds of the fall evenings.

Cranes and gulls are increasing in numbers and wise birds that they are knowing that the government protects them, they fly about openly and on the flat rocks which lie close to the water's edge one sees gulls in dozens sunning themselves.

It is a remarkable thing that at the present time there is just the slightest hint in a few places of the leaves changing color. Ususally at this season the change in coloring is quite pronounced, but evidently the late spring forecasts a late fall.

McDougal's Point has been a place of considerable activity with four summer cottages and a small hotel besides numerous camps. One can foreshadow the time when this will be one of the ports of call and that a Cottagers' Association will be formed and probably a regatta held there. The point is one of the prettiest on Lake Katchewanooka and has certainly achieved a deserved popularity.

NEWS ROSENEATH.

Roseneath Women's Institute Held Meeting.

ROSENEATH, September 9. — The regular meeting of the Roseneath Women's Institute for the month of September was held at the home of Mrs. Lottie Nichol on Thursday afternoon, with twenty-three ladies present.

The branch had intended putting on a play in the near future, but it was not thought wise at the present busy season. Therefore, they have decided to hold an old-fashioned tea meeting shortly.

The programme had to be left over for another meeting, as the business part or the meeting took up so much time.

The meeting was closed with the hostess serving a dainty lunch.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Barton Thackeray on 2nd October.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, is betrother to Rosamund Godolphin; but because of personal enmity growing out of land disputes the marriage is opposed by both Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. Peter takes every opportunity to manifest his antagonism. In a drunken rage one day, in the presence of Parson Flack and Justice Baine, he insults Sir Oliver, strikes him with his whip and rides off. Uttering a threat to kill him, Oliver starts in furious pursuit. But as his anger cools he realizes that Rosamund would never forgive him if he should harm her brother and he turns his horse homeward.

But Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, that evening accomplishes what Oliver would have liked to do, and comes home wounded from the encounter. Peter, still drunk, Lionel relates, and in a fit of jealous anger over a woman, had affronted him and drawn his sword; his own he drew merely in self-defense. But with no witnesses to attest to the truth of this statement Lionel could be accused of Peter's murder were his part in it to be known. Terror-stricken, he extracts a promise from Oliver to tell no one of his wounds.

CHAPTER V
THE BUCKLER

It was old Nicholas who brought the news next morning to the brothers as they were breaking their fast.

Lionel should have kept his bed that day; but dare not, lest the fact should arouse suspicion. He had a little fever, the natural result both of his wound and of his loss of blood; he was inclined to welcome rather than deplore it, since it set a flush on cheeks that otherwise must have looked too pale.

So leaning upon his brother's arm he came down to a breakfast of herrings and small ale before the tardy sun of that December morning was well risen.

Nicholas burst in upon them with a white face and shaking limbs. He gasped out his tale of the event in a voice of terror, and both brothers affected to be shocked, dismayed and incredulous. But the worst part of the old man's news, the true cause of his terrible agitation, was yet to be announced.

"And they do zay," he cried with anger quivering through his fear, "they do zay that it were you that killed he, Sir Oliver!"

"I?" quoth Sir Oliver, staring, and suddenly like a flood there burst upon his mind a hundred reasons, overlooked until this moment, that inevitably must urge the countryside to this conclusion, and to this conclusion only.

"Where heard you that foul lie?"

In the tumult of his mind he never heeded what answer was returned by Nicholas. There was one course to take, and he must take it instantly—as he had taken it once before in like case. He must go straight to Rosamund to forestall the tale that others would carry to her. God send he did not come too late already.

He stayed for no more than to get his boots and hat then to the stables for a horse, and he was away over the short mile that divided Penarrow from Godolphin Court, going by bridle track and meadow straight to his goal. He met none until he fetched up in the courtyard at Godolphin Court. Thence a babble of excited voices had reached him as he approached. But at sight of him there fell a general silence, ominous and staring. A dozen men or more were assembled there, and their eyes considered him first with amazement and curiosity, then with sullen anger.

He leaped down from his saddle, and stood a moment waiting for one of the three Godolphin grooms he had perceived in that assembly to take his reins. Seeing that none stirred——

"How now?" he cried. "Does no one wait here? Hither, sirrah, and hold my horse."

The groom addressed hesitated a moment, then, under the stare of Sir Oliver's hard, commanding eye, he shuffled sullenly forward to do as he was bid. A murmur ran through the group. Sir Oliver flashed a glance upon it, and every tongue trembled into silence.

In that silence he strode up the steps, and entered the rush-strewn hall. As he vanished he heard the hubbub behind him break out anew, fiercer than it had been before. But he nothing heeded it.

He found himself face to face with a servant, who shrank before him, staring as those in the courtyard had stared. His heart sank. It was plain that he came a little late already; that the tale had got there ahead of him.

"Where is your mistress?" said he.

"I—I will tell her you are here, Sir Oliver," the man replied in a voice that faltered; and he passed through a doorway on the right.

Sir Oliver stood a moment tapping his boots with his whip, his face pale, a deep line between his brows. Then the man reappeared, closing the door after him.

"Mistress Rosamund bids you depart, sir. She will not see you."

A moment Sir Oliver scanned the servant's face—or appeared to scan it, for it is doubtful if he saw the fellow at all. Then for only answer he strode toward the door from which the man had issued. The servant set his back to it, his face resolute.

"Sir Oliver, my mistress will not see you."

"Out of my way!" he muttered in his angry, contemptuous fashion, and as the man persistent in his duty stood his ground, Sir Oliver took him by the breast of his jacket, heaved him aside and went in.

She was standing in mid-apartment, dressed by an odd irony all in bridal white, that yet was not as white as was her face. Her eyes like two black stains, solemn and haunting as they fastened upon this intruder who would not be refused. Her lips parted, but she had no word for him. She just stared in a horror that routed all his audacity and checked the masterfulness of his advance. At last he spoke.

"I see that you have heard," said he, "the lie that runs the countryside. That is evil enough. But I see that you have lent an ear to it; and that is worse."

She continued to regard him with a cold look of loathing.

"Rosamund!" he cried, and approached her by another step. "Rosamund! I am here to tell you that t is a lie."

"You had best go," she said, and her voice had in it a quality that made him tremble.

"Go?" he echoed stupidly. "You bid me go? You will not hear me?"

"I consented to hear you more than once; refused to hear others who knew better than I, and was heedless of their warnings. There is no more to be said between us. I pray God that they may take and hang you."

He was white to the lips, and for the first time in his life he knew fear and felt his great limbs trembling under him.

"They may hang me and welcome since you believe this thing. They could not hurt me more than you are doing, nor by hanging me could they deprive me of aught I value, since your faith in me is a thing to be blown upon by the first rumor of the countryside."

He saw the pale lips twist themselves into a dreadful smile.

"There is more than rumor, I think," said she. "There is more than all your lies will ever serve to cloak."

"My lies?" he cried. "Rosamund, I swear to you by my honor that I have had no hand in the slaying of Peter. May God rot me where I stand if this be not true!"

"It seems," said a harsh voice behind him, "that you fear God as little as aught else."

He wheeled sharply to confront Sir John Killigrew, who had entered after him.

"So," he said slowly, and his eyes grew hard and bright as agates, "this is your work."

And he waved a hand toward Rosamund. It was plain to what he alluded.

"My work?" quoth Sir John.

He closed the door, and advanced into the room.

"Sir, it seems your audacity, your shamelessness transcends all bounds. Your——"

"Have done with that," Sir Oliver interrupted him, and smote his great fist upon the table.

He was suddenly swept by a gust of passion.

"Leave words to fools, Sir John, and criticisms to those than can defend them better."

"Aye, you talk like a man of blood. You come hectoring it here in the very house of the dead—in the very house upon which you have cast this blight of sorrow and murder——"

"Have done, I say, or murder there will be!"

His voice was a roar, his mien terrific. And bold man though Sir John was, he recoiled. Instantly Sir Oliver had conquered himself again. He swung to Rosamund.

"Ah, forgive me!" he pleaded. "I am mad—stark mad with anguish at the thing imputed. I have not loved your brother, it is true. But as I swore to you, so have I done. I have taken blows from him, and smiled; but yesterday in a public place he affronted me, lashed me across the face with his riding-whip, as I still bear the mark. The man who says I were not justified in having killed him for it is a liar and a hypocrite. Yet the thought of you, Rosamund, the thought that he was your brother sufficed to quench the rage in which he left me. And now that by some grim mischance he has met his death, my recompense for all my patience, for all my thought for you is that I am charged with slaying him, and that you believe this charge."

"She has no choice," rasped Killigrew.

"Sir John," he cried, "I pray you do not meddle with her choice. A fool, and a fool's counsel is a rotten staff to lean upon at any time. Why God o' mercy! Assume that I desired to take satisfaction for the affront he had put upon me; do you know so little of men, and of me of all men, that you suppose I should go about my vengeance in this hole-and-corner fashion to set a hangman's noose about my neck? A fine vengeance that, as God lives!

"Was it so I dealt with you, Sir John, when you permitted your tongue to wag too freely, as you have yourself confessed? Heaven's light, man! Take a proper view; consider was this matter likely. Ltake it you are a more fearsome antagonist than was ever poor Peter Godolphin, yet when I sought satisfaction of you I sought it boldly and openly, as is my way. When we measured swords in your park at Arwenack we did so before witnesses in proper form, that the survivor might not be troubled with the justices. You know me well, and what manner of man I am with my weapons. Should I not have done the like by Peter if I had sought his life? Should I not have sought it in the same open fashion, and so killed him at my pleasure and leisure, and without risk or reproach from any?"

Sir John was stricken thoughtful. But whilst he stood frowning and perplexed at the end of that long tirade, it was Rosamund who gave Sir Oliver his answer.

"You ran no risk of reproach from any do you say?"

He turned and was abashed. He knew the thought that was running in her mind.

"You mean," he said slowly, gently, his accents charged with reproachful incredulity, "that I am so base and false that I could in this fashion do what I dared not for your sake do openly? 'Tis what you mean, Rosamund! I burn with shame for you that you can think such thoughts of one whom—whom you professed to love."

Her coldness fell from her. Under the lash of his bitter, half-scornful accents her anger mounted, whelming for a moment even her anguish in her brother's death.

"You false deceiver!" she cried. "There are those who heard you vow his death. Your very words have been reported to me. And from where he lay they found a trail of blood upon the snow that ran to your own door. Will you still lie?"

They saw the color leave his face. They saw his arms drop limply to his sides, and his eyes dilate with obvious, sudden fear.

"A—a trail of blood?" he faltered stupidly.

"Aye, answer that!" cut in Sir John, fetched suddenly from out his doubts by that reminder.

Sir Oliver turned upon Killigrew again.

"I can not answer it," he said, but very firmly, in a tone that brushed aside all implications. "If you say it was so, so it must have been. Yet when all is said, what does it prove? Does it set it beyond doubt that it was I who killed him? Does it justify the woman who loved me to believe me a murderer and something worse?"

He paused, and looked at her again, a world of reproach in his glance.

"Can you suggest what else it proves, sir?" quoth Sir John, and there was doubt in his voice.

Sir Oliver caught the note of it, and a sob broke from him.

"O God of pity!" he cried out. "There is doubt in your voice, an there is none in hers. You were my enemy once, and have since been in a mistrustful truce with me, yet you can doubt that I did this thing. But she—she who loved me has no room for any doubt!"

"Sir Oliver," she answered him, "the thing you have done has broken quite my heart. Yet knowing all the taunts by which you were brought to such a deed I could have forgiven it, I think, even though I could no longer be your wife; I could have forgiven it, I say, but for the baseness of your present denial."

He looked at her, white-faced an instant, then turned on his heel and made for the door. There he paused.

"Your meaning is quite plain," said he. "It is your wish that I shall take my trial for this deed."

He laughed.

"Who will accuse me to the justices? Will you, Sir John?"

"If Mistress Rosamund so desires me," replied the knight.

"Ha! Be it so. But do not think I am the man to suffer myself to be sent to the gallows upon such paltry evidence as satisfies that lady. If any accuser comes to bleat of a trail of blood reaching to my door, and of certain words I spoke yesterday in anger, I will take my trial—but it shall be trial by battle upon the body of my accuser. That is my right, and I will have every ounce of it. Do you doubt how God will pronounce? I call upon Him solemnly to pronounce between me and such an one. If I am guilty of this thing may He wither my arm when I enter the lists."

"Myself I will accuse you," came Rosamund's dull voice. "And if you will, you may claim your rights against me, and butcher me as you butchered him."

"God forgive you, Rosamund!" said Sir Oliver, and went out.

He returned home with hell in his heart. He knew not what the future might hold in store for him; but such was his resentment against Rosamund that there was no room in his bosom for despair. They should not hang him. He would fight them tooth and claw, and yet Lionel should not suffer. He would take care of that. And then the thought of Lionel changed his mood a little. How easily could he have shattered their accusation, how easily have brought her to her proud knees imploring pardon of him! By a word he could have done it, yet he feared lest that word must jeopardize his brother.

In the calm, still watches of that night as he lay sleepless upon his bed and saw things without heat, there crept a change into his mental attitude. He reviewed all the evidence that had led her to her conclusions, and he was forced to confess that she was in some measure justified of them.

It was a heavy cross to bear. Yet for Lionel's sake he must bear it with what fortitude he could. Lionel must not be sacrificed to his egoism for a deed that in Lionel he could not account other than justified. He were base indeed did he so much as contemplate such a way of escape as that.

But if he did not contemplate it, Lionel did, and went in terror during those days, a terror that kept him from sleep and so fostered the fever in him that on the second day after that grim affair he had the look of a ghost, hollow-eyed and gaunt. Sir Oliver remonstrated with him, and in such terms as to put heart into him anew. Moreover, there was other news that day to allay his terrors: the justices at Truro had been informed of the event and the accusation that was made; but they had refused point-blank to take action in the matter. The reason of it was that one of them was that same Master Anthony Baine who had witnessed the affront offered Sir Oliver. He declared that whatever had happened to Master Godolphin as a consequence was no more than he deserved, no more than he had brought upon himself, and he gave it as his decision that his conscience as a man of honor would not permit him to issue any warrant to the constable.

Sir Oliver received this news from that other witness, the parson, who himself had suffered such rudeness at Godolphin's hands, and who, man of the Gospel and of peace though he was, entirely supported the justice's decision—or so he declared.

Sir Oliver thanked him, protesting that it was kind in him and in Master Baine to take such a view, but for the rest vowing that he had had no hand in the affair, however much appearances might point to him.

When, however, it came to his knowledge two days later that the whole countryside was in a ferment against Master Baine as a consequence of the attitude he had taken up, Sir Oliver summoned the parson and straightway rode with him to the justice's house at Truro, there to afford certain evidence which he had withheld from Rosamund and Sir John Killigrew.

"Master Baine," he said when the three of them were closeted in that gentleman's library, "I have heard of the just and gallant pronouncement you have made, and I am come to thank you and to express my admiration of your courage."

Master Baine bowed gravely. He was a man whom Nature had made grave.

"But since I would not that any evil consequences might attend your action, I am come to lay proof before you that you have acted more rightly even than you think, and that I am not the slayer."

"You are not?" ejaculated Master Baine in amazement.

"Oh, I assure you I use no subterfuge with you, as you shall judge. I have proof to show you, as I say; and I am come to do so now before time might render it impossible. I do not desire it to be made public just yet, Master Baine; but I wish you to draw up some such document as could satisfy the courts at any future time should this matter be taken further, as well it may."

"I assure you, Sir Oliver, that had you killed him after what happened I could not hold you guilty of having done more than punish a boorish and arrogant offender."

"I know, sir. But it was not so. One of the pieces of evidence against me—indeed the chief item—is that from Godolphin's body to my door there was a trail of blood."

The other two grew tensely interested. The parson watched him with unblinking eyes.

"Now it follows, logically, I think, inevitably indeed, that the murderer must have been wounded in the encounter. The blood could not possibly have been the victim's, therefore it must have been the slayer's. That the slayer was wounded indeed we know, since there was blood upon Godolphin's sword. Now Master Baine, and you, Sir Andrew, shall be witnesses that there is upon my body not so much as a scratch of recent date. I will strip me here as naked as when first I had the mischance to stray into this world, and you shall testify yourselves of that. Thereafter I shall beg you, Master Baine, to indite the document I have mentioned."

And he removed his doublet as he spoke.

"But since I will not give these louts who accuse me so much satisfaction, lest I seem to go in fear of them, I must beg, sirs, that you will keep this matter entirely private until such time as its publication may be rendered necessary by events."

They saw the reasonableness of his proposal, and they consented, still entirely skeptical. But when they had made their examination they were utterly dumfounded to find all their notions entirely overset. Master Baine, of course, drew up the required document, and signed and sealed it, whilst Sir Andrew added his own signature and seal as witness thereunto.

With this parchment that should be his buckler against any future need, Sir Oliver rode home, uplifted. For, once it were safe to do so, that parchment should be spread before the eyes of Sir John Killigrew and Rosamund, and all might yet be well.

CHAPTER VI
JASPER LEIGH

Sir Oliver was moody and silent in those days, given to sit for long hours staring into the heart of the fire and repeating to himself again and again every word of his interview with Rosamund, now in a mood of bitter resentment against her for having so readily believed his guilt, now in a gentler sorrowing humor which made full allowance for the strength of the appearances against him.

His half-brother moved softly about the house now in a sort of self-effacement, never daring to intrude upon Sir Oliver's abstractions. He was well-acquainted with their cause. He knew what had happened at Godolphin Court, knew that Rosamund had dismissed Sir Oliver for all time, and his heart smote him to think that he should leave his brother to bear this burden that rightly belonged to his own shoulders.

The thing preyed so much upon him mind that in an expansive moment one evening he gave it tongue.

"Noll," he said, standing beside his brother's chair in the fire-lit gloom, and resting a hand upon his brother's shoulder, "were it not best to tell the truth?"

Sir Oliver looked up quickly, frowning.

"Art mad?" quoth he. "The truth would hang thee, Lal."

"It might not. And, in any case, you are suffering something worse than hanging. Oh, I have watched you every hour this week past, and I know the pain that abides in you. It is not just." And he insisted. "We had best tell the truth."

Sir Oliver smiled wistfully. He put out a hand and took his brother's.

"'Tis noble in you to propose it, Lal."

"Not half so noble as it is in you to bear all the suffering for a deed that was my own."

"Bah!" Sir Oliver shrugged impatiently; his glance fell away from Lionel's face and returned to the consideration of the fire. "After all, I can throw off the burden when I will. Such knowledge as that will enhearten a man through any trial."

He had spoken in a harsh, cynical tone, and Lionel had turned cold at his words. He stood a long while in silence there, turning them over in his mind and considering the riddle which they presented him. He thought of asking his brother bluntly for the key to it, for the precise meaning of his disconcerting statement; but courage failed him. He feared lest Sir Oliver should confirm his own dread interpretation of it.

He drew away after a time, and soon after went to bed. For days thereafter the phrase rankled in his mind, "I can throw off the burden when I will." Conviction grew upon him that Sir Oliver meant that he was enheartened by the knowledge that by speaking if he chose he could clear himself. That Sir Oliver would so speak he could not think. Indeed, he was entirely assured that Sir Oliver was very far from intending to throw off his burden. Yet he might come to change his mind.

Lionel sought to assure himself that his brother was a man of stern fibers, a man who never lost control of himself. But against this he would argue that what had happened in the past was no guarantee of what might happen in the future; that a limit was set to the endurance of every man be he ever so strong, and that it was far from impossible that the limit of Sir Oliver's endurance might be reached in this affair. If that happened, in what case should he find himself?

The answer to this was a picture beyond his fortitude to contemplate. The danger of his being sent to trial and made to suffer the extreme penalty of the law would be far greater now than if he had spoken at once. The tale he could then have told must have compelled some attention, for he was accounted a man of unsmirked honor and his word must carry some weight. But now none would believe him. They would argue from his silence and front his having suffered his brother to be unjustly accused that he was craven-hearted and dishonorable, and that if he had acted thus it was because he had no good defense to offer for his deed.

Thus he came to the dread conclusion that in his endeavors to screen himself he had but enmeshed himself the more inextricably. If Oliver but spoke he was lost. And back he came to the question: What assurance had he that Oliver would not speak?

The fear of this, from occurring to him occasionally, began to haunt him day and night, and for all that the fever had left him and his wound was entirely healed he remained pale and thin and hollow-eyed. Indeed, the secret terror that was in his soul glared out of his eyes at every moment.

Coming one afternoon into the dining-room, which was ever Sir Oliver's favorite haunt in the mansion of Penarrow, Lionel found his half-brother in that brooding attitude, elbow on knee and chin on palm, staring into the fire. This was so habitual now in Sir Oliver that it had begun to irritate Lionel's tense nerves; it had come to seem to him that in this listlessness was a studied tacit reproach aimed at himself.

"Why do you sit ever thus over the fire like some old crone?" he growled, voicing at last the irritability that so long had been growing in him.

Sir Oliver looked round with mild surprise in his glance. Then from Lionel his eyes traveled to the long windows.

"It rains," he said.

"It was not your wont to be driven to the fireside by rain. But rain or shine 'tis ever the same. You never go abroad."

"To what end?" quoth Sir Oliver, with the same mildness, but a wrinkle of bewilderment coming gradually between his dark brows. "Do you suppose I love to meet lowering glances, to see heads approach one another so that confidential curses of me may be muttered?"

"Ha!" cried Lionel, short and sharp, his sunken eyes blazing suddenly. "It has come to this, then, that having voluntarily done this thing to shield me, you now reproach me with it."

"I?" cried Sir Oliver, aghast.

"Your very words are a reproach. D'ye think I do not read the meaning that lies under them?"

Sir Oliver rose slowly, staring at his brother. He shook his head and smiled.

"Lal, Lal!" he said. "Your wound has left you disordered, boy. With what have I reproached you? What was this hidden meaning of my words? If you will read aright you will see it to be that to go abroad is to involve myself in fresh quarrels, for my mood is become short, and I will not brook sour looks and mutterings. That is all."

He advanced and set his hands upon his brother's shoulders. Holding him so at arm's length he considered him, what time Lionel drooped his head and a slow flush overspread his cheeks.

"Dear fool!" he said, and shook him. "What ails you? You are pale and gaunt, and not yourself at all, I have a notion. I'll furnish me a ship and you shall sail with me to my old hunting grounds. There is life out yonder—life that will restore your vigor and your zest, and perhaps mine as well. How say you, now?"

TELEGRAPH MEN VOTE ON STRIKE

Four Years Ago the Existing Wage Agreement Was Negotiated.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—A strike vote by the men and a request to the Dominion Department of Labor for a conciliation board by the company is the result of the meeting yesterday here of the executive of the Canadian Press and the General Committee of its telegraph operators in an effort to get together on the wage dispute separating them. Just four years ago, as the company points out in its argument, the existing wage agreement was negotiated through a conciliation board about the time when the peak of the high cost of living was reached, this being the month of July, 1920. Immediately after this settlement went into effect giving the men a flat increase of five dollars a week, the cost of living index figure started dropping, until now it is back to near what it was in 1917. The agreement has continued unchanged, but two months ago the men gave notice of a considerable increase. To this the company replied by notice of a decrease, aimed especially to help the situation in the smaller Canadian cities where members of the Canadian press receive their news service over leased wires, and where the minimum wage of forty-five dollars a week paid the Canadian Press telegraphers is, such members claim, out of all proportion to the wage paid other newspaper employees.

In opening the proceedings yesterday, F. Norman Smith, president of the Canadian Press, pointed out the difficulties faced by Canadian daily publishers, due to loss of revenue consequent on the economic and industrial depression. On behalf of the company he said they could not consider at this time a single dollar increase in the wage bill. A number of members were already finding the cost of the news service greater than they could carry, and from the smaller newspapers there had come for some time insistent demands for a cut in the cost of the telegraphic bill.

NEW EXHIBITION ATTRACTIONS MAKE THIS YEAR'S FAIR WEEK GREATEST HELD IN PETERBORO

Children Admitted Free To Grounds and Grand Stand To-morrow—Fireworks Every Day.

EXHIBITORS HAVE NOVEL DISPLAYS.

Varied Programme For Every Day—Latest Developments In Manufacture and Commerce.

Buildings and tents at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition filled rapidly to-day with the exhibits that will entertain visitors during the four days of the Fair. Whole armies of men were busy all day painting, nailing and setting up the furnishings of stalls, and outdoors were more gangs engaged in the erection of the Midway attractions.

Wednesday will be Children's Day and all children who attend between noon and four o'clock will be admitted free. They may remain in the rounds all evening, and the grand stand will be free to them in the afternoon.

A convenience that will be appreciated by all Exhibition visitors is the extension of the street car track to the north gate on Lansdowne Street. Cars on this spur will set down passengers at the very centre of activity doing away with the long walk from the Lock Street gate.

Another change is the moving of the Midway to the space between the George Street gate on Lansdowne and the race track, where all the attractions are gathered close together.

The space formerly occupied by the Midway in the east-end of the park will be given over to automobiles for parking this year.

Throughout the Exhibition music will be given by the Peterborough Rangers Band, the Salvation Army Juvenile Band, and the Caledonian Pipe Band.

Starting on Wednesday afternoon, Bert Caldwell, Toronto's favourite baritone, will be heard in new and up-to-date songs, and will also lead the community singing which has become a feature of the Peterborough Exhibition.

Full Programme.

Wednesday—Children's Day. All children from city and country admitted free.

Thursday—Ontario Day. Exhibition formally opened by His Honour Henry Cockshutt, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Friday—Citizens' Day.

Saturday—Farmers' Day.

The vaudeville performance, to be given twice daily on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, is the best that has ever been brought to the Peterborough Exhibition.

The following artistes appear:

Poodles and Dottie, comedy acrobats

Josh and Tildey, comedy rube act.

Daredevil Doherty, leaps his bicycle across a 30-foot gap.

The Burtons, Comedy knockabout acrobatic act.

Bert Caldwell, the Toronto baritone.

Boys' and Girls' Races.

Wednesday will be the big day for children, when in addition to the regular performance, just the same as their elders will see on the following days, there will be a big programme of races for boys and girls only. The prizes are on exhibition in a George street store window, and a glance will show that they are well worth winning.

The carnival shows are all in place to-day, presenting the greatest aggregation of amusement rides and side shows that has been seen at the Peterboro fair. There are swings, children's rides, aeroplanes, hobby horses, a Ferris wheel, whip, pony circus, and two long rows of side shows and "try your skill" tents.

Buildings Filled.

The manufacturers' building, and the main building, had all spaces occupied to-day, and the indications were that additional space would be required. Before noon to-day a party was busy placing flowers in the big marquee. The poultry building had been made ready for a bigger show of fowl than last year, a row of duck pens having been built on the north side. There is now accommodation for 1200 exhibits in this building, which always proves one of the most attractive to visitors. Members of the Peterborough Poultry Association are indefatigable workers, and are kept busy. Every year the pens must be taken to pieces and transported to the scene of the winter poultry show, then again dismantled, and returned to the Exhibition ground. The big building looks particularly attractive this year.

Other buildings and marquees that have not yet filled up, but will receive their quota of exhibits, are those where horses, cattle, dogs, and other live stock, will be shown. The dog show is an innovation this year, and has brought an entry list of over two hundred. It will be held on Friday and Saturday only.

In the same location as last year, between the Lock street and the George street gates, is situated the big marquee that will be fitted up as a rest room for the women. Large marquees and smaller tents in this sector will be used for the display of automobiles and farm implements.

Good Wishes Expressed.

President Roland Denne of the Exhibition Board has received many expressions of good will from other cities and towns, and Rev. C. J. Phelan of Campbellford, called him by long distance this morning to wish the exhibition success, and good weather.

The best of co-operation has been given the Exhibition board by merchants and exhibitors, and now only the hearty support of the citizens is required to make the 1924 Exhibition the success that previous Fairs have always been.

ONT. TEMPERANCE ACT QUESTIONS

There Will Likely Be But Two Questions For the People To Vote On.

TORONTO, Sept. 9. —(Canadian Press).—It was learned to-day that there is little probability that questions to be asked electorate in the plebiscite in connection with the Ontario Temperance Act on October 23 will be announced by the Ontario Government before Thursday or Friday of this week.

Premier Ferguson did not return to day from his home in Kemptville where he spent the week end and he is reported to be suffering from chill which will further delay his return.

Toronto Telegram reiterates to-day that there will be but two questions submitted to the people, this being favored by the majority of Conservative members of the House who have been consulted during the past few days.

Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney General to-day forwarded to the Ontario Moderation League and Temperance Officials several hundred copies of government booklets giving the official information regarding the qualification of voters and other matters in connection with the taking of the plebiscite. The booklet is largely a summary of Elections Act set out in readable form for the guidance of all parties.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

"Pleased to meet you," said Aunt Hannah.

Mrs. Bear did not coax Weeny and the Twins to stay any longer at her house when she came home and found that Buster Bear hadn't done one earthly thing she had told him to, while she was gone.

So they had to pack up Weeny's satchel again and go and hunt somebody else to visit.

"I'll tell you who let's go and see," cried Weeny, waving his trunk in the air like a banner. "Old Aunt Hannah Hippo. She's as nice as she's fat and she knows more stories! Let's go and visit her."

"All right!" said the Twins, as pleased as Punch. "Let's go now."

So they hopped on the elephant's back and away he went—pad, paddy, pad, paddy, pad down the mountain side and away off to the other side of the world where Aunt Hannah Hippo lived.

"My goodness!" cried Aunt Hannah, opening her large front door and looking out. "If it isn't Weeny, the circus elephant!"

"Weeny and Company," said Weeny, kissing Aunt Hannah on her nose, because there wasn't anything but nose to kiss her on. "Aunt Hannah, this is Nancy, and this is Nick. We're all having our vacation together and we've come to visit you."

"Pleased to meet you," said Aunt Hannah, "but you've found me in a sorry plight. I'm in the middle of wash-day and I only have hash for lunch."

"Oh, that's all right," said Weeny. "If there's enough hash."

"Then do come in," said Aunt Hannah hospitably.

The three of them didn't have to be coaxed and it only took Weeny about three seconds to hang up his toothbrush and shake out his nighty and lay his specs on the table.

What's that, my dears? You wonder why he wore specs when he wasn't so very old! Why, they were a birthday present from his grandma, so he just had to wear them. Besides, his eyes were so little and his ears were so big and his nose was so long, it seemed as though he was just made for glasses.

Well, anyway, Aunt Hannah finished her washing and they all had lunch and helped to clean up.

"Now, tell us a story, please, Aunt Hannah," said Weeny when they all went out to the front porch and sat down.

"All right," said Aunt Hannah. "Once upon a time—there was a—little boy—and—"

Suddenly she stopped and everybody looked to see what was the matter. Wasn't she sound asleep, with her chin on her chest, mind you!

"Wake up and tell us some more," begged Weeny.

"Oh, oh! What's that?" cried the hippo lady waking up with a jump. "I must have been dozing. Well, once there was a little boy named Sam—and he—had a—had a—"

And off she went to sleep again, snoring like a sawmill.

They woke her up six times, and six times she went to sleep. It wasn't a bit of use.

"Once there was a little boy," said Weeny, "and his name was Nick and he had a sister Nancy and a friend Weeny, and they packed up their satchel and went on to the next place."

"That's what we'd better do," laughed the Twins.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

AMUSEMENT SHOW AT EXHIBITION

Largest Amusement Company In Canada at Peterboro Fair.

Just as Peterboro is famous for the manufacture of Quaker Oats and Westclox Products so are the International Amusement Company famous for being the largest amusement company travelling in Canada.

Last year when these shows played here the officials of the show filled every obligation in a most sincere manner the Fair Board then signed contracts for a return engagement.

Incidentally, he is a Canadian through and through and has played the same circuit of fairs in Western Canada for the last 22 years. The employees were very attentive and congenial on the entire midway and it indeed was a pleasure to note the absence of any suggestive shows or gambling features on the grounds.

The shows arrived over the C.P.R. early Monday from Perth, where they showed at the fair, and promptly unloaded and proceeded to set up at the fair grounds.

The fair grounds will be open this evening to permit the citizens of Peterboro to give the amusement company an inspection.

LITTLE OF EVERYTING.

Escape.

If, crossing a street, you suddenly turned and saw that a speeding auto was about to hit you before you could jump aside, what would you do?

This happened to George Gliserman, Boston newsboy. The crowd rushed forward, expecting to pick him up dead. He got calmly to his feet and chuckled, "Never touched me."

George had presence of mind to lie flat and let the car pass over him. Maybe it's just as well all pedestrians can't think as fast. Drivers would just be correspondingly more reckless. Caution varies with danger.

Lover.

Enraged because his sweetheart had spurned him, a Massachusetts man choked and hurled her to the sidewalk.

Rather a queer demonstration of affection. Love is next door to hate, the old saying goes. But this notion is based on minority cases. The spurned lover who attacks with his fists is as rare as four-leaf clovers. Love is NOT next door to hate, even though extremes usually meet.

Gain.

America's foreign trade is considerably bigger than a year ago. In the ten months ended May 1, merchandise exports exceeded imports by nearly 700 million dollars.

Fine—provided we ever get paid the difference. Half of this excess was shipped to us in the form of gold. How about the other half? Was it paid for in securities or just charged on the books? A nation, like a storekeeper, can sell unlimited amounts of goods if it isn't particular about date of payment or certainty.

Psychology.

The best of weapons are not much good to an army with low morale. It's the spirit of determination and fearlessness among the soldiers that wins most battles.

So with business—prosperity or hard times. Both of these conditions depend mainly on the mass psychology of the public. People create what they fear. If they fear depression, they are sure to get it, for their fear makes them stop spending—thus shutting down factories and stagnating distribution of commodities.

Farmers.

Farmers of America now are banded together in more than 10,000 organizations, Department of Agriculture reports.

What they need is one big national organization. So do consumers. Industrial producers and distributors in general get the best of the bargain because they are organized. Until consumers and farmers organize, they will have the disadvantage of a disorganized army fighting a united army headed by an intelligent general staff.

Shivers creep up a city man's spine when he contemplates what would happen if the farmers ever struck.

ENTITLED TO RESPECT.

Bystander—: I observe that you treat that gentleman very respectfully.

Garageman: Yes, he's one of our early settlers.

Bystander: Early settler? Why, he's not more than 40 years old.

Garageman: That may be true, but he pays his bills on the first of every month.—Motor Age.

TABLE LINEN.

Tabel linen should be ironed in a single thickness until it is perfectly dry, then it may be folded and pressed.

RATS.

People united against rats in Monmouth coutny, N.J. They killed 40,000 rats—and the killing saved the community $400,000, according to the current numbe of New Jersey Agriculture.

Such things can be done locally or nationally. But when it comes to international action, it's next to impossible to get people together except to murder each other in war. This is the fault of leaders, not of the plain people. Governments, not populations, start wars.

DISTANCE

Marconi, in England, heard by radio the beating of a man's heart in Pittsburgh. Marconi suggests that long-distance diagnosis of disease will be made by radio, also prescriptions for treating the disease.

You can picture a doctor of the future, instead of rushing around to see his patients, simply sitting down at his radio and hearng their heartbeats and lung action, also by radio movies examining the patient's tongue. Science brings isolation to the indivdual.

WEAR FLOWERS

With the bateau neckline it is quite a fad to wear a flower on the shoulder—a gardenia, orchid or a red carnation.

Ever buy a wooden nutmeg?

Being fond of nutmeg's spicy flavor and seeing an opportunity to stock up on them to advantage, Grandmother bought generously.

There was to be rice pudding for supper. Grandmother took the golden-brown beauty from the oven and prepared to give it its finishing touch—a sprinkling of nutmeg. Out came the grater and one of the new nutmegs. She scraped and looked puzzled. Scraped again, and looked closer. Sawdust!! The nutmegs were made of wood.

How far from such methods we have traveled in these days of advertised merchandise. The merchant of today signs his name to what he says about what he sells. He knows that when you come to buy you will expect the goods in his store to be what he has said. He knows that if he deceives you once, your trade is gone for ever.

Wooden nutmegs never could have been advertised.

WHAT OF RUGBY?

Season Is Here, But Local Players Are Slow In Getting Started.

What is the rugby outlook for Peterborough this Fall? Now that the baseball season is fast coming to a close and the cool winds are beginning to feel the way youngsters are supposed to on the first Spring day.

Entries to the O.R.F.U. are supposed to be in by this Thursday so that if anything is to be done it must done quickly.

It is very likely that the city will be repreesnted as last year in Junior Rugby circles. A group of young men mostly graduates of the P.C.I. who got their taste of the game while wearing the Garnet and Guy in hectic encounters against Belleville and U.T.P. are the moving spirits of this squad who will endeavour if conditions prove favourable to put Peterboro again on the rugby map.

The great need is a coach. Max (Boxer) Sloane managed the team last year and did it extremely well but he is not on hand for this season Coach Carl Browne of the P.C.I. if he didn't have his hands so full in his efforts to mould the Collegians into a capable machine would likely take the job. The boys may be successful in getting some advice from Mr. Browne and Dick Sheehy.

Following are some of the players who would be eligible and are eager to play junior rugby: Cowan, Ashmore, Clancy, Ward, Johnston, Young, Griffin, Wilgar, Patterson, Dundas, Holland, Mulholland, MacIntosh B. Miller, Currie, Mahood, Turner. There are many others who would likely take up the game if a coach could be procured.

GAME REPLAYED.

Mercantile League Sustains Examiner Club's Protest.

At a special meeting of the Mercantile League held last night in the Cressman Company's store, the protest of the Examiner Club against the C.G.E. was sustained and the two teams ordered to replay the game this evening at 5.30.

In the absence of the president, Mr. H. W. Cressman, the chair was taken by Mr. F. Whaley. The representatives of the different clubs decided to allow Mr. Whaley to render a decision and he did so in favor of the Examiner team. Mr. Whaley stated that he had no other course than to award the protest to the Examiner as the umpire's decision was contrary to the rules. He ordered the teams to replay the game this evening.

The negro will depart at daybreak, going directly to the home of Paddy Mullins his manager, where he will rest until Thursday evening.

BRITISH CAPTAIN OUT OF POLO GAME

Louis Lacey Developed Shingles—Jinx Pursues the Team.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The opening skirmish for international polo honors between Great Britain and the United States, postponed from last Saturday because of wet grounds is slated to take place, this afternoon at the Meadowbrook Club, Westbury, Long Island

The second game is scheduled for next Saturday and a third, which will be played regardless of the outcome of the other two, probably will take place September 17.

The United States "Big Four" will ride into the fray even stronger favorites than before last week's postponement. Instead of benefitting by the few days delay, the British combination suffered fresh misfortune when its star and captain, Louis L. Lavey, Canadian-Argentine back, contracted shingles and will be out of the opening lineup. This mishap, the climax of a series that has followed in Britshers necessitated an eleventh hour shift in the invaders' lineup and further reduced their prospects of victory.

Supporters of the British cause are not altogether discouraged, despite the "jinx" that has beset their prospects. They recall that ten years ago, when the British were accorded little chance, they scored a startling upset by taking two straight games.

SOCCER NOTES.

On Saturday afternoon the Thistles and Quaker Oats meet in a league game at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 3 o'clock prompt, and no later. Referee, A. Mitchell.

At Nicholls Oval the Canadian Woollens and G. W. V. A. meet in a league game. Referee, Jack Clark. Kick-off at 3 o'clock, Saturday.

All players who were kicked for the Plenty Cup team are requested to attend the special meeting next Monday evening, also the trainer, Mr. William Gatfield, so as to arrange practice and get-together.

Dawson, the local player, participated in the game between Defenders (Toronto) versus All-Scots and now cannot play in local competitions. He has lost his position in Plenty Cup team, and Craig, Quaker Oats, will take his place in the eleven through Dawson's action.

Last fall season, the Public and Separate Schools indulged in the soccer game for the first year and Central school had the honour of winning the Alex. Kay trophy which is emblematic of the school championship.

The Toronto Public Schools have been allocated twenty-four fields and they will be taxed to the limit, for the interest in this sport continues to increase each year. The fixtures for the junior games have been allotted, but the school league which is very large have as many as from two to four teams—then why not in Peterboro?

Dawson, a centre half-back from Peterbopo, would like to play in Toronto. Harry Niven, a former Toronto referee, says he is the goods.—Toronto Sunday World.

The petty question of authority between the D. F. A. and C. F. A. has been settled very amicably to both parties and will be beneficial to the game throughout the Province. The everlasting fault-finder and ego critic found the late outlaw body—C. F. A., a very good excuse to fight against organized sport in this city—now what will be their next move?

Melville, who played for the local Thistle was suspended by the local P. and D. F. A. but now he is fully reinstated since the settlement was made last week and a comprehensive report will be published to satisfy all soccer fans. But as an individual player, Melville was reckoned as a star in any position on the field. He has left the city for good and will reside in Toronto, also having signed to play with All-Scots.

FIRPO CASE LAID BEFORE PRESIDENT

Canon Chase Secured Special Appointment For To-day.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—President Coolidge will receive the evidence of Canon William S. Chase upon which he bases his demand for the deportation of Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, to-day. Two days hence, Firpo is scheduled to meet Harry Wills. Announcement that Canon Chase had obtained an appointment at the White House was made by his attorney, Bernard H. Sandler.

All the allegations against Firpo are based upon his alleged relations with Miss Blanca Lourdes Picart, a passenger on the steamer which brought the Argentine to the United States early in the year.

"The President can revoke bail," Mr. Sandler said, "and if bail is revoked Firpo can be confined on Ellis Island until the hearing. The Commissioner of Immigration must approve Mr. Curran's act in permitting bail of $1,000, as Firpo was arrested on a Departmental warrant. Bail is not mandatory, but discretionary, and the President may order it revoked through Secretary of Labor Davis.

"I think the issue is big enough for the President as the whole country and foreign nations are interested in our immigration policy."

BROADWAY TOUTS BAFFLED AT PICKING WILLS-FIRPO WINNER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The wild bull has buffaloed speculative Broadway. The speculative gents don't know how to figure him.

They know Mr. Firpo is mentally sick as a result of his love troubles with the government, that he is ilty trained, and has no soul surging ambition in the fight with Harry Wills, the negro, aside from collecting his "bit," and important matter of more than $100.000.

They know, too, that Wills is superbly conditioned, and genuinely confident. Yet these Broadway hawks refuse to bet against the Argentinian.

Memories of the bull's spectacular stand against Dempsey are still with them. They remember how terrible he looked in training, how amateurishly he fought, how easily he was toppled over by Dempsey's smashes, but most vividly of all they remember how he CAME BACK and knocked Dempsey OUT OF THE RING. A guy who can do that is tough to figure.

Dempsey Says "Firpo"

Usually something approaching uniformity of opinion exists among fighters and ring authorities as to the outcome of a big heavyweight battle. Nothing but confusion and conflicting comments exist in this fight.

Jack Dempsey thinks Firpo will win by a knockout "whether he is in shape or not."

Tex Rickard, best judge of fighters in this county, is privately of the opinion that the South American will win. So is Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, and a keen observer. Bill Tate, who fought Wills six times, picks Firpo to win before the seventh round is over. Tate has been working with Firpo for two weeks.

On the other hand Jack Britton is BETTING REAL SUGAR on Wills to knock out the tourist Romeo. This is significant. Either Britton is singularly lucky or an infallible judge. Britton has never been on a loser. And in this instance he is absolutely disinterested.

Bull's Throaty Rumble.

Bartley Madden, trial horse of the ring, casts his vote for Wills and predicts a knockout finish. Madden recently went the limit with Wills, successfully defying every effort of the black man to knock him out.

"But that doesn't mean Wills didn't hurt me," says Madden. "As a matter of truth I was out in the first round. The only thing that saved me was was Wills' cautiousness. He was too careful of his hands."

Firpo himself is non-committal. A shrug of his shoulders, a gesture with the hands, and an indistinguishable throaty rumble. That is his answer to your question, "What round will you win in?"

Wills is almost offensively optimistic, and has a new prediction of triumph for every interviewer.

Yankees End Stay at Home —Tigers Ready For the Final Drive.

GIANTS SHAKEY.

NEW YORK, September 8. — The Giants still cling to the National League leadership. After a week of sensational baseball, in which the Robins supplied most of the thrills, the Giants by some timely hitting, managed to retain their position at the top. They met with some real opposition, both from the Robins and the Pirates but the results of Sunday's game did much to make their hold on first place more secure. On Saturday they were perilously near third place but came from behind to win the second game from the Phillies, and to keep on top.

The American League race continues close, with the Senators retaining a two game advantage. The Yankees lost two out of three to the Athletics and thereby sacrificed a chance to get closer to the top. The Tigers, who seemed about to collapse have staged another of their well known come-backs and as a result of winning their last six games have advanced to within four and a half games of the lead. The Tigers now will prepare to make their final pennant drive and will be at home against both the senators and the Yankees within the next two weeks, when it is felt that the race will be decided.

Win 29 out of 36.

The work of the Robins during the last month has been remarkable. They have won twenty-nine out of their last thirty-six games since Aug 6th, and now are in second place only half a game from the top and a game ahead of the Pirates. Only sixteen games remain on the Brooklyn schedule, nineteen for the Giants and twenty-two for the Pirates. The Giants, however, have displayed their characteristic fighting spirit and when hard pressed seem to be at their best. Their showing against the Phils on Saturday when, after trailing 6to 0 at the end of the first inning they pulled out with a victory, and their work in the crucial game against the Robins yesterday, is evidence that McGraw has not permitted his men to slow down. McGraw was forced to resort to a changed lineup and the shift to date has not worked to the disadvantage of the team. The Giants have not compiled the best record during the last week, winning only seven out of their last fourteen games, but their big early lead enabled them to survive the slump and still be in the race.

Dodgers' Feat.

The feat of the Robins in winning fifteen straight, and in so doing taking four double headers in four days will rate with many of the record-breaking performances in baseball. The Robins just fell short of winning their sixteenth straight, losing in the tenth inning. The team is fighting hard. It has heard the pennant call, and does not give up until the last man is out. This was quite clear Sunday and though four runs behind in the ninth inning they [illegible] alarm in the Giant stronghold. So much so that McGraw changed pitchers with two men on base and no one out.

The Yankees have ended their stay at home but they seem to be one club that does not suffer much on the road and it is for this reason that the supporters of the champions believe they will repeat. Both Ruth and Dugan, who were suffering from injuries last week, have recovered, and are back in the line up. The work of Walter Beall, new pitcher, also has been of such an encouraging nature that it should do much to restore the Yankees morale.

The Senators have surprised by the way in which they have been playing and with the pitchers going good, Washington should make a good fight on the final swing around the circuit. The Senators have won five out of their last six games. The Yankees have won six out of their last ten.

SOX AND GIANTS' TOUR.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press).—The Chicago White Sox and New York Giants will start their European tour October 13, leaving Quebec that day and arrive in Liverpool October 22. The first game abroad will be played in London, October 25. The next game will be played in Paris on Sunday, October 26.

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. There are runners on first and third. The batter hits a ball to the second baseman. Runner going from first to second interferes with the play and ball goes to right field. Runner on first goes to third, batsman reaches second, and runner on third crosses the plate. What is the proper ruling?—D.S.A.

2. There are runners on first and second and no one out. Batter hits a fly ball which umpire does not rule an infield fly. A high wind causes the ball, which seemed certain to travel to the outfield, to blow back to the infield. The ball struck the runner standing on second on the back. The team in the field contended that two men should be called out on the play, the batter on an infield fly and the runner on second because he was hit with a batted ball. Please give your decision—F.G.H.

3. In a batting-out-of-order play, when the mistake is discovered in time, how does the umpire straighten out the situation?—C.H.

ANSWERS

1. Umpire should have ruled runner going from first to second out for interfering with fielder making the play. The batsman is entitled to first base. On such a play no runners can advance unless forced to make room for the batsman. Runner on third, who scored, should be sent back to that base.

2. Only one man can be called out on such a play. Since the umpire did not regard the hit as an infield fly, the contention of the team in the field on that point should receive no consideration. The runner hit by the batted ball while standing on second is out. Runner on first advances to second to make room for the batsman, who is entitled to first.

3. When a player bats out of order, and the mistake is discovered before a ball is pitched to the succeeding batsman, the umpire simply calls out the proper batsman and the regular batting order is resumed.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

"If I were a left-handed thrower, I would quit playing second base and start pitching in the American League."

So remarked Eddie Collins, famous second sacker, after a recent series in which the Chicago White Sox had faced little but southpaw pitching.

"You can win if you can throw left-handed."

This sure has been a fat year for southpaws in the American League.

The remark of Collins that a player merely has to be a left-handed thrower to insure success is his idea of how soft it is for a portsider to win.

They do say that a somewhat similar condition exists in the National League.

Why a left-handed pitcher should be harder for a left-handed batter to hit, than a right-hander is for a right-hander, is one of the mysteries of the game that has never been fully explained.

Confidence in one's ability is, after all, one of baseball's greatest assets. Mere ability to throw left-handed will hardly get you by as a pitcher in the majors, despite the great success the southpaws have been enjoying.

No left-hander in the American League this year has more stuff than "Lefty" Fuhr of the Boston Red Sox. Yet Fuhr is one of the few southpaws who failed to make good.

One of the sensations of the American League has been Earl Whitehill, diminutive southpaw of the Detroit Tygers. Physically, in comparison to Whitehill Fuhr is a giant.

While Whitehill has a fine assortment of stuff, Fuhr has even more.

Whitehill has been a success because he believed in himself. Fuhr failed because he lacked confidence in his great natural ability.

In this connection I recall the first game Whitehill worked against New York and his introduction to Ruth. After he had gotten two strikes on Ruth, facing him for the first time, he walked up to Catcher Bassler and said:

"Don't forget to tell me when Ruth comes up. I want to work hard on him."

Ruth turned to me and remarked, "Well, what do you thing of that fresh busher. He's going to make good."

Before Ruth could recover from the shock, Whitehill curved over a beauty for the third strike.

Whitehill certainly has made good on Ruth's prediction.

The supreme test of the greatness of a ball club is in its ability to come back after a series of reverses.

Regardless of where the Washington club finishes this year the team has proved beyond a doubt that it is courageous.

Nothing plays more havoc with a ball club than a continued losing streak just at a time when it appears to be pennant bound.

I opened the season with the Washington club this year. From the very start it was apparent that every member of the club intended to give Manager Harris his best efforts.

Harris early showed that as a manager he was big enough to understand the failings and strong points of his men, handle them accordingly, and thereby show that he appreciated their efforts in his behalf.

Sitting next to Harris on the Washington bench one day I listened intently as he replied to a number of questions that were being fired at him by a sports writer.

His answer as to where the club would finish is still fresh in my memory

Haven't the slightest idea where we will finish, simply know we will battle for every game.

"When the day's game is over we will start figuring how we can best play the next one. It's the team with the best percentage that wins the pennant.

"My club will give the fans the best play possible and will be satisfied with the results attained at the close of the season."

Harris at that time entertained no highly colored pennant ambitions He was out to make the best possible showing, willing to stand pat on the results.

Harris has proved beyond a doubt that he has the mettle worthy a leader, and his team showed that it has the courage of a pennant contender.

Washington met New York in a five-game series in July after the Nationals had moved into first place. It was the first crucial series of the year. The Yanks won four out of five.

That beating will knock them off, thought the Yanks and the experts but it didn't. Washington started another winning streak.

A month later, after again moving into first place, St. Louis took five straight games from the Nationals, at a time when every game meant much.

I feared that such a reverse in so important a series would possibly wreck the pennant hopes of the club. It didn't. The Nationals are still hanging on with something in reserve.

A game ball club with an equally courageous leader is always to be feared. There you have Washington and Manager Stanley Harris.

After twice being on the ropes, several times very groggy, the Nats have always rallied and refused to take the count.

Without a doubt Washington has provided the big thrill of the American League race. For that the fans everywhere are thankful.

Protest on Chares Serth Won By Kingston and Petes Eliminated.

JAKE NOT BLAMED.

Oshawa and Belleville Play Sudden Death Game on Saturday.

OSHAWA, Sept. 9.—(Special).—The sub-committee of the Central Ontario Baseball League at its session in Oshawa this morning, after hearing further evidence from Kingston and Peterboro on the eligibility of Pitcher Charles Serth, of the Peterboro team, suspended the Petes from further participation in the League play-offs, and on instructions from the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association ordered Belleville and Oshawa to play a sudden death game in Cobourg on Saturday, Sept. 13th, at three o'clock. The following was the decision as handed out by the sub-committee:

"Regarding the Kingston protest of Player Serth of Peterboro, your sub-committee is of the opinion that Serth was in Peterboro before the first of January, 1924, but not continuously thereafter, and was therefore not legible under the Central Ontario League or Ontario Baseball Amateur Association residence rule. We therefore sustain the Kingston protest and suspend the Peterboro Club from further participation this year.

"Your sub-committee is further of the opinion that J. J. Solomon, manager of the Peterboro team, was at no time conversant with the non-eligibility of Player Serth, and honorably exonerate him from all blame."

A copy of this decision to be forwarded to the O.B.A.

Acting on the instructions from the O.B.A.A., Oshawa and Belleville are herewith instructed to play a sudden death game in Cobourg on Saturday, September 13th, at three o'clock.

This game to be handled by the League officials, according to the constitution, wherein it states that the League will receive ten per cent. of the gross receipts, the balance to be divided equally between the contending teams after all expenses are deducted.

neath and on Monday Manager C. H. Davidson received from that village an offer to split these games on a 50-50 basis without playing, Campbellford to take one and Roseneath the other. The latter finished at the top in the first half of the schedule, but has evidently given up hope of being able to repeat the performance and does not care to expend any more energy until the play-off with the winner of the second half, which from present appearances will be Colborne.

Manager Davidson's reply was that he preferred to drop out altogether and last night authorized The Examiner to make this announcement. His team, however, will play an exhibition game with Brighton on Fair day, which will be a holiday in town and no difficulty is anticipated in getting all of the good members of the team into the line-up. The protested game between Hastings and Brighton, advertised to be re-played here Friday, has been postponed as the Fair grounds will be occupied that day by the annual Seymour School Fair. The game will probably be played here on Saturday next.

Why Campbellford Failed.

The reason why baseball has failed in Campbellford is obvious. It is impossible to carry on summer league sports of any description while Friday is observed here as the weekly half holiday and Wednesday in all the surrounding towns, especially as the games are invariably scheduled for the latter day. Members of an athletic team cannot get two half holidays in a week and the result is that in half the games played this year Campbellford was obliged to face the music with their ranks almost entirely filled with recruits. When all the regular players, or even a majority of them were out, the team always made a creditable showing.

Last year and again this season lacrosse faced the same obstacle and met the same fate as baseball. This, too, in a town where there is no lack of athletic material.

It was only a man with the true sporting spirit possessed by Charlie Davidson who could have accomplished what he did in baseball. He revived the pastime here on his own initiative in 1923, when local baseball players were scarce and the public was indifferent, but he raked the highways and byways until he finally secured a team that in the final analysis came close to first place.

In the team which he mustered this year, beyond all question he counted some of the best players in the league, several of whom could hold their own in faster company. His team went against seasoned players who were in constant practice, the only practice which they themselves got being a few minutes' play before the games.

Manager Davidson says that he has learned by experience and next year will choose players so situated that they can answer the call regularly from the opening to the close of the season.

Roseneath is in the same boat as Campbellford. There are men on the roster of that team second to none in the league, but who found it impossible to get away from their daily duties when required.

PRINCE VERY UNLUCKY.

Hit In Eye With Piece of Dirt In Polo Game Yesterday.

SYOSSET, Sept. 9. — (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales suffered a slight injury to his right eye yesterday when, in the midst of a rough polo game, a piece of dirt, hurled by the flying hoofs of a pony, lodged under the eyelid of the Royal athlete. The irritation caused him considerable pain for half an hour, until Dr. Medwin Leale, a Glen Cove physician, who was immediately called, removed the dirt.

The Prince decided not to allow the mishap to interfere with his presence at dinner and dance party last night at the home of F. Ambrose Clark in Westbury.

Bob Mackey's Kiwanis Bantams will hold a brisk workout at the King Edward school grounds tonight at 5.30 o'clock, immediately after the Maple Leaf-Cobourg game.

All players on the Kiwanis team are asked to be present as early as possible, as the team expects to have a real practice to-night in preparation for the game with Toronto on Saturday. The local kids have to win on Saturday to stay in the running for the Ontario championship.

HEAD NEW SCHOOL.

Rev. J. R. Turnbull Will Be In Charge of Bible Training College.

In the beginning of its missionary activities, the Christian and Missionary Alliance, organized the Nyack, N.Y. Bible Training School to fit and prepare men and women for the foreign field. The work has grown to such large proportions it has been found necessary to establish preparatory schools in the south-east, north-west and Pacific coast districts. This year the Canadian district is opening a Bible training college in Toronto, taking up the Nyack junior course, thus relieving the head school from being overcrowded.

Peterborough people will be interested to know that the first dean of this new school is Rev. J. R. Turnbull, a native of our city and a returned missionary from India.

Last night the Young People's Society of Bethany Tabernacle said farewell to six of their members, Misses Mary Doner, Evva Waugh, Mildred Doner, Jean Stenton, Dorothy Calvert and Alice Bull, also Miss Norma Moore, of Park street church and Mr. E. A. Chesher, of Port Hope, who are all going up for the opening of the school on Monday next, Sept. 15th. With seven students and the Dean, Peterborough will be well represented.

Words of farewell were given by Mr. Clarence Boorman, president of the society, Mr. Chas. Collins, Sunday school superintendent, Mr. A. J. Johnston on behalf of the congregation, and Mrs. A. G. Doner, the teacher of the S. S. class, out of which six of the students are going. Mrs. L. G. Edwards also spoke as a teacher in the Sunday school.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

HOME-MADE WINES.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I send you the official opinion of the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto. Note the words: "Nothing in the nature of a mash can be used for that purpose." And if anyone can make native wine with a kick in it without a mash it is news to me. Native wine or home-made wine without a mash is only the juice of the squeezed grape unfermented. Prohibition makes it a penal offence to make home-made wine from anything but grapes, and then only from the juice of them unfermented.

Look out, wives and mothers!

INQUIRER.

Toronto, August 25, 1924.

Dear Sir,—I have your letter of the 21st August in which you ask whether mash capable of producing spirits would be open to objection. The possession of such a mash without a license under the Inland Revenue Act is an offence under Section 180 (e) within the meaning of the words so used "mash suitable for the manufacture of spirits." Under this section this is made an indictable offence punishable for the first offence by a penalty of from $200 to $600 and to imprisonment with or without hard labor for a term of from one to twelve months. Under Section 199 of the same Act it is permitted to brew beer for private use only after notice to the closest collector of Inland Revenue or to the Department at Ottawa, but beer so made is for the use of the person and his family and may not be sold. Under Section 44 of the Ontario Temperance Act, manufacturers of native wines from grapes grown and produced in Ontario may sell it at wholesale quantities of not less than five gallons in a cask at any one time or of not less than a dozen bottles of at least three half pints each at any one time. Nothing is said about home-made wine in the Ontario Temperance Act nor in the Inland Revenue Act, but I am informed by the office of the Toronto Collector that home-made wine must be made from pure native grapes and that nothing in the nature of a mash can be used for that purpose.

I shall be glad to give you such other information as lies in my power.—Yours faithfully,

E. BAYLY

Deputy Attorney-General.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ESSAY CONTEST

International Scholarship a $15,000 Home and Next Ten To Receive University Educations.

LOCAL PRIZES.

It hardly seems possible that a $1,500.00 home will be awarded to some school boy or girl within the next few months. Yet, some public school child in the United States or Canada will have at his choice as to location built for him or her an elaborate dwelling-house at a cost of the neat sum of $1,500 in consideration for proficiency displayed in the knowledge of the proper use of electric light, originality of ideas and thoroughness and neatness of work in the home lighting essay contest.

The home above mentioned is the premier International scholarship, but prizes will be awarded in every city and town for the best essays submitted, to be determined by local judges. Prizes will be donated by local electrical business concerns. Since Peterboro is known as the electric city it is not likely that she will be anything but most acceptable to the proposition.

From the best local essays will be chosen the select for the international scholarships, which number eleven. Ten of the scholarships include free tuition at an American or Canadian University, so that ten school children will receive free university educations at an American or Canadian college of accepted standard, as a result of the contest.

It is a school children's competition, sponsored by American and Canadian companies, who have subscribed $500,000 for the purpose of the contest, which is to inform children and their families in the proper use of electric light, so that in future years there will be less eye trouble. It is understood that by improper shading people have poor eyesight, either because they do not have enough light, or because the lights are not in the right place. The artistic arrangement of lighting fixtures will also be an accomplishment gleaned by competitors.

In Ontario the representative of the contest promoters is awaiting the approval of Sir Adam Beck before commencing his campaign. It is felt that it will just be a matter of formality in obtaining his consent, as the competition is considered educational to children and productive of much practical instruction that will prove beneficial to the health of the children participating. Also without doubt any good derived will permeate entire families and emanate in the homes of the next generation of which the present children will be the heads.

Mr. Robert Hicks, chairman of the Utilities Commission made mention of the campaign and its purpose at a meeting of the Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon, and comments from the two other commissioners, E. F. Mason and W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., indicated their approval of the scheme. Manager H. O. Fiske was also cognizant of the contest and expressed himself as in favor with its purpose.

As soon as the competition gets under way in the Province, Peterboro children will be further appraised of its progress as well as the rules of entry.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

AT THE GRAND.
SO THIS IS LONDON.

The local theatrical season was successfully ushered in at the Grand opera house last night when Theatrical Enterprises Limited presented their clever company of players in George M. Cohan's famous international success, "So This Is London." It is the second appearance of the comedy at the Grand and it can be truthfully said that the production given by the present company compares most favorably with the work done by the Metropolitan cast seen here last season.

"So This is London," is one of the most entertaining comedies of the last decade. It preaches the doctrine of international good-will by most amusingly pointing out some of the weaknesses of the British and American people. Perhaps these natural characteristics are exaggerated for comedy purposes, but there is enough truth in the delineation to drive home the lessons Mr. Cohan is seeking to impart. And the play is a thing of joy in its wealth of really funny lines.

The story of a clash between a typical United States family and an equally typical English family over a love affair between the son of the former and the daughter of the latter is well known to theatre-goers.

Last night's company showed itself thoroughly apreciative of the opportunities offered by this clever comedy. The cast throughout was thoroughly capable, and there was not a weak spot anywhere. Norman Wardell scored heavily as the American father, and Roger Allen was equally successful in his picture of Sir Percy Beauchamp. The respective brothers were skilfully portrayed by Evelyn Watson and Esther Pinch. Byron Hawkins made the breezy young American a convincing role. Jessica Paige was admirably cast as Lady Ducksworth; Ada Howard was a charming Elinor Beauchamp, and Henry Gurney's picture of an English business executive was effective. The minor roles were well looked after.

"So This is London," will be the attraction at the Grand to-night and to-morrow. Capacity audiences should greet this well balanced company.

The Grand's orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Forster, played a delightful programme last evening. The orchestra has been reconstructed since last season and several new faces are to be seen in the pit. The Grand patrons can look forward to good music during the season.

AT THE CAPITOL.

When Alice Terry enacted the stellar roles in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and in "Scaramouche," she was a stunning blonde. Her own natural dresses of auburn shade, bobbed, appear for the first time in her latest picture, "The Arab," showing for the first two days of this week at the Capitol Theatre. The change is just a little bit startling. Possibly the majority of the lady's screen admirers would prefer her "as you were."

"The Arab" stars jointly that romantic pair, Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry, in a romantic setting of Arabian desert backgrounds. The handsome Ramon is Jamil Abdullah Azam, the "greatest dragoman in the world," an ingenuous youth with the habit of frank speech which is said to be a characteristic of the real Arab. Alice Terry is Mary Hilbert, daughter of a missionary who strives to turn the followers of Islam from their mistaken ways. Into the role of the missionary's daughter Miss Terry projects some of the grande dame atmosphere which was a distinguishing attribute of her work in her two previous old-time pictures. Contrasted with the missionary garden where neophytes study the Christian Bible is the cafe of the Ouled Nail dancers, with their peculiar sensuous movements.

Involved is a Turkish intrigue directed against the Christians, Mary and her latest convert, the dragoman Jamil, who is really the son of a desert chieftain, rescue her father's followers with the aid of a band of swift-riding Bedouins, but the picture has not the happy ending demanded of most "movie" productions. However, Mary, on the eve of departing for the United States with her wearied father, promises to return to her dragoman. The desire for something different in the way of a finale might have been subordinated to a more popular idea, with the young lady embracing her dark lover.

The music for "The Arab" is appropriate and well played by the excellent Capitol orchestra.

The Capitol News Review and a laughable comedy, featuring a burlesque pair who do some sensational automobile and airship stunts, complete the programme.

REX INGRAM'S "THE ARAB" WILL GET LAST SHOWING TO-NIGHT, CAPITOL THEATRE

To-night will see the final showing of Rex Ingram's story, "The Arab" starring Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry, at the Capitol theatre. This is regarded as one of Ingram's

AT THE REGENT.

WHY DO PEOPLE GO TO PARIS? FOR INSPIRATION—PERHAPS.

John Gilbert, star of the Fox production, "A Man's Mate," was chatting after lunch with the director, Edmund Mortimer.

"Do you know this is the third picture I have done that had its locale in France?

"I wonder why everybody wants to go to Paris. Of course, a number of people go to study music and painting. But that doesn't account for the thousands who make the trip every year. Most of them are pleasure-seekers.

"The average American does not understand French sufficiently well to enjoy the theatre. In fact, our own musical comedies are far more attractive and the best French dramas are produced over here in English. Some hotels are good, but we have better on this side. As for beautiful women, we have more here than there because we have more population. The law of averages favors our proportion of beauties."

"The evidence does seem unfavorable toward Paris," agreed Mortimer.

"Then why does everybody go to Paris? Is it the glamour of the city? That was created more by American fiction writers than by any other medium. People don't make the trip because they want to see the scenes of the French Revolution. Those who visit the battle fronts of the recent war devote three days at most to the trip. That is a long time for most of them. But they will stay in Paris for a month. We're back where we started. Why do they?"

The director shook his head. "John, you'll have to ask somebody else. I knew an architect who had a contract to plan the street extensions of a small city that had begun to grow quickly. He wanted beauty as well as utility. This chap believed that Paris was the most beautiful city in the world and he went there to observe.

"For weeks he made sketches. Then one day he rode in a taxi. In twenty minutes he had about that many narrow escapes from violent extinction. He noticed that the streets, radiating like spokes from wheels, caused awkward intersecting angles that made it difficult to drive autos. That changed all his plans.

"But he did get something from Paris—a world of inspiration. He beautified his city by putting little square parks at mile intervals—'sort of breathing spaces,' he called them."

"So that's what they go there for—inspiration," they agreed.

There is still another inspiration in "A Man's Mate," which is playing at the Regent.

AT THE ROYAL.

MISS DANA'S NEW FILM SCORES HIT.

"Don't Doubt Your Husband" Fine Picture Fare for Everybody.

Viola Dana has never had a more delightful starring vehicle than "Don't Doubt your Husband," the new Metro picture that opened last night at the Royal Theatre for a run of three days.

Everyone who is married or who thinks of getting married should see this merry satire on the suspicious wife who is always leaping at conclusions and keeping the matrimonial nest in a turmoil. It's clean, wholesome fun, spiced with the paprika of smartness and sizzling with tense situations.

Viola Better than Ever.

Miss Dana, as the pretty little suburban wife, whose intensity of affection for her husband takes the form of waiting to supervise all of his actions, never looked more beautiful in her array of chic, fashionable gowns, and never romped through a role with more fascinating humor.

The story, written especially for her by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, affords real entertainment from start to finish. The material has been deftly handled by Harry Beaumont, one of the directors, who is coming to the forefront of the profession. The expert surety with which he handled big situations, and minor details, as illustrated in his recent production of "Beau Brummel" for John Barrymore, is felt throughout the production of "Don't Doubt your Husband."

Rousing Good Comedy.

It is a photo-play that affords top-notch entertainment, from the start, where Miss Dana, travelling the bumpy road of first year matrimony, takes the wheel of their motor car from her husband and speeds to arrest, to the finish where she submits to a playful spanking for her tumultuous jealousy.

Alan Forest, handsome and smartly groomed, plays the husband, with a zestful dash, and Winifred Bryson is an alluring and beautiful figure as the interior decorator whose charms cause all the rumpus. Others in an excellently chosen cast, include John Patrick, Willard Louis, Adele Watson and Robert Dunbar. John Arnold was responsible for the notable photography.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY.

There Is Absence of Co-operation Between Provincial and Federal Wings.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press). — Commenting on the apparent absence of co-operation between the Provincial and Federal wings of the Conservative party of Montreal, the Gazette this morning devotes its leading editorial to the examination of the interior organization of the party, and takes the occasion to ask if the "Protectionist Party" is properly led. The Gazette suggests that a convention of delegates drawn from all parts of the country should be summoned in order that a declaration of principles may be drawn up and the spirit of co-operation and confidence cultivated.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

WOMAN MISSING.

WINNIPEG, September 9 (Canadian Press). — Organised search for Mrs. Hortense Harris, of St. Vital, who has been missing from her home since Friday morning has proved unavailing.

The hunt was continued all Sunday night, residents of the community being joined by members of the different veteran organisations in the search.

PASTOR DIED SUDDENLY.

MOOSE JAW, September 9 (Canadian Press). — Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor if Knox Church, Weyburn, Sask., died suddenly at his home on Sunday night from heart disease.

He had conducted both services in the church on Sunday.

Deceased came to Weyburn, Sask., from Acton, Ont., three years ago.

He is survived by a widow and three sons and two daughters. Mrs. Wilson and one son will accompany the body to Acton for burial.

TEN MILLION CIGARETTES SEIZED.

A few days ago the Customs officials at Brockville forwarded to Ottawa about ten million cigarettes of American manufacture, which had been seized at that point.

This large quantity was collected in the space of a little over two months.

Those best informed on the subject claim that there are from five hundred million to seven hundred million cigarettes smuggled from the United States into Canada annually, replacing an equal quantity of cigarettes of Canadian manufacture.

The seizure made at Brockville during the past two months would seem to indicate that this estimate is, if anything, below rather than above the mark.

Five hundred million cigarettes brought unlawfully into Canada represents a loss in tax to the Dominion Government of the huge sum of $3,655,000.

HOUSE TRAVELS AYLMER STREET

Big Building Being Moved Bodily From Brock To Murray.

WEIGHS 200 TONS.

A spectacle that is unique in Peterborough, is the passage of an eight-roomed house down one of the main streets, but residents on Aylmer street between Brock and Murray, will see it from their parlor windows to-morrow, if the weather remains suitable.

The old house that has stood during much of Peterborough's history at the corner of Brock and Bethune streets, is to-day on its way to its new location, where a cement foundation has been prepared for it, at the southwest corner of Murray and Aylmer streets.

With its eight large rooms and a spacious hallway, the house weighs over two hundred tons, the contractor says. To lift one side of it yesterday for the insertion of rollers it was necessary to use ten 20-ton jacks and the feat was only then accomplished with difficulty.

The work is being done by V. A. Huffman of Port Hope, who specializes in work of this kind. He declares this house, which is owned by D. J. Lundy, is one of the best built houses in Peterborough. The frame walls are solid, and even under the strain imposed by lifting and moving the plaster of paris picture rails are uncracked.

In its new location the house will be brick veneered, and will start on a new lease of life. By to-night it is expected it will have reached the corner of Brock and Aylmer streets.

WEDDING DISSOLVED.

Judge Finds Province Has Right To Impose Conditions.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press). — The marriage ceremony performed in December, 1922, at Ottawa, by Rev. J. F. Gorman, purporting to unite in marriage Herbert Stewart and Beatrice Bishop, of that city, was declared invalid and in effect dissolved by Mr. Justice Wright, who handed down judgment to-day. The decision was based on the grounds that the bride was under eighteen years of age, and did not have the consent of her parents as required in the Ontario Amendments Act of 1919.

The late Chief Justice Sir William Meredith held that the Act ultra vires as infringing upon the legal province of the Dominion by attempting to effect restriction upon the capacity the person to contract the marriage. Mr. Justice Wright holds the view that the province has the right to enact such conditions.

This is the first Christian Chinese wedding held here.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—An old American tourist says that the roads leading out of Peterborough and in many places into it are just long avenues of weeds. Burdocks, thistles, and mullens line the roads worse than ever before. He says it gives the Canadian people a black eye because it is only a "shiftless white" or anegro who will stand for such out in the United States. Our farms look well enough, but our roads, expensive as they have been, are getting bad again and very rough, and the weeds are terrible. The farmer is eaten alive with taxes, some paying as high as $1.50 per acre chiefly for roads and education, and there is no evidence in either the roads or the education that it is well spent or necessary. The job-hunter is playing hob with the farmer.

Yours, Rural.

PARKING RULES AT EXHIBITION

All Vehicles Must Enter at Corner of Lock and Lansdowne Streets.

Inspector James Reid, acting Chief of Police, wishes to impress upon the public the necessity for following the special parking regulations in reference to vehicles entering the Exhibition Grounds to-morrow and the days following.

All cars must enter at the corner entrance (the gate at the corner of Lock and Lansdowne Streets). No vehicles will be permitted in at the main entrance. At the Lock Street entrance there will be a constable, who will direct vehicles to another constable, who will supervise the parking of the cars. The cars will be parked where the circus stood, directly south of the gate.

No vehicles will be allowed to enter the inside of the race track circle as formerly. Extra accommodation is provided in the grandstand this year, which will compensate for the number who sat in cars within the race track ring on other years.

With the same fine spirit and co-operation shown by the public at the Liberal demonstration and the Orange celebration the police department should not be confronted with any serious or embarrassing traffic situations.

TWO CHICAGO SLAYERS RECEIVE LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDER OF FRANKS

Youth Was the Controlling Factor In Judge Caverly's Decision This Morning.

COMPLETE VICTORY FOR BOYS' DEFENCE

Judge Said No Minor Had Ever Been Sentenced To Death In Illinois on Plea of Guilty.

CHICAGO ,IL., Sept. 10. — (United Press)—Sentence of life imprisonment was imposed today by Chief Justices Caverly on Nathan Leopold, Junior and Richard Loeb for the murder of Bobby Franks, the justice also imposed a sentence of 99 years on the charge of kidnapping for ransom.

The boys pleaded guilty to both offences.

The boys, sitting on the edge of their chairs at tense attention, received the verdict without a change of expression. It took them some thirty seconds to realize that they had escaped the noose and they settled back in their chairs with a thin smile. Nathan Leopold, Senior, slumped back in his chair with tears trickling from his eyes. His mouth worked with emotion.

The youthful prisoners were then whisked from the room so rapidly by their guards that their brothers had no opportunity to shake their hands.

The sentence of the court is a complete victory for the defence attorneys who had centred their fight on a life sentence as against death on the gallows.

Dispensing with the formality of calling the defendants before him, Justice Caverly sped from a reading of his decision to immediate sentence from the bench.

Leaning directly at the boys Justice Caverly said:

"I sentence you, Nathan Leopold, to the penitentiary at Joliet for the period of your natural life for the murder of Robert Franks."

Turning his gaze toward young Loeb, Caverly said:

"I sentence you, Richard Loeb, to the penitentiary at Joliet for the period of your natural life, for the murder of Robert Franks."

Turning back to Leopold, Justice Caverly said:

"I sentence you, Nathan Leopold, to the penitentiary at Joliet for 99 years for the kidnapping of Robert Franks."

And then the final sentence:

"I sentence you, Richard Loeb, to the penitentiary at Joliet for 99 years for the kidnapping of Robert Franks."

The Justice, in his opinion, said that he believed it was not within his province to decline to impose the sentence of death on persons of full age. The text of the opinion follows:

"In view of the profound and unusual interest that this case has aroused not only in this community,

ACCUSED LIKED OPTION OF JAIL

"Heaven In Jail Compared To Life on Logie Street," Said Lindsay Man.

CHAMBERLAIN SANE.

LINDSAY, Sept. 10. —J. B. Chamberlain, who created a sensation in police court circles last Friday, when he was charged with assault and with carrying firearms, and was remanded pending an examination by alienists as to his mental condition, came up for sentence before Police Magistrate Bradford Tuesday.

The alienists reported that while Chamberlain was eccentric at times and was obsessed with certain peculiar views, he was sane and was criminally responsible for his actions. The Magistrate dismissed the charge of assault against him and assessed the costs on his neighbor, Mrs. Hudson, who laid the cargo. On the charge of carrying weapons, Chamberlain was given a sentence of a week in jail and a fine of $10.00 and costs. He is subject to a further term of one month in jail if the fine is not paid.

Mr. Chamberlain expressed his satisfaction at the sentence imposed. "It is heaven in jail compared with living on Logie street," said Chamberlain.

The Magistrate said he had no other option. "It's a sweet option," replied Chamberlain.

RUST-RESISTANT WHEAT.

Manitoba Man Has Higher Yield Than Hitherto Grown In Manitoba.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Rust-resistant wheat is claimed by Samuel Larcombe, Birtleman, to have been successfully grown on his farm during the past season. No only do samples produced appear to be rust-resistant, but gives higher yield than wheat hitherto grown in Manitoba, according to Mr. Larcombe. Mr. Larcombe's wheat shows about 30 per cent. higher yield than Marquis variety. Samples show less than five per cent. rust, while the Marquis strains sown on the same day were 100 per cent. affected.

NEGLIGENCE CHARGE.

Southampton Man Let His Daughter Die Without Medical Attention.

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 10. — (Canadian Press). — Alexander Stuart, a prominent resident of Southampton, appeared before County Magistrate A. E. McNab here yesterday on a charge of neglect in connection with the death of his thirteen-year-old daughter, Ruth, who succumbed to heart attack two weeks ago without receiving medical attention, due to religious conviction of her parents. In his evidence at the hearing, Stuart appeared to be sincere in his religious belief, but promised to do better in the case of any sickness in the family in the future.

The Magistrate let him off on suspended sentence.

SALARY ATTRACTS

Many Applications For Government's $25,000 Banking Job.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10. — (Canadian Press).—There will probably be another meeting of the Cabinet at the end of the week when some of the long-standing vacancies may be filled. Two of the outstanding ones are the Chief Justiceship of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the chairmanship of the railway commission. With the return of Hon. James A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, an early appointment to the position of inspector-general of Canadian Banks may be looked for. It is understood that the Government has received a large number of applications for this positin which carries with it a salary of $25,000 year. Provision was made at the last session of Parliament for a taxation board and tariff commission but appointments have not yet been made. Mr Robb's presence at Cabinet Council may hasten these appointments.

DOLLAR CAUSES FRANK FLURRY

British Using Reserve of Francs To Defend the Pound.

EXCHANGE EPISODE.

PARIS, Sept. 10. — The present weakness in French exchange is attributed in banking circles largely to the fact that British financiers are using their reserves in francs to defend the Pound Sterling, in its struggle with the Dollar.

British banks have since 1920, held a considerable amount of francs, part of which has already been used to pay interest on the British debt to the United States. These banks still hold enough of the francs to influence the exchange when they use them to buy dollars, as is being done now. "There is no speculative campaign against the franc at present it is said at the Bank of France. Indications exist, however, of a movement to profit from the present weakness of French money in Switzerland and Czecho-Slovakia but only by individual financiers seeking to take advantage of monetary conditions.

Ordinary commercial needs have kept the franc down during the summer. French importers have bought dollars persistently since the end of June to provide for Fall payments. This steady purchase of United States money has been offset by the flow of dollars spent by United States tourists. These factors added to the use of francs by the London bankers to support the Pound Sterling, have resulted in the present flurry.

CONFERENCE IN YEAR PROPOSED ON ARMAMENTS

Will Be Sponsored By League of Nations As Initiatory Step.

DESIRE U. S. AID.

First Commission Debates Revision of Salient Arbitration Clause.

GENEVA Sept. 10. — Following out the idea that the League of Nations is a mechanism for holding successful international conferences officials are already directing their thoughts to plans for a great international gathering for the reduction of armaments, which, it is expected, will be held at Geneva within one year. The officials pointed out last night that the League Council has nothing whatever to do with the deliberations or the conclusions of the disarmament conference, once it is started.

When the Assembly gives the word, the Council will appoint a sub committee to make necessary arrangements and issue invitations. The question of United States participation is causing increasing interest and comment. The most general opinion is that the United States naturally would want to take part in the naval armament phase of the conference, although it might be disinclined to participate in the discussion on reduction of land armaments This is regarded here as a peculiarly European question and especially so if the limitation of land armaments is linked up with a part of mutual assistance.

Although the United States is not a member of the League, no objection is seen by the League people to inviting the United States.

Appreciation of U.S.

In the meantime, the council of the League yesterday recorded in public session its appreciation of what the United States has done in cooperation with the League commission in the elaboration of the arms control convention. The Council registered its pleasure that the United States will participate in the arms traffic conference of plenipotentiaries, and declared that the assembly always deemed it of the greatest importance that the question of the international control of the traffic be discussed in close touch with the United States.

The first general commission of the assembly debated lengthily as how best to make headway on the question of the revision of the covenant articles relating to the settlement of disputes between nations and remodelling article 36, of the statutes of the World Court of Justice, which is the famous arbitration clause. Eventually the commission appointed a sub-committee to study and report on both questions, which are regarded as being coordinated.

The sub-committee consists of Sir Cecil Hurst, England! M. Loucheur, or M. Briand, France; M. Adachi, Japan; Signor Scialoja, Italy; Senor Fernandez, Brazil; Dr. De La Torriente, Cuba; M. Politis, Greece; M. Titulescu, Rumania; M. Rolin, Belgium; Count Apponyi, Hungary; M. Erich Finland, and John O'Byrne, Ireland.

Another sub-committee was appointed to deal with the British amendment to Article 16, of the covenant, relating to an economic blockade.

Would Welcome Germany

The entry of Germany into the League is the main topic in the lobbies. The impression prevails that the attitude of the Powers on the eventual German application for membership will depend largely on the character of the report on German armaments by the Inter-Allied Board of Control, which it is expected will be favorable. If it is favorable, the Allies' objections will fade immediately; Germany would be welcomed and given a seat in the Council, and future control of German armaments would doubtless be turned over to a League commission.

The delegates of the great Powers say they have no intention of proposing a change in the unanimity rule as a condition of the Germans' presence at the council table.

Intellectual Institute

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The League Council yesterday unanimously accepted in principle France's offer to found and maintain an international institute of intellectual cooperation at Paris, to be placed at the disposal of the League of Nations and to work in collaboration with the League Commission on Intellectual Cooperation.

The Assembly will be asked to define the functions of the new institute, its administrative and juridical aspects and the relations between the proposed institute and existing international intellectual institutes, such as the Union of International Associations, the International Office of Bibliography, the International Council of Research and the International Academic Union, which are established at Brussels and the autonomy of which it is considered important to maintain.

Free Legal Aid

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The first League committee, devoted to the examination of legal questions, yesterday adopted the report of a subcommission providing free legal aid to the poor of all countries, regardless of nationality. This was on motion of the chairman, Sir Littleton Groom, Attorney General of Australia. Reginuald Heber Smith, chairman of the American Bar Association's Legal Aid Committee, was one of the experts engaged in elaborat the report, which was presented by Senator Scialoia, former Foreign Minister of Italy.

C.N.R. SHOPS MAY LEAVE LINDSAY

Rumor That High Powered Engines Do Not Require To Change There.

ON GRAIN ROUTE.

LINDSAY, Sept. 10.—A rumor is in circulation among C.N.R. Railway employees to the effect that Lindsay will lose its importance as a railway centre because of the decision of the railway heads to run grain trains from Midland to Belleville without change of engines or crews at Lindsay.

This is now possible, it is pointed out, owing to the installation of high power locomotives, and the laying of heavy steel. Color is given to this rumor by the construction of the new bridge on the "Missing Link" and the strengthening of other bridges along the line.

If these rumors prove to be correct, it means that the railway shops' equipment would be transferred to Midland. The shops at present at Midland have ample space at present, if such a change is planned.

DESERT TRAPS AUTO PARTY

Springfield (Mass.) Woman Dies, Husband and Daughter Collapse

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Sept. 9. —Mrs. Margaret Galberta of Springfield, Mass., is dead and her husband Edward Galberti and a 14- year old daughter are in the County hospital here following their collapse on the desert due to the intense heat. The doctors believe that Mr. Galberti and his daughter, who came through the heat without injury, is living with friends.

The family came by automobile across the continent and all went well until they passed Needles Cal., on the edge of the Mojave desert.

THE WEATHER.

Unseasonably cool conditions have prevailed lately, with night temperatures around 40 or less, while the highest day temperature is usually about 60. Thin ice has already been seen farther north in the county, and I have heard of light snowfalls in the east. The usual autumnal tints, however, have not yet appeared on the trees, while there is still considerable grain yet in the fields. Truly this is a strange season.—W.P.

GEORGE HARVEY PRINCE'S GUEST

Luncheon at Burden Home—Planted Oak Tree at Burden Home.

POLO OFF AGAIN.

SYOSSET, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Though he was the victim of a double stroke of ill luck Tuesday, the Prince of Wales did not allow adverse circumstances to spoil one of the fifteen days of his vacation on Long Island.

The Prince's right eye, bruised in Monday's polo game, remained swollen and discolored. Meanwhile a heavy rain caused a second postponement of the international polo matches, which he especially desired to witness. But the future British soveregn had a luncheon party of his own and dined and danced last night at the home of Harrison Williams in Glen Cove.

After a visit by Dr. Richard Derby of Oyster Bay, who expressed satisfaction with the improvement of the eye, the Prince drove over at noon to the J. S. Phipps polo field in Westbury and got in an hour of practice with Major E. D. Metcalfe, his equerry, despite a light but steady rain.

He then returned to be host to nineteeen guests at his temporary home at luncheon. Among them were Colonel George Harvey, former Ambasador to Great Britain and now editor of the Washington Post.

After luncheon the Prince dispatched some of his correspondence, delayed by his concentration on polo, horse races and dancing parties.

Major Metcalfe too, is suffering from a slight injury. He sustained a bruised leg from a fall while crossing the ocean and has required a medical attendance constantly since his arrival. After he played polo yesterday, the leg pained him and his physician again treated it.

The Prince emerged from his house in the afternoon to plant a red oak tree on the lawn near the red brick home of James A. Burden, which he is occupying. F. E. Blowers, a landscape gardener of East Norwich, Conn., who had assisted at similar ceremonies on the occasions of other notable visits, prepared the tree and watched the Prince, clad in a raincoat, cover its roots with earth.

U.S. WHEAT MORE THAN LAST YEAR

Winter Variety Shows Excess of Seventeen Million Bushels.

POTATO CROP BIG.

WASHINGTON, September 10. — A decline of 63,000,00 bushels in corn crop prospects and an increase of 23,000,000 bushels in the prospective wheat crop due to August conditions, were shown in the Government's September crop report issued on Tuesday.

With only 2,513,000,000 bushels indicated, or 533,000,000 bushels less than last year, the corn crop entered September in the lowest condition in the last 40 years with three exceptions.

Extremes of temperature and rainfall have been unfavorable to the crop, which was planted late, is extremely irregular in stand and development, and has not been able to catch up with the season except in some sections where the drought is ripening the crop prematurely. A frost at the average date, crop experts reported, would injure much of the crop in many important producing states, and even with a long autumn the crop will fall considerable below the average, having been injured by drought and other causes to such an extent that complete recovery is impossible.

Estimate of Wheat.

The wheat crop is now placed at 837,000,000 bushels, spring wheat having been benefited during August by particularly favorable weather in the principal producing states, where the quality is excellent and the acre yields high. Spring wheat prospects are 34,000,000 bushels higher than last year's crop, while winter wheat production is estimated at 589,000,000 bushels, or 17,000,000 more than last year.

Oats also improved during August to the extent of 47,000,000 bushels with a crop of 1,486,00 bushels forecast. That is 186,000,000 bushels larger than last year's crop. The generally cool season has been most favorable and large yields are expected in the important producing States.

Flaxseed Crop.

The flaxseed crop forecast at 29,000,000 bushels is larger than in any previous year excepting 1902. Growing chiefly in the spring wheat states the crop has regained its former prominence in that area.

Late potatoes in the northern states have been favored by August weather and a forecast of 413,000,000 bushels was announced, an increase of 14,000,000 over August 1st, and 22,000,000 bushels larger than the five year average.

TRIAL OF HOME BANK OFFICIALS BEGAN TUESDAY

Chief Accountant, Ocean G. Smith, Charged With Making False Reports.

CASE OF CROWN.

Outlined By D. L. McCarthy Contends There Was No Reserve Fund.

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—The trial of the first of the officials of the Home Bank charged with criminal offence in the conduct of that institution's affairs started Tuesday in the County Criminal Court before Judge Coatsworth, when Ocean G. Smith, chief accountant of the bank, was charged with making false statements to the Department of Finance of the Dominion Government. The trials of other officials and directors who were arrested following the collapse of the bank about a year ago will be brought on after the Smith trial is concluded.

The specific charges against Smith are that he did make out false monthly statements of the bank's affairs for May and June, 1923, and one false annual statement for 1923. D. L. McCarthy, for the Crown, outlined the case briefly, and one witness, B. J. Roberts, secretary of the Finance Department at Ottawa, gave evidence. He was being cross-examined by G. N. Shaver, counsel for Smith, when the court adjourned at 5 o'clock, to resume at 10.30 to-day.

Says No Reserve.

Mr. McCarthy took the statements made by Mr. Smith to the Finance Department and pointed out the ones which the Crown would claim were fraudulent. The first was a statement showing a reserve fund. Mr. McCarthy said the Crown would contend that there was no reserve fund at all, and that the statement that there was was false. It would also be contended that the statement that there was a seven per cent. dividend was deceptive, that in other items there was a false value. It would be contended, he said, that some of the securities reported as assets had no value at all. He said the Crown believed that of $3,000,000 of such securities $2,500,000 had no value.

The Crown would also contend that many of the so-called "call loans" were not call loans at all. The Crown further contend that an item of $433,000 in the report as value of bank buildings is not buildings at all but made up of automobiles, furniture, etc. Another item is that of $30,000 paid to M. J. Haney as a retiring allowance and carried in the monthly statement as an asset.

Statements Produced.

Mr. McCarthy said that of the $27,000,000 assets reported in the statement to the Government, ten millions were worthless in the opinion of the Crown, and only $17,000,000 was left to meet liabilities of $25,000,000. The Crown also charged that loans made to directors were absorbed in companies controlled by these directors so that it would be unnecessary to show them in the statements as loans made to directors. Mr. Roberts, the first witness, produced the original statements made to the Department at Ottawa, in which it is alleged there are fraudulent items.

There is a large number of witnesses to be heard. N. W. Rowell, W. N. Tilley and other prominent lawyers who are counsel for various persons facing trials were present through the hearing yesterday.

PREHISTORIC ANIMAL REMAINS EXCAVATED NEAR BUENOS AIRES

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—Laborers doing excavating work in the suburb of Vicente Lopez, just outside the city limits of Buenos Aires, have discovered a rich deposit of fossil remains of the beasts who used to inhabit this part of South America in prehistoric ages. The head of a glyptodon, the predecessor of the armadillo, together with dorsal and thigh bones, were among the finds, which included also bones of a prehistoric tiger.

The glyptodon skull is not of the giant species, but the paleontologists of the National Museum of Natural History, who are conducting the excavating work, consider it as one of the finest examples yet discovered being almost completely preserved, including nearly all the teeth.

EAST PETERBORO SEEKING HELP OF WEST FOR POLITICAL UNION

Three Parties In Session at Norwood Object Once More To New Constituency.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

To Meet West Riding Representatives In Appeal For County Boundary.

Strong speech featured the mass meeting at Norwood yesterday afternoon, called by the joint executives of the Liberal-Conservative, Liberal and U.F.O. Associations of East Peterboro, to protest against the conduct of the arrangement allocating East Peterboro with West Hastings, and severing the two constituencies in Peterboro County.

Enthusiasm ran high and although it was a sparsely attended gathering for a mass meeting, it was fairly representative of the riding, with a delegation of three from the city.

Whether or not the result of the gathering will be of any consequence remains to be seen, but at any rate an expression of opinion was obtained from those present.

A storm of protest was registered against the action of the government and G. N. Gordon was made a target by Roland Denne and W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., who asserted that the responsibility for the present condition in the East rested upon Mr. Gordon's shoulders. Mr. Denne declared that the Federal member had endeavoured to make his riding safe for himself, while Mr. Bradburn charged that Mr. Gordon had tried to better himself at the East's expense.

Conservative Support.

Both Mr. Denne and Mr. Bradburn expressed themselves as surprised at the allegations attaching the blame upon the executive of West Peterboro Liberal-Conservative Association. It was shown that the two gentlemen did all in their power to prevail upon the Hon. Arthur Meighen and other Conservative leaders to stand for a united Peterboro.

"I myself spoke over the phone and by letter to a Senator complaining very strongly about the way the riding was cut up," said Mr. Bradburn.

"I wrote to the Hon. Arthur Meighen and the Hon. Mr. Stevens, and had the latter in town one day," stated Mr. Denne. He further pointed out that in his efforts it cost him one hour's talk over the phone on another occasion.

Mr. Fred A. Eason.

In a sparkling speech Fred Eason, ex-Reeve of Otonabee, emphatically pointed out that the whole redistribution scheme was a saw-off, and stated that he was indignant at the butchering administered to East Peterboro, and that in the dickering between the parties East Peterboro had fared badly.

He took exception to the statements of Mr. Denne and Mr. Bradburn, and expressed his regret that both of them had to leave the meeting early in order to catch a train, but as they were not present he would have to object, during their absence, to several things said by them. Whatever else had been said by the previous speakers, he was not going to use the meeting as a brick bat to throw mud at Gordon. "Gordon is a big man, but not so big that he can throw up the whole House of Parliament." (Laughter.)

Don't Blame Liberals.

"There was a political saw-off that butchered East Peterboro. All the Conservatives, except one, and all the Liberals, voted to put East Peterboro where it is to-day, so don't blame the Liberals, although of course, Mr. Gordon was partially responsible."

The speaker felt that he had lost all interest in going to the polls and declared that the people have no say at all and representatives no longer cared whether their constituents voted or not in this Canada, that boasts of its freedom.

Are Efforts Wasted?

Col. T. D. Johnson, M.P.P., was of opinion that although the riding had been shabbily treated, possibly any efforts would be wasted unless co-operation was obtained from other constituencies, who were also dissatisfied. It was intimated that perhaps Welland would join in the protest but that as yet nothing definite had been determined. The speaker pointed that single handed a lone delegation, representing one riding, could make any impression at Ottawa.

Not a Rehash.

Criticising a report of the Examiner, Mr. C. A. Brethen, M.P., declared that the meeting was not a rehash of the redistribution question as quoted, and that he was not incensed at the passing of East Peterboro, and that he never favored any arrangement that would mean a violation of county boundaries at any time, although he further stated that he felt very keenly over the matter, and that in the last twenty years he did not know of anything that had affected him so closely as did the matter of the disposal of the riding of East Peterboro, which had been rent assunder, and its constituents transplanted with those of another riding, with whom East Peterboro had not associated with either municipally or federally.

The speaker remarked that although a lot of people had not considered redistribution seriously until after it was over, he was of the opinion that if West Peterboro would co-operate, and the ridings protested as a united Peterboro, the Government might be prevailed upon to reopen the matter of redistribution.

"I don't see much hope—I tell you frankly—and I don't entertain much hope, unless West Peterboro and the city co-operate," said the speaker in concluding.

Mr. Brethen predicted that 99 per cent of the people of East Peterboro would vote in favor of a united Peterboro in case of a poll, and asserted that the riding had been rent asunder without respect for the wishes of the people and the principles laid down by the greatest statesmen of the past. In the course of his oration he did not refer to the Deputy Speaker.

Read Communication.

Secretary Matthew Elliott read a letter from E. A. Peck, ex-M.P.P., of Peterboro, in which he expressed his regret at being unable to attend the meeting, and expressed his approval at the object of the movement sponsored by the executives responsible for the joint gathering.

Up His Sleeve.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, ex-M.P., remarked that he could disagree with things that had been said and thereby cause displeasure but pointed out, however, that he was in accord with the purpose of the meeting and that for the occasion would rise above partisanship.

The speaker agreed with the previous suggestion made, to bring pressure to bear upon G. N. Gordon by a joint meeting of the East and West in Peterboro, in which case the Federal member would go down to King and have the matter reopened.

Blame Yourselves.

Well over the eighty mark, Henry Humphries of Keene told his audience that the constituents of East Peterboro could blame nobody but themselves, pointing out that the cause of the trouble was too many sections and too many parties.

"I don't blame Mr. Gordon. If he can sway the whole redistribution committee he is a pretty smart man, and I honor him for it." This speaker thought that a petition would be the choicest manner of prevailing upon the Federal Government.

Cold water was hurled upon the petition suggestion when Mr. Hawthorne declared that in his opinion a lengthy petition would only serve as waste basket scrap once it reached the Parliament Buildings. Only a few hundred yards from the Hastings boundary Mr. Hawthorne was in a dilemma to know his position. He said he was standing on the ragged edge of nowhere.

Other Speakers.

W. A. Anderson, Deputy Reeve of Otonabee, expressed his dissatisfaction with the allocation of Otonabee, but, like the other townships of West Peterboro, Otonabee could look on during the elections.

Gerrymandering is out of the question, declared Mr. Anderson, as the Government has been working without a majority which makes such a suggestion impossible. He asserted that people are blaming Mr. Gordon wrongly, and stated that the Federal member had the present arrangement firmly fixed in his mind before any saw-off could take place.

It was shown that Mr. Gordon did object to a riding of 42,000 as the County of Peterboro would make, and although the speaker was of the opinion that East Peterboro had fared badly, he did not know of any way to better the present situation.

Harry Fitzgerald, president of the East Peterboro Liberal-Conservative Association, in a brief address touched upon the change as it affected Lakefield.

He stated that although it was just as convenient for Lakefield to be a member of West Peterboro as East Peterboro, because of past associations, the people of Lakefield regret the arrangement and are in accord with the movement for a united Peterboro.

Mr. Fitzgerald remarked that he had tried to influence conservative members to oppose the severing of the east from the west, but that evidently they had thought it better to have three or four places safe elsewhere at the expense of Peterboro.

This speaker humorously remarked that Lakefield had been considered among the elect and chosen to join the select crowd in the west riding.

Messrs. Miller and Wallace, of Douro, Cardwell, Wallace's Point, and Mr. Thomson were other speakers who voiced their disapproval of the changes wrought by the Redistribution Bill.

Mr. Hawthorne was strong in the debate at different times, and criticized Mr. Gordon for stating in the House that people of East Peterboro communicate and associate with those of the west and deal in Marmora and Madoc. He was of the opinion that the riding of East Peterboro as it stood should be retained as the constituents were entitled to it as a birthright.

Passed Resolution.

Although strong in their disapproval of the allocation of East Peterboro with West Hastings, the gathering seemed to be devoid of suggestions that would afford a remedy and affect a continuance of the movement started until the Government was ultimately prevailed upon to re-open the redistribution question.

Gradually suggestions came forward. Charles Breckenbridge, Westwood, suggested that a vote be taken to obtain a thorough expression of opinion on October 23, along with the plebiscite. The speaker believed that such an arrangement could be made with the proper authorities.

Other speakers winding back on the offensive, Chairman Dr. Monroe urged that the gathering get on with the business end as little progress was being made.

In accordance with an idea advanced by Mr. Thompson, who advocated that a representative meeting of both ridings in the City of Peterboro should be the next development, Mr. Sexsmith stated that the appointment of a committee to co-operate with the west was the next logical step.

Finally, on motion of Messrs. Hawthorn and Sexsmith, a resolution was passed, appointing a committee, composed of the Presidents and Secretaries of the three political organizations in East Peterboro, to plan a joint meeting with the corresponding associations of the west riding to be held in Peterboro, with a view to launching a protest representative of the varied interests of a united Peterboro.

With this resolution, the burden has been shifted to the members of the committee. The question of further progress now rests with them.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.— With 87 tramp steamers now chartered to load grain here for Europe in the near future, eseventy-six of them during the current month, actice preparations are in progress in this port for the biggest rush of grain ever known on the St. Lawrence. To handle the rush there is the new elevator at Tarte Pier with a loading capacity of 120,000 bushels per hour and the Windmill Point elevator which has been enlarged to a storage capacity of 3,500,000 bushels and a loading capacity of 100,000 bushels per hour.

F. A. Heywood, president of the Montreal Corn Exchange said to-day that it was possible that exports of grain from here in the next few weeks would total 140,000,000 bushels.

Not Special Case

It is not an uncommon thing that pleas of guilty are entered in criminal cases but almost without exception in the past, such pleas have been the result of a virtual agreement between the defendant and the State's Attorney, whereby, in consideration of the plea. The State's Attorney consents to recommend to the court a sentence deemed appropriae by him and in the absence of the special reasons to the contrary, it is the practice of the court to follow such recommendaions.

"In the present case the situation is a different one. A plea of guilty has been entered by the defense without a previous understanding with the prosecution and without any knowledge whatever on its part, moreover, the plea of guilty did not in this particular case, as it usually does render the task of the prosecution easier by substituting admission of guilt for a possibly different and uncertain chain of proof. Here the State was in possession not only of the essential substantiating fact but also of voluntary confessions on the part of the defendants. The pleas guilty, therefore, does not make a special case in favor of the defendants.

Since both cases, that namely of murder, and that of kidnapping for ransom, were of a character which invested the court with discretion as to the extent of the punishment, it became his duty under the statute to examine witnesses as to the aggravation and mitigation of the offence. This duty has been been fully met by consent of counsel for the state and for the defendants; the testimony in the murder case has been accepted as equally applicable to the case of kidnapping for ransom. In addition, a prima facia case was made out for the kidnapping case as well.

"The testimony introduced both by the prosecution and the defence was as detailed and elaborate as though the case had been tried before a jury It has been given the widest publicity and the public is as fully familiar with all its phases, that it would serve no useful purpose to restate or analysis of the evidence.

"By pleading guilty, the defendants have admitted legal responsibility for their acts, the testimony has satisfied the court that the case is not one in which it would have been possible to set up successfully the defence of insanity, as insanity is defined and understood by the established law of this state for the purpose of the administration of criminal justice.

"The court, however, feels impelled to dwell briefly on the mass of data produced as to the physical, mental and moral condition of the two defendants. They have been shown in essential respects to be abnormal; had they been normal they would not have committed the crime."

"It is beyond the province of this court, as it is beyond the capacity of human science in its present state of development to predicate ultimate responsibility for human acts.

"At the same time, the Court is willing to recognize that the careful analysis made of the life history of the defendants and of their present mental, emotional and ethical condition, has been of extreme interest and is a valuable contribution to criminalology.

"And yet the court feels strongly that similar analysis is made of other persons accused of crime would probably reveal similar or different abnormalities. The value of such tests seem to lie in their applicability to crime and criminals in general. Since they concern the broad questions of human responsibility and legal punishment and are in nowise peculiar to these individual defendants, they may be deserving of legislative but not of judicial consideration.

"For this reason the court is satisfied that his judgment in the present case cannot be affected thereby.

"The testimony in this case reveals a crime of singular atrocity. It is, in a sense, inexplicitable, but is not thereby renderless inhuman or repulsive. It was deliberately planned and prepared for during a considerable period of time. It was executed with every feature of callousness and cruelty. And here the court will say, not for the purpose of extenuating guilt, but merely with the object of dispelling a misapprehension that appears to have found lodgment in the public mind, that he is convinced by conclusive evidence that there was no abuse offered to the body of the victim. But it did not need that element to make the crime abhorrent to every instinct of humanity, and the court is satisfied that neither in the act itself nor in the motive, or lack of motive, nor in the antecedents of the offenders, can he find any mitigating circumstances.

"For both the crimes of murder and of kidnapping for ransom, the law prescribed different punishments in the alternative. For the crime of murder the statute declares:

"Whoever is guilty of murder shall suffer the punishment of death or imprisonment in the penitentiary for his natural life, or for a term not less than 14 years.

"If the accused is found guilty by a jury, they shall fix the punishment by their verdict. Upon a plea of guilty, the punishment shall be fixed by the court.

"For the crime of kidnapping, for ransom, the statute reads:

"Whoever is guilty of kidnapping for ransom shall suffer death or be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, or any term not less than five years.

"Under the plea of guilty, the duty of determining the punishment develops upon the court and the law indicates no rule of policy for the guidance of his discretion. In reaching his decision, the court would have welcomed the counsel and support of others. In some States the Legislature in its wisdom has provided for a bench of three judges to determine the penalty in cases as this. Nevertheless the court is willing to meet his responsibilities. It would have been the path of least resistance to impose the extreme penalty of the law. In choosing imprisonment instead of death, the court is moved chiefly by the consideration of the age of the defendant boys of 18 and 19 years. It is not for the court to say that he will not in any case enforce capital punishment, as an alternative, but the court believes that it is within his province to decline to impose the sentence of death on persons who are not of full age.

"This determination appears to be in accord with the progress of criminal law all over the world and with the dictates of enlightened humanity. More than that, it seems to be in accord with the precedents hitherto observed in this State. The records of Illinois show only two cases on minors who were put to death by legal process —to which number the court does not feel inclined to make an addition.

"Life imprisonment may not, at the moment, strike the public imagination as forcibly as would death by hanging; but to the offenses, particularly of the type, they are, the prolonged suffering of years of confinement may well be the severer form of retribution and expiration.

"The court feels it proper to add a final word concerning the effect of the parole law upon the punishment of these defendants. In the case of such atrocious crimes, it is entirely within the discretion of the Department of Public Welfare never to admit these defendants to parole. To such a policy the court urges then strictly these defendants will both satisfy the ends of justice and safeguard the interests of society."

BEATS UP HER MAID.

Noted Singer, Mme. Frances Alda Trounced Her Maid.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Mme. Frances Alda, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and wife of General Manager Catti-Casazza, was accused by her maid yesterday of having attacked her in the state-room on the Olympic, which reached this port last night. The maid, exhibiting marks on her neck, said that her employer had thrown her across a trunk, scratched and beaten her and torn her waist. A different version of the fracas which was being gossiped about by many passengers was given by the singer. She said that the maid was impudent and disobedient, and that screams which attracted stewards to the state-room were emitted by the girl because Mme. Alda insisted that she remove from the baggage a small package of liquors. The maid, Marie Gabriel complained when the ship arrived that Mme. Alda was keeping back her passport and that she would be unable to land. After Alda had been asked about the incident by reporters she relented and the girl left the ship with her.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10. — Sarah Jane Spencer, nee Dunk, died Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Rutherford, who resides on the town line between the townships of Seymour and Rawdon. Her husband passed away about 20 years ago, but the deceased is survived by a large number of children and other relatives. She was born in the township of Seymour, on the seventh concession and would have been 93 years old had she lived until the 27th inst. One son, Herbert, lives in Rawdon, and another, Ernest, resides in Havelock. A number of neices and nephews are in Campbellford.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon.

Old Land mark Removed.

The work of demolishing the old brick building which stood at the south-east corner of the Public school grounds, is well advanced. The building served for years as the home of the primary department until this was moved into the old High school. William Hall purchased the property from the Board of Education for $205, including the furnace. The building was put up many years ago when material was cheap and contains some excellent brick and timbers.

The site will be leveled and will make a desirable addition to the playgrounds.

School Fair Friday.

The Seymour School Fair will be held Friday at the Fair grounds and as an excellent programme has been prepared, parents of the children, and all others interested, are cordially invited to attend. This is the final School Fair held here under the direction of District Representative Smith of Brighton.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10.—A euchre party, under the auspices of the ladies of St. Mary's Parish, will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 16, at the home of Mrs. P. J. Kelly, Rear Street. There will be two sessions, with twelve tables at each, one from 3 to 6 and the other from 8-11 p.m. A limited number of tickets will be sold, and these may be obtained at the store of George Sullivan, or from J. E. Birks, the druggist, on the west side of the river. The proceeds of the entertainment will be used for the purchase of prizes to be given at the bazaar to be held on October 21, 22 and 23, for which tickets are already on sale.

OBITUARY.

WM. H. BILLINGS.

MARMORA, Sept. 10. — There passed away on Monday morning, at his home in Marmora Township, a well-known figure in the person of Mr. William H. Billings. Deceased leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss: Wellington on a neighboring farm; Jesse and Frank at home, and Mrs. Fred Burns, of Marmora.

The funeral, which leaves his residence at 1 p.m. to-day, is being arranged by Marmora L.O.L. 319, of which he was a chartered member by reason of long membership. He was also a staunch member of Golden Star No. 748 Preceptory R.B.K.I., which also will be represented.

GOVT. PROPOSES A NEW HIGHWAY

Tax on Gasoline Would Help To Build Lindsay-Peterborough Highway.

LINDSAY, September 9. — The town council will take no action relative to the decision of the Legislature to make Toronto the headquarters for the issuance of motor licenses. A member of the council had a resolution of protest framed for presentation to the Premier and the Minister of Highways but it met with such stiff opposition that it was withdrawn.

It was pointed out that action of this nature was interference in the affairs of the province. The government was trying to create revenue, as was illustrated in the proposed tax on gasoline, which some of the aldermen held was along the right lines.

The people were demanding improved highways, and at the same time were opposing legislation outlined by the government for the purpose of raising money to carry out these works. The government had decided to construct a Provincial highway from Lindsay to Peterboro, and any resolution of protest, such as the one referred to, it was pointed out, might give the project a black eye.

IMPROVEMENT IN RUHR.

Marked Improvement In Business Activities Has Set In.

DORTMUND, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—With the removal of the Customs barrier and other economic restrictions which had been imposed by the Franco-Belgian occupational authorities in the Ruhr area, marked improvement in business activities has set in.

The resumption of normal railway traffic is viewed as one of the immediate benefits resulting from the abolition of hitherto burdensome ordinances. Mines and smelters are looking forward to a steadier supply of rolling stock of which there has been a growing shortage, due to existing red tape.

THE POSTAL EXHIBIT.

The Postal Department in making an exhibit at the Peterborough Industrial and other large fairs is setting an example to manufacturers and business firms in taking advantage of this opportunity to show the people something of its work.

There is no public utility that plays a bigger part in the life of the community than the postal service, and it is well for the public to learn in the practical demonstration how the Postal Department operates.

The local exhibit is most complete.

In fact, it will be a model postoffice, receiving and distributing mail during the four days of the Exhibition.

Lectures on postal details will be a feature, and the citizen who visits the exhibit cannot fail to come away much better informed about this most important public service department.

Every Exhibition visitor owes it to himself to spend some time at the postal exhibit.

A CURE FOR PESSIMISM.

Sometimes when you have been listening to some pessimist telling how bad conditions are in Canada and how much worse they will be next winter, until the whole situation looks as blue as indigo, it is well worth while as an antidote to read the headlines in the daily papers.

Here are a few culled at andom by the Examiner. You'll find little evidence of blue ruin in these captions, or in dozens of others that are to be read every day.

"Kent farmers net a million on beet crop."

"National Railways will pay, says Robb."

"Big increase in entries at London Fair."

"Farmers of Western Canada will forge ahead this year."

"Canadian National for 1924 leaves far behind all old high marks."

"Many Canadians homeward bound from the United States."

Try picking out these signs of prosperity for yourself.

It is a wonderful tonic when things are not going just right.

ONTARIO DAY.

Tomorrow is Ontario Day at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt, a visit from whom under any circumstance would be an important occasion, will deliver the opening address.

He should be greeted by an audience large enough to impress him with the fact that the people of Peterborough and the surrounding district have confidence in their Exhibition.

With Children's Day over today, there are three big days left, and the attendance, with anything like favourable weather, should assume record-breaking proportions.

It is agreed that no previous Exhibition has been of such an elaborate nature, either from the viewpoint of exhibits and special displays or considered from the amusement standpoint.

There is more to see, more to entertain, more to educate than at any other Exhibition.

Months of enthusiastic planning on the part of the directors have culminated in a series of unparalleled exhibits and in a program?me crowded full of interesting features.

The issue is now up to the people.

Upon their patronage the result depends.

The management has confidently relied upon that patronage.

It has provided the biggest Exhibition on record, trusting that the citizens will respond to an extent that will make sure of the financial success of the event.

Ontario Day should start the procession toward a new attendance mark.

IT'S YOUR EXHIBITION.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterborough Citizen:

May the Examiner call your attention to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition once again, just as a final reminder of the importance of the event.

The Exhibition has made vast strides in recent years.

You'll remember not long ago when people used to say, "It's the same old thing every year."

You can't truthfully say that in 1924.

You can't go down to the Exhibition Grounds nowadays without being impressed with the signs of progress in sight.

Forget the attractions and the exhibits for a minute or two and let your memory stray back—not so very far back either—to the old conditions.

Back to the days when the only building of any importance was the leaky, red "main building," when the grandstand held only a few hundred people, when the grounds showed little sign of attention.

Today you find a manufacturers' building, poultry building, cattle and horse barns, a grandstand accommodating 4,000, well-kept grounds, neatly laid out roads, whitewashed fences and posts.

If you had been away from Peterborough a decade you'd scarcely be able to recognize the Exhibition Grounds.

And the progress in the plant has been marked by a similar advancement all along the line.

The expansion has been made possible because a little crowd of enthusiastic city and country folks with faith in this district and enthusiasm and courage in their own hearts have planned and worked and dared, allowing no obstacle to daunt them until their own optimism has swept them through to success.

A bunch of hard workers, striving to accomplish something they firmly believe to be of general value, that is the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board.

The whole burden should not be laid upon their shoulders, and it is up to you as citizens to do your part by liberally patronizing the Exhibition.

Don't be satisfied with one visit—you'll miss half the attractions if you do.

Make it a festival for the rest of the week—you'll be all the better for a day or two away from the drab routine of everyday life.

It is the biggest Exhibition yet—make it the biggest in attendance as well.

Remember—it's your Exhibition.

THE ANNUAL FESTIVAL.

There was a time when the fall fair served the single purpose of bringing men and women together for the joy and economic advantage of comparing the products of their skill and work, says the Ottawa Journal. Zest was given to such exhibitions by the competition involved. Time, however, has made marked changes in that regard. From being wholly an exhibition of the fruits of field and garden, the output of factory and workshop, the deftness and taste of women in producing useful and decorative things for the home, the autumn fair has come to be a great annual festival. In this natural and inevitable evolution there have been both losses and gains.

The rivalry for the largest pumpkin, the fattest hog, the finest horse, the most tempting fruits of the orchard, and the daintiest needlework of the housewife was all very genuine and stimulating. It marked the days of simple things, and the emergence from primitive life. It was helpful and wholesome. The people of the community came together for a day or two and enjoyed themselves in ways suitable to the time, the occasion and their means. Such assemblages and exhibitions served their day and object. They would seem pitifully inadequate and uninteresting today; yet they had their place among the forces of development and progress. They are therefore of historical value.

Today we have what is best described as the great fall festival. It is a fair, still bearing some of the characteristics of the thing it has displaced; but it is a fair in which the people who come together make up an exhibit more striking and instructive than any other. The social aspects are at least as prominent as the economic. Entertainment is not subordinate to instruction. In such a coming together of many thousands one is easily able to identify the marks of growing wealth and progress. The contrasts with similar gatherings of a generation or so ago are both obvious and suggestive. They grow out of our national advancement.

WOMEN AND MANNERS.

Goethe, writing when men were for the most part roystering, quarrelsome fellows, said that the society of women was the foundation of good manners. Indeed he might have gone further and declared that the society of women was the origin of manners. For in the days when Adam delved and Eve span, manners were begotten. In the care of his help-mate, man learned to think of others first, and, as Emerson has said, "good manners are made up of petty sacrifices."

Modern cynics will doubtless dissent from Goethe's opinion. They will argue that he spoke without experience, that he saw only the embarrassed restraint of the swashbuckler in the presence of gentle, sheltered women, and that he could not have guessed how gay would be the abandon of both sexes when women ceased to be sheltered and men were no longer swashbucklers. They will cite the turbulent crowds on the street cars, the shouting joy-riders and road hogs of the Lake Shore, the antics of the dance halls, and declare emphatically that nowadays where women are most, manners are least in evidence.

Yet Goethe was right and the cynics will be wrong. For the intoxication of spirit which leads to a lack of self-restraint is not in itself bad manners. It may indeed be the very best of manners. To laugh, to enjoy yourself hilariously, to crack jokes with strangers, to make your little contribution to the sum of general happiness, to do all those little things which a too highly decorous society may regard as ill-bred, are not bad manners, so long as you wish to give pleasure to others by doing them. They would be bad manners if by acting thus you hoped to attract attention to the richness of your attire or the extravagance of your table. Good manners can only exist in the conscious effort to cause pleasure or to refrain from hurting others. They have nothing to do with the correct choice of a fork, nor the formal manner of accepting an invitation. They have nothing to do with "being at ease" in the company of strangers. Many women with the "grand air," many men with the most complete mastery of the "arts and graces" of society are in reality ill-mannered and churlish.

It will sometimes be said of those who have had many advantages of upbringing that they have instinctively good manners, that they are "to the manner born." Now this can mean nothing unless it is the suggestion that they were born without original sin. For it is man's instinct to be a grasping, selfish creature, always wishing to get the better of his fellows, always ready to fight rather than make a petty sacrifice. In early childhood, it is true, a man may learn from stern, wise parents that he cannot have everything he wants, that it is not always polite to push through a door first, nor manly to hurt another's feelings. But this is only the groundwork on which he must build his character himself. Unless and until he has learnt that he should think of others first, his training will be only a veneer, an external polish to hide the primitive selfishness of his nature. It is the "little nameless unremembered acts of kindness," not the way in which a man shakes hands or says goodbye, which marks him for a gentleman or a boor. A knowledge of etiquette is no substitute for a gentle nature.

And where else but in the society of women will one learn the joy of performing those little acts of kindness and making the petty sacrifices of which good manners are made up? In this age of bluff and bluster it is woman's duty to show man that on estill finds "the mildest manners with the bravest mind." Succeeding in this, she will have done more to make Canada a great nation than any Government at Ottawa has ever succeeded in doing.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 10. — Butchers' cattle are selling higher this week, but the quality is better and choice steers are bringing up to $7.25 a cwt. for domestic killing. Specialists in stockers and feeders are doing a more active trade and a good many loads will go out this week. Western heifers between 700 and 800 pounds sold late on Monday at $4.00 a cwt. and Ontario 900-pound feeders up to $5.25 a cwt. Trade was moderately active yesterday morning in the butchers' section and prices were steady with Monday with fat cows holding somewhat firmer.

Receipts yesterday morning were 72 cars, 166 cattle, 326 calves, 1,313 hogs, and 1,176 sheep and lambs. There will be a second delivery, but this is not heavy. There were no choice butchers' cattle on sale yesterday and good mixed butchers sold from $6.15 to $6.50 a cwt. Medium butchers were $5.25 to $5.60, and common useful killers $4.25 to $4.50.

Cows were firmer for the better kind, and one made $5.00, with other good cows $4.25 to $4.50. A few export bulls sold at $4.00 and $4.10 a cwt. The demand yesterday appeared competent to take care of the supply of cattle at steady prices.

The demand for calves keeps up, prices continue firm. Choice calves are going from 11 to 12 cents, good ones 9 1-2 to 10 cents, and medium 7 to 9 cents.

Lambs settled at 12 1-2 cents for ewes on Monday afternoon, and were steady at that figure yesterday morning. A small package of ewes sold at 13 cents yesterday, and full bunches at $12.50 to $12.65 a cwt.

Sheep were steady, but the supply was mostly in heavies and prices ranged from 4 1-2 to 6 1-2 cents per pound.

Packers made a further drop on hogs yesterday, making the bid price f.o.b. $9.00 a cwt. Sellers are not accepting the bid without a fight and think they can hold for $9.25.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, September 10 (Canadian Press). — Markets remained unchanged. Storage eggs will now come into direct competition with fresh eggs, as the latter class are becoming scarce and a gradual increase in prices is expected. Holders of storage eggs are firm in their views, and buyers are not taking hold freely, believing prices will not increase for the time being.

Toronto market unchanged. Jobbing specials 47, extras 41 to 43, firsts 35 to 37, seconds 28 to 30.

Montreal market active. Retailing specials 50 to 55, extras 45 to 50, firsts 38 to 40, seconds 35.

Ottawa market firm. Jobbing extras 42, firsts 36, seconds 30.

Winnipeg market continues dull. Jobbing extras 40, firsts 33, seconds 27.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, September 10 (Canadian Press). — The feature of the domestic grain market was the demand for Ontario malting barley, and sales of several cars of No. 3 extra were made at 99 cents per bushel ex-track and for car lots of Ontario No. 2 oats buyers were bidding 58 cents per bushel, and for No. 3 grade 57 cents per bushel ex-track. There was no change in prices for Canadian Western oats in car lots.

The spring wheat grades of flour were unchanged in price, with demand steady at the recent decline, and the tone of the market for winter wheat grades was also steady under a moderate demand. There was no improvement in the demand for millfeed at the recent decline in prices, and the market was quiet. Trade in standard grades of rolled oats was slow.

The baled hay market shows no change. A firm feeling prevails in eggs owing to the much lighter supplies coming forward. The consumptive demand continues fairly good.

There was nothing new in the butter situation but the undertone to the market continues easy owing to the lull in the demand. Demand over the sale for cheese continues very limited, and in consequence the volume of business was small.

The feeling is easy.

Old crop beans are in good demand with prices ranging from $2.05 to $3.00 per bushel for choice No. 1 grades.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 10 (Canadian Press). — Widespread frost, together with correct general belief that the Government estimate of corn yield would be sharply reduced gave the corn market yesterday a decided lift.

Corn closing prices were strong at 1 1-8c to 1 1-2c net higher, December $1.13 7-8 to $1.14.

Wheat finished unsettled at 3-8c net decline to 1-4c advance, December $1.27 5-8 to $1.27 3-4 and May $1.34 to $1.34 1-8.

Oats 1-4c off to 3-8c up.

Broadening of demand for corn was evident throughout the day. Iowa reports of frost were especially effective as a stimulus to buyers and a further incentive came from the fact that the outlook was for additional frost last night both in Iowa and in other important States as well.

Absence of definite reports of serious damage from last night's frost, however, tended somewhat to check the upward swing of values.

After the close, too, a disposition was shown to construe the Government report as bearish in some respects, the Washington estimate of yield, although much reduced as compared with a month ago, being a good deal larger than unofficial reports had indicated.

Only 5.6 per cent. of general taxes is spent for highway purposes.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN TREATY.

This Debt Is a Very Modest Affair.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—(United Press).—From the standpoint of Russia's creditors—taking them by and large—the new Anglo-Russian Treaty is a very modest affair indeed.

It provides for settlement of only a fraction of Russia's foreign indebtedness.

Of the Russian pre-War Government debt, France holds 80 per cent., Great Britain 14 per cent.

Of Russian industrial securities held abroad and now repudiated by the Soviet Government, France holds 32 per cent., Great Britain 25 per cent., Germany 16 per cent., Belgium 15 per cent., U. S. A. 6 per cent.

Of Russia's war loans abroad Great Britain holds 70 per cent., France 19 per cent. and the U. S. A. 7 per cent.

Russia Hopes to Borrow.

What Russia hopes to do under the new treaty is to borrow in the London money market enough to start up her stagnant industries again and with the surplus—probably modest—she will (a) compound with the owners of the old Russian bonds, paying just enough to galvanize the bonds into life again (b) pay something to the English holders of Russian securities that represented honest-to-goodness business enterprises in Russia, but she flatly refuses to pay a copeck for properties which were bankrupt or indifferently managed, etcetera (c) take up the question of the war loans independently, each issue on its merits, based on the theory that much of the money left England at all, likewise the supplies purchased with the loans.

WINTHROP MAY FORGIVE GIRLS

Distressed By Elopement, Especially Of His Elder Daughter—Not Ill.

COUPLES HIDING.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Grenville Lindall Winthrop, retired Wall Street banker and antiquarian, will forgive his daughters, Emily L. and Kate, who eloped last Saturday with workingmen.

This information was received from Lenox, Mass., the scene of the most sensational and romantic elopement in metropolitan society circles in a decade, where Mr. Winthrop has a 100-acre estate.

Reports that the aged philanthropist was prostrated and under the care of a physician were discounted Monday when it was learned that he had been in direct communication with Mrs. Thomas S. Morse, mother of the husband of his daughter Kate.

Mrs. Morse demurred at first in speaking of the meeting, but finally said:

"Mr. Winthrop is a splendid man and father. He, of course, is much distressed at the suddenness of the whole affair and feels hurt that his daughters did not take him into their confidence. Now that the first shock has worn off, however, he realizes that it was only the natural thing for the girls to do."

She was then asked:

"Has he forgiven them?"

An egnimatical smile played over the features of Mrs. Morse. Then she replied:

"Maybe."

Little Trouble in Store.

Her whole actions indicated, however, that there was to be little trouble in store for her son when he brought his bride back to her father's home.

Mr. Winthrop, it was learned, is convinced that the marriages of his daughters is entirely legal and that there is no way by which he can have them annulled.

In this particular case it will be impossible for him to count on the usual means of separating daughters of wealth from husbands of ordinary means, for the marriages will not affect his children financially. Both are wealthy in their own right, having been bequeathed large sums of the will of their mother, who died a few years ago. The possible threat of cutting them off from the Winthrop millions would be of no avail in this case.

While it is admitted that Darwin Spurr Morse, the twenty-one-year-old Lenox electrician, will undoubtedly be accepted by his father-in-law, indications point that an entirely different attitude may be taken by the elderly financier toward Corey Lucian Miles, middle-aged widower and his former chauffeur, who won the hand of his eldest daughter, Emily.

Honeymooners in Hiding.

He is said to be most bitter over this marriage, particularly after he learned that his ex-chauffeur's former wife had only recently died. Friends of the family said that he is willing to overlook the elopement of Kate because of her youth. She is but twenty-one, the same age as her husband. Emily, however is thirty-one, and the father feels that she should have shown more discretion in bringing such publicity upon the family as the elopement was bound to produce.

The whereabouts of the honeymooners is still a mystery. No trace of them has been found. They disappeared into the Berkshire mountains in their father's automobiles and, with the exception of one telephone communication with their father, have not been heard from since.

That they may have come directly to New York and are now in the city was indicated Monday, when it was learned that someone had visited the studio of Kate, at No. 130 West Thirty-seventh street, Sunday night.

The superintendent of the building admitted that the studio had been occupied, but said she did not know by whom. She admitted further that the only one besides herself holding a key to the apartment was the former Miss Winthrop.

It was also learned that a model of a Greek discus thrower, for which her husband is said to have posed last winter, is now missing from the studio, as well as numerous photographs of the Winthrop sisters.

NO MORE ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER!

"I want every Asthma sufferer in this city to try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Schiffmann announces. "Go to your druggist and get a package of my Asthmador and, should it fail to give instant relief, the druggist will cheerfully refund your money without any question whatever." The Doctor says further: "No matter how violent the attack, how obstinate the case, or what else has failed, my Asthmador or Asthmador Cigarettes will give instant relief, usually in 10 seconds, but always within 15 minutes. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials abundantly prove what my remedy has done, and I know it will do the same for others. I am so positively certain that it will produce instant relief and will be found the best remedy ever used that I have no fears of authorizing these druggists to give this guarantee, or of their being called upon for the refunding of money."

No risk whatever is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee, and such a personal trial will prove more conclusively than a "free sample" could possibly prove.

MADE A RECORD.

Indian Rode 110 Miles Through Mountain Country In 14 Hours.

BELLA COOLA, B.C., Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—One hundred and ten miles most of the way, over mountain crags, in 14 hours, riding on horseback, was the amazing achievement of Chief Squinash, an Indian, who travelled from Anham Lake settlement to this city to catch a boat for Prince Rupert to give evidence in a court case. Chief Squinash declared that his horse and he were somewhat fatigued.

PARTICIPATION OF FRANCE IN LOAN

French Bankers Agreed To Pay One Twentieth of $200,0000,000

PARIS, September 10 (United Press). — French bankers have agreed to subscribe to one-twentieth part of the proposed $200,000,000 international loan to Germany, in response to an American suggestion, Le Matin stated to-day.

The newspaper says that Andrew J. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, while in Paris urged Premier Herriot and M. Robineau, the governor of the Bank of France, that France should participate in the loan.

Mellon is quoted as saying that the international loan was not popular in the United States and that France's example would be useful.

French participation for the purpose of influencing potential American subscribers has been decided accordingly.

The question of whether the bonds shall be offered to public subscription here has not been determined.

COLORADO VOTERS SELECT CANDIDATES

On Tuesday After Quietest Campaign in History.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—Colorado voters tomorrow will select candidates for all Congressional, State and Legislative offices, after one of the quietest primary campaigns in the State's history.

Lawrence C. Phipps, incumbent, has no opposition in the Republican primary for renomination to succeed himself in the United States Senate. Alva B. Adams, Democrat, who now is filling the unexpired term in the United States Senate of the late Samuel D. Nicholson, has no opposition in the Democratic primary for the nomination for the seat now held by Senator Phipps. As a result, Colorado's present United States Senators—Phipps and Adams—will oppose each other at the November election for Senator Phipps' seat and one of them will retire from the Senate after the November election.

Three Republicans are contesting for United States Senator to fill the Nicholson vacancy. They are Charles J. Moynihan of Montrose, Charles W. Waterman of Denver and Rice W. Means of Denver. Two Democrats are contesting in their own primary for the party nomination for Senator Nicholson's seat. They are Morrison Shafroth of Denver, a son of the late United States Senator John F. Shafroth, and Benjamin C. Hilliard of Denver, who as a member of Congress during President Wilson's administration voted against the declaration of war with Germany.

William E. Sweet, Democrat, Governor of Colorado, has no opposition in the Democratic primary for renomination. In the Republican primary, Robert F. Rockwell of Paonia, now Lieutenant-Governor, Clarence J. Morley, a judge of the Denver District Court, and Earl Cooley, a member of the State Land Board, are contesting for the nomination for Governor.

The Ku Klux Klan issue has entered into the campaign. Opponents of Mr. Means and Judge Morley have charged that they have the backing of the Klan. It also has been charged that Judge Morley and Mr. Means are members of the Klan. No public denials have been made by either Mr. Means or Judge Morley. Mr. Cooley, in announcing his candidacy for Governor, made a bitter attack on the Klan, and has been making his campaign along the same lines.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WHOOPING COUGH.

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper. As a citizen I would like to know why one or two families should be placarded for whooping cough, and others allowed to run freely. Having taken the precaution from spreading the whooping cough, I asked the Medical Health Officer's advice on sending the children to school, as we had the whooping cough in the house. I was advised to keep them at home, and that very same evening we were placarded for whooping cough. Not that we mind being presented with the card, but it seems very unjust that two families on the street should be placarded and ten families have whooping cough and are let go. If the family who started the cough was placarded, well we would have never got it, and when the inspector was told he politely said it was none of his business. He was ordered to place our card and that is all. This is the third time I have had cards on our house, while others had the same sickness and let go. Is it justice or favoritism? Placard one, placard all.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

SEEK BURIED CITY IN NEVADA CAVERN

Hieroglyphics Resembling Both Aztec and Egyptian Have Been Found.

ELY, Nev., Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—Scientists of the University of Nevada, in an exploration party headed by Governor J. C. Scrugham, recently have read again the pages of the past in caverns near the famed Lehman Caves and found them rich in archaeological lore.

Figuring found on the rock will be a cavern, said to be undeniably Aztec, leads Dr. B. F. Schappelle, archaeologist of the university, to believe the discovery one of the most important in recent years. The finding of pottery in the caves also moves the pottery line about 300 miles further north than any ever before found.

Dr. Schappelle and Dr. Peter Frandsen, biologist, have employed six men to assist in the work of excavating. The party found it difficult in places to discern the hieroglyphics, as cloudbursts had washed much debris into the caverns. Hieroglyphics resembling both Aztec and Egyptian work have been found and members of the party are optimistic in predicting that a veritable underground city will be discovered.

A strong flow of water was discovered 90 feet below the level of Baker Creek, and live angleworms were found at a depth of 100 feet. A burial cave with an opening four by six feet at the surface, leading to a large underground room, containing five human skeletons, the bones badly disintegrated due to extreme age.

ARAB WOMEN WANT TO GO VEILLESS

Social Isolation of Women In Palestine May Be Broken Down.

JERUSALEM, Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—The stubborn conservatism of the Mohammedan custom with regard to the social isolation of the women in Palestine may soon give way before the movement launched by Arab feminists for the removal of the veil. The Holy Land, backward in many respects, is behind such Moslem countries as Turkey and Egypt in breaking the shackles holding women in seclusion.

The movement for the enfranchisement of Moslem women in Palestine is of recent origin and is traceable to the influx of people from the west, especially Jewish immigrants coming to settle in their national home.

As the first step towards their emancipation the women demand ecclesiastical sanction for the removal of the dark veil from their faces. If such flying in the face of age-long custom does not win official approval, some of the leading Arab women of Palestine are determined to do what their Moslem sisters did in Turkey, where the veil has been entirely cast off, or at least in Egypt, where only a light transparent veil is still worn extending from below the nose.

The ban on the public appearance of women has retarded the development of the Arab drama, and it is the hope of the feminists that the admittance of Moslem women to the theatrical stage will follow the removal of the veil.

Arab women of Palestine are keen not only on social emancipation, but on participation in politics.

"Take us out of our insulting seclusion and remove from our faces the offensive black cloth, give us our opportunity as free members of a free people, granting us the right to fight with you for our national ideals," says in part in appeal appearing recently in an Arab language newspaper in Haifa. "Then we shall in gratitude sacrifice our jewels, delivering up our gold and precious stones for the establishment of the Arab National Bank."

TIME FOR FORCING WINTER BULBS HERE

Work on Plants Wanted For Christmas Should Be Started, Says Expert.

By JAMES H. BURDETT,
Director of the National Garden Bureau.

If one wishes to force tulips, daffodils or hycinths into flower in earth in time for Christmas, it is necessary to get an early start. These bulbs are obtainable about Sept. 1. From three to five months are required for facing, depending on the variety. Early tulips must be chosen for Christmas flowering, and one of the forcing varieties of daffodils, such as the double Von Sion, or the single large trumpets, King Alfred, Emperor and Empress. Any of the hyacinths will do.

The first step is to place them in pots. So-called "pans," shallow pots used for bulbs are suitable; deeper pots may be used. The soil should be good potting soil, a mixture of leaf mold, sand and loam, such as florists use, and unless one knows how to prepare it, it may be purchased from florists. Place the bulb so that its pot is half an inch below the surface of the soil.

Must Force Formation of Roots.

The first step in forcing is to induce the formation of roots. The soil should be well watered, and then the pot placed where it will freezing. A pit dug in the garden protected from surface water, and well drained, so water will not stand in it, is a good place. The pots may be placed in the pit and covered with leaves, ashes and sand, or even loose soil. The purpose is to reproduce conditions, as nearly as possible, under which bulbs form roots when planted in the ground. Freezing will not injure the hardy bulbs, but will delay growth and make them force less easily.

In an outdoor pit no additional watering is necessary. If storage is indoors the soil should be kept from drying out excessively. Root action should follow; and when top growth begins, the bulbs may be brought to the light; or they may be kept in the outdoor pit and so retarded until they are wanted. In any event it is advisible to remove them from the pit before the ground freezes heavily for the winter.

All Light Possible Is Needed.

After being brought to light, which should be all the light it is possible to give, the bulbs should be kept in a temperature of 60 degrees until stems, leaves and flower buds are formed. In the home, this means to keep them out of overheated rooms, preferably on a porch or sunparlor, where windows may be opened for ventilation and coolness. After the buds are formed, a temperature of 70 degrees will bring out the flowers, and if haste is needed a higher temperature will produce it.

Too high temperatures will result in spindly growth and may prevent any flowers. Air is as important as light. Success in forcing bulbs depends entirely on the points here enumerated and unless one is willing to pay strict attention to details it is better not to undertake it. But if the rules are carefully followed, by one who understands something of plant growth, very fine flowers may be produced.

The black hat is at the height of its popularity, but the facing of white or delicate pink is frequently noted.

Just like Sweetheart Days

There is no more charming reminder of early "courtin'" days than a bountiful box of Moir's. To surprise the lifemate with a revival of the tactics of youthful days is to bring back with a rush the happiest memories.

Styles in lovemaking may change—with only this difference in the proffering of "sweets to the sweet"—it's a two or five-pound box of Moir's to-day where a one-pounder was the vogue twenty years ago.

Continue to create the happiest days for her by bringing back the fondest recollections—with a box of Moir's every week—the most delicious chocolates she has ever tasted. She loves them just the same to-day.

BOATS HELD UP.

Northwest Wind On Upper Lakes Caused Much Delay.

CLEVELAND, September 10. — Heavy weather was reported all around yesterday, and freighters took some delay on the upper lakes. At the lower end of Lake Superior the wind was blowing at the rate of 46 miles an hour from the northwest.

Ore carriers were held outside at Garry on account of the strong undertow, and the docks at that port were idle. The boats could not go into Calcite or Rockport to load stone and some shifting was done.

There was a heavy sea running on Lake Erie but the steamers were working in and out of the big ore ports. The fleet will lose some time and the boats will be late in reporting for cargoes.

HOARDED GOLD OF U.S. SHOULD BE PUT TO USE

Amount of Gold Flowing Into America Worries Government.

OTHERS IN NEED.

age In Possession of Wealth.

By LORD SYDENHAM OF COMBE, G. C. M. G., G. C. S. I.

(Copyright by United Press.)

LONDON, Sept. 10.—(United Press).—To the average man it seems strange that the repayment of a loan should be the cause of anything but satisfaction to the recipient.

Certainly in small, private transactions any other result is inconceivable, but in the larger sphere of international finance it would appear that different rules obtain.

Evidence is now accumulating that those who control the finances of the United States have reason to be perturbed by the prospect facing them in consequence of the amount of gold which has flowed, and is still flowing in their country from the repayment of money borrowed during the war.

A Huge Increase.

It is estimated that in a comparatively short time the gold reserve of the United States has risen from 40 per cent. to over double that figure. With this increase in course, a commensurate fall in the value of the securities held. In other words, when the debt is redeemed, the I. O. U. is returned. But whereas the I. O. U. of a good debtor produces interest periodically (and thus may be said to "earn money") when it is redeemed the gold merely lies in the safe and begets nothing.

While America is thus accumulating gold the currencies of a number of European countries are debased because they have no backing of gold.

Here, then, we have one country reported to be apprehensive about its growing hoard of gold, and other countries suffering for lack of it.

The Gold Standard.

In these circumstances, it is natural that people should inquire whether the gold standard is a snare and a delusion—whether the unprecedented disturbance of finances, due to the war, is about to reveal to us some new economic law which will exercise a profound influence on the financial systems of the world.

The drawbacks of the gold standard, which I cannot here discuss, have led some economists to propose other bases of currency.

For example, Mr. Henry Ford a short time ago published a series of articles, claiming that it was possible to dispense with gold and to create a currency based solely on the credit of a State. Now it is conceivable that a small, self-contained country, independent of foreign trade, might thus subsist. Within its own boundaries such a country might be able to transact its business with paper, deriving values from the credit of its Government without any backing of gold.

A Question.

But the general instability of democratic governments is such that it is difficult to believe that a paper currency, resting on their credit alone, would be accepted in other countries. The natural resources of a State, the skill and diligence of its people and the soundness of its industries may justify a large whole. Nevertheless, the high credit of America rests on other factors and is not sensibly affected by this hoarded gold.

A Steadying Influence.

In the event of a war, America would find her hoarded gold of more or less advantage, depending on the duration of the conflict and its cost. To hold an ample supply of gold at the beginning of a war as the basis of loans is a steadying influence against economic disturbance.

But these are speculations and the only certain conclusion seems to be that there can be no natural return of this tide of gold to Europe until the exchanges with America have undergone transformation.

On the other hand, it is possible that the holders of the hoards might in their own interests employ them in Europe and elsewhere—if ever Europe settles down to peace, stability and hard work.

LAKEFIELD I.O.O.F. ATTEND SERVICE

Rev. Walter Cox, P.G.M., Preached—Luncheon in Lodge Room.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 10.—On Sunday morning about fifty members of Sovereign Lodge No. 401, I.O.F., Toronto, motored to the village and attended morning service at St. John's Church, where Rev. Walter Cox, a past grand-master of the I.O.F., is rector.

Among those present were Dr. G. M. Hermiston, general-commanding the Patriarch's Militant P.M. Branch, and Mrs. Hermiston, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. John Carter, and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Muir. About twenty-five members of the local lodge accompanied them to St. John's Church. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stuart, of Peterboro, and Mr. and Mrs. David Miller, of Warsaw, were also present.

Mr. Cox preached a forceful and appropriate sermon from the text "Forgetting the things which are behind and pressing on to the goal which is set before us," referring to the motto of the Oddfellows to go forward to meet the future instead of dwelling on the triumphs and success of the past. Many people make the present miserable by continual references to the "good old days." We should keep up with the times and meet the demands of the present day cheerfully. St Paul was one of the greatest men of his time, and while he had sinned grievously he had repented and been forgiven by God, and, secure in that forgiveness, he pressed on in good works untiringly, with no useless regrets for the mistakes of the past. When we confess our sins and are forgiven, we should not hamper our future usefulness with vain regret. Oddfellowship stands for the highest ideals, and in every way conforms to the teaching of the Church regarding the betterment of one's fellowmen. The Oddfellows Order has always taken a decided stand on this matter, and are remarked for their helpfulness to those in need.

Guests at Luncheon.

After service, the visitors were the guests of the local lodge at a luncheon in Leonard's Hall, which was served by members of St. John's A.Y.P.A.

After luncheon, Dr. Hermiston made a brief speech in response to the invitation of Mr. Cox, who acted as chairman, referring to the pleasure and mutual benefit which result from a visit of an outside lodge, and urging that visits should be more frequent between the lodges. Referring to the sermon, he urged on all the importance of keeping one's face set forward and avoiding the mistakes of looking back. Mr. Stanley Marshall also spoke briefly. Both speakers voiced the sentiments of their lodge in thanking the local lodge for their hospitality and kind welcome and the members of the A.Y.P.A. for their work in serving lunch.

A short impromptu meeting was held in the lodge-room after which the visitors visited some of the beauty spots of the village and later motored back to Toronto.

Bridge Nears Completion.

The county bridge is nearing completion and will be formally opened in the near future. The members of the County Council paid a visit to the village on Friday and were well pleased with the progress of the work and the appearance of the bridge. The road between the county bridge and the high level bridge over the canal is being graded at the present time.

The unremitting supervision of the traffic over the dam has its reward in the fact that no accidents have occurred. Messrs. Armstrong and Sullivan are to be congratulated.

Hard Times Dance.

An event of the week will be the "Hard Times" dance at the Riverside Pavilion on Thursday evening of this week. Several novelty dances will be introduced, including balloon and streamer dances. This will be a decided novelty in the village, and will, therefore, be specially attractive.

A very successful afternoon tea was held on Friday at the residence of Mrs. H. J. Sutton, Regent Street, under the auspices of the W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church. A large number of ladies attended and spent a pleasant afternoon.

Personals.

Miss Mellen and Mr. Percy Fairbairn, of Port Huron, motored to the village and spent last week with friends.

Mr. J. A. Creasor spent the week-end at Stoney Lake.

ROOSEVELT CABIN IN DAKOTA MAY BE HOUSED IN STONE

BISMARCK, N. D., Sept. 10. —(Associated Press).—The Roosevelt Cabin, once occupied by Theodore Roosevelt when recuperating at the old Maltese Ranch, seven miles south of the village of Medora in the Little Missouri Bad Lands of North Dakota, is to be preserved in a fitting shrine, according to the State Historical Society of North Dakota.

Lewis F. Crawford, curator of the society, is preparing plans for a tsone shrine of stately and substantial design to be erected over the building. Assistance through popular subscription from every State is being considered, Mr. Crawford states, owing to requests from all sections for the shrine's establishment.

The cabin has historical interest in North Dakota and the northwest. No other building in the State has traveled as much. It was taken from the Maltese Ranch, where it had stood for more than 20 years, and shipped to the St. Louis Exposition in 1904. At the close of the exposition, the cabin was returned here and set up on the Capitol grounds.

The building is constructed of pine logs, cut on the upper waters of the Little Missouri in 1880-81.

JAPAN'S DEBT IS FIVE BILLION YEN

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—Japan's national debt totals 4,498,000,000 yen ($2,249,000,000), according to an announcement by the Department of Finance. This figure does not include short term indebtedness, such as the temporary exchequer bonds and rice bonds, which, if included, would bring the total to more than 5,000,000,000 yen.

JANETVILLE GIRL GIVEN SEND-OFF

Miss Richardson Is Now a Member of Central School Staff.

JANETVILLE, Sept. 9. — The many friends of the Rev. and Mrs. G. E. Ross, who have been holidaying in the West, will be glad to welcome them back to the parsonage this week.

Miss Miriam L. Richardson, who takes up her new duties this Fall as a member of the teaching staff of the Central School, Peterboro, was presented with a gift and the following address on her departure from Janetville recently:

To Miss Miriam L. Richardson,

It is with very deep regret that we your friends, neighbours and fellow workers, have learned of your intended departure from our community, and we take this opportunity to express to your that regret and our heartfelt appreciation of your life and labours among us. As the organist of our church we have always felt that you were more than faithful to your duty, in the Sunday School you have always been faithful, efficient, and dependable, always an example for both scholar and teacher, in all departments of our church's work, your life has always been to us an example of self sacrifice, and if we failed to make you conscious of our feelings we now assure you that that though unknown to yourself were continuously reminding us that you did not seek your own comfort.

In the public school you have been an example of industry, faithfulness and devotion to duty and the highest interests of the children intrusted to your charge, and while we regret your going from us we do sincerely congratulate you on being called to a position that is at once the highest and most valuable commendation of your labours as a teacher among us and expression of confidence in you for the future in other schools, by those most competent to judge in such matters.

But above all we esteem the integrity of your Christian character, you have always stood firmly for the things that are best, you have never compromised with the questionable practices so common in this age of transition. You have been an example to the young of the community of intelligent devotian to high principles. We felt the sense of a great loss. Your place in the church and community will be very difficult to fill, but we will rejoice with the people who are henceforth to have your services, and we devoutly pray that the great Father may keep you in health, give you success in your labours and a speedy entrance into the hearts of the people whom you are to serve such as you have won for yourself in ours. Will you kindly accept this gift as a token of the sentiments which we feel and would feign express.

May the Giver of all good be with you always, is the prayer of the people of your home church and community.

Signed on their behalf,

T. H. ROBINSON
W. W. STINSON,
Janetville.

SUN YAT-SEN WILL NOT QUIT

Says Chinese Commissioner of Foreign Affairs.

CANTON, China, Sept. 9.—Determination of Dr. Sun Yat-sen to stay with the fight until he has won, was reiterated in an interview granted recently by Dr. C. C. Wu, commissioner of foreign affairs and son of the late Dr. Wu Ting-fang.

"The recent rumors of Dr. Sun's death we have not been able to trace," Dr. Wu declared. "He was not even ill. If he were ill we would issue bulletins.

"There is not much in the story about negotiations for peace with Chen Chiung-ming. The precedent condition for peace is that General Chen issue a formal apology for his revolt. The attempt to murder Dr. Sun in the middle of the night, open rebellion against an established government, actions like these raise a moral issue. That must first be settled by public apology and the rest will be easy. There will be certain arrangements about placing of troops certain compromises on both sides. Probably a northern expedition would be organized, not for the purpose of capturing Peking, but to return to their own provinces the troops of other sections which have been fighting under Dr. Sun's flag.

"Dr. Sun realizes full well that war is hard on the people, even a well-conducted war. But he is no more 'tired' of this war than were England and France 'tired' of the war in 1918. He is detemined that he must win.

"The removal of the soldiers to barracks outside the city is not proceeding as rapidly as anticipated, or rather not quite according to schedule; we anticipated that it would be slow."

Dr. Wu dressed in a long, formal gown, received the interviewer in a big reception room, well supplied with blackwood furniture. Two cups of tea, Chinese style, were unobtrusively served but the commissioner did not even bother to take a sip of his. One was somehow made to realize that he was a busy man, though there was never a hint of this in the way he spoke. His Oxford English and his conversational power are delightful. It was rather in the quiet composure of his manner as he politely waited for the interviewer to ask him another question.

700TH ANNIVERSARY

Celebration of Coming of Franciscan Friars To Canterbury Celebrated To-day.

CANTERBURY, Sept. 10. — (United Press).—The 700th anniversary of the coming of the Franciscan Friars to England were celebrated here today, under the presidency of Cardinal Bourne, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in England.

Canterbury was the place where the Franciscan Friars made their first English settlement in 1224. They arrived at Dover on September 10 and proceeded straightway to this place. Within a few weeks they had made additional settlements in London and Oxford, and within thirty years they had spread throughout the country, bringing a great revival of religion.

According to the Franciscans, their order championed popular liberties against the highly arbitrary rule of Henry III. At Oxford they established a famous theological school from which in later years came Roger Bacon, Duns Scotus and other celebrated schoolmen.

FILTRATION PLANT.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—As a result of criticism of Ottawa's water supply, the Board of Control is entertaining the idea of a filtration plant for the capital city, and the City Engineer was asked to prepare estimates at the Board meeting yesterday afternoon.

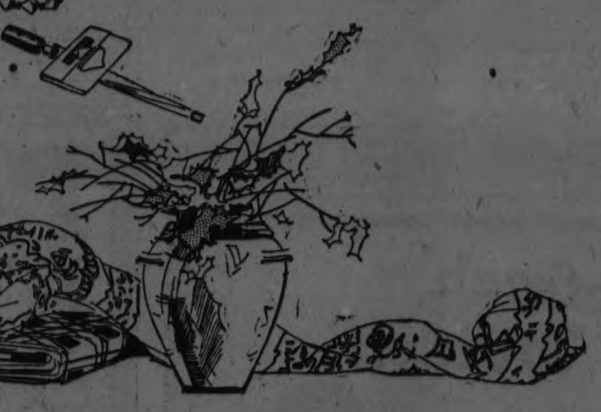
Joy to the spirited girl, joy to the matron in the new Millinery modes for fall. With the roguish little Felt Hats that have come for the former and the chic high crowned styles arrived for her mother, there is promise of Hat satisfaction for all. Further, for the street there are small brimmed sailors and many quill-trimmed Chapeaux, belting ribbon Hats and crushers of duvetyn. While for dress the Hat takes on larger proportions and is very likely to flaunt ostrich trim, double brim or bird of gay plumage. Interesting to note that black is fashion-favored and to see them with a tinge of red for youth.



The GRESSMAN Company Limited

ALDERMAN CROWE PRESENTS HIS REPORT TO THE CITY COUNCIL

Union of Canadian Municipalities Held Convention in Windsor.

CANADA'S GROWTH.

Municipal Responsibilities Discussed By Experts at Big Gathering.

Acting as your delegate to represent you at the twenty-fourth annual convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, held on the 7, 8 and 9 of August, 1924, in Windsor, Ontario, I report as follows

On arrival we were escorted to the Prince Edward Hotel (a two million dollar structure), where the convention held their sittings, and the greater number of delegates registered and made their reservations.

An official welcome was tendered the visiting delegates by His Worship the Mayor of Windsor, also by other prominent citizens of the border cities.

After dinner a paper was read by Oscar Morin, Esq., Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs for the Province of Quebec, entitled "To-day and Yesterday in Municipal Affairs." He referred to the earliest period when the French settled in this country, and no municipal law was to be found for many years to come. Every dispute or fancied injustice was referred to the abbe or cure of that district, who were the people's representatives. After they weighed it over carefully, and when they found any merit in the claim, took it up with the military authorities. This system continued until long after the English took Quebec, and the other provinces up until the year 0830, when began the nucleus of our present municipal government. His address was of high order and very interesting.

Canada's Industrial Growth and Possibilities.

(By Mr. Maclure Selanders, Commissioner, Border Chamber of Commerce, Windsor.)

His subject was a large and interesting one. He referred to the enormous export trade that was being done. Canada exported more in tonnage and more in value than any other country or nation (taking the per capita of its population).

And yet there were great routes to be opened up which would prove most beneficial. He emphasized the St. Lawrence Great Waterways as a necessary route for conveying merchandise, coal and grain; also forest products, without the breaking of cargo. We cannot afford to undertake that enormous cost at the present time. But it was bound to come in the near future. He contended that Canada would be, as a whole, most benefited.

With reference to taxation, he gave some sound advice and warned the delegates against overtaxing industry. He pointed out that some municipalities looked upon big business concerns as easy sources of revenue. He said that this policy was bound to "kill the goose that laid the golden egg." It is a fact that no one likes to pay taxes, and corporations are not an exception to the rule. Every business enterprise, invariably, locates where taxation is moderate, provided that other considerations are satisfactory. We hear it said that agriculture is our greatest asset. But where would its value be if it were not for the great industries which creates the great cities with all they possess, due to industry located in them. The sooner we realize that both agriculture and industry should go hand in hand, and that industries make the home market which, after all, is the best market for the farmer, and for the nation as a whole.

The delegate from Quebec City did not acquiesce on the St. Lawrence route. But on the address, as a whole, he was accorded an unanimous vote of thanks.

An address by Mr. John Atkinson, assistant corporation counsel, of Detroit, finished the afternoon session.

The delegates were tendered a banquet by the Mayor and Council of the City of Windsor in the evening. A toast list was carried out, and prominent citizens of the border cities were present, and enlightened us on the great strides that was being carried out by all co-operating together.

On Friday, Aug. 8, the convention opened at 10 a.m., with an address to be given by V. A. Fournier, Esq., Sanitary Engineer, Provincial Bureau of Health, Quebec, but failed to put in an appearance for some reason not given, the chairman said.

This paper would be published in the Municipal Review. The chairman then called on Mr. C. B. Brewer, Commissioner of Recreation, City of Detroit, Mich., to address the union on

"Playgrounds and Recreations: A Municipal Responsibility."

This address was a source of knowledge for all. We were much impressed with the fluent and able manner that he delivered it. He stated that Detroit has 150,000 recreation places, and 61 swimming pools. Twenty-two million hours are given to leisure by those who labor, or 15 per cent. of each working day during the year 1923. He stressed the fact that recreation and playgrounds reduced crime wherever it was carried out, as it drew the young away from the poolrooms and gambling dens. In Chicago, 85 per cent. of crimes committed there were under 20 years of age. Last year, when they adopted playgrounds, there was a marked decrease in juvenile crime.

In Detroit 85 per cent. of crime was committed by those under 24 years of age, before playgrounds were extensively in use, and to-day a very noticeable decrease has been accomplished.

Playgrounds without supervision and equipment was nothing. Children had to be taught how to play. One hundred children a year were killed on the streets in Detroit. Detroit levied 8 mills on the dollar for playgrounds, equipment and supervision.

The street was not the place for children to play, and the authorities should provide proper places for them, not to gather them in a heap, let them and around, and look at each other, here the strong would abuse the weak, here bad language would be indulged , and every conceivable mischief would e brought about if no supervision was seen to. We are responsible to provide the necessary playgrounds, and all that should go with them, and do so early before the land is taken up and become very costly to do so.

The afternoon was spent by touring the border cities of Ford, Walkerville, Sandwich and La Salle by the motor league. A lunch was served at the Beach Grove Country Club, adjacent to the border cities, where a group photo was taken. We then proceeded to La Salle, where the Mayor gave a banquet in our honor, with Dr. Reaume, late minister of public works, under the Drury regime, acted as chairman. This is the home of the export liquor traffic on the boundary line, and we saw to it that it did not all go across while we were there at any rate.

Saturday morning convention opened in due form, and was given an address on "Good Roads and Highways," by Samuel Squires, Esq., Deputy Minister of Highways, Province of Ontario. He said that cities did not pay in proportion as to what the farmer did for the cost of roads. The farmer paid 50 cents per acre, to only 7 cents per capita paid by cities.

There are 610,000 surveyed roads in Canada, which approximately is 5,000,000 acres. Vehicles carried the greatest transport of all carriers.

The Province of Ontario received $4,232,000 from auto licenses last year, and the Federal Government received $89,000,000 as customs from autos and auto parts, which went to show that it should pay a proportion of the cost of roads whereas they do not assume any. He urged the municipalities to bring pressure to bear to have them do so. In the State of Michigan the cities paid 73 per cent. of the cost of all roads in the state. The Legislature of Ontario would next session take up a more uniform method of taxation whereby those who use the roads most would pay accordingly. It was not fair to have those who did not use the roads to pay as they were doing at the present time. There is to be a reorganization of the present system in the near future to remedy the administration of that department.

I asked him if it were legal for members of the Suburban Area Commission to sell gravel or to be in any way financially interested personally to the municipalities they were acting for. He said he knew the state of affairs in Peterboro' and county, which were not just right, and that some changes would be made to remedy those conditions. This concluded the addresses.

The reports of committees on resolutions and nominations was proceeded with. I introduced two resolutions which were fully discussed and approved, which you will note.

Your Committee on Resolutions begs to report that the following resolutions have received careful consideration and approval, and are submitted herewith for your adoption, namely:

1. Moved by Mr. Baker, London, seconded by Mr. Hardy, Lethbridge, the attention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities having been called to Bill 58 to incorporate with a capitalization of half a billion dollars the Confederation Canal & Power Company, which bill was before the Parliament of Canada last session but withdrawn at the last moment;

And having in mind that the measure may be introduced again next session;

This Union, while thoroughly approving all efforts to develop and cheapen the transportation routes of the country, feels justified in calling the special attention of Parliament to the extraordinary powers sought by the applicants as regards prospective power development;

Considering the fact that millions of dollars have been invested by the Province of Ontario in Hydro development in which many municipalities are interested and the projected works of the Company if constructed will overlap or encroach upon the field now occupied by the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario;

This Union is of the opinion that authority to generate, acquire, use, transmit and distribute electric and other power and energy, should not be conferred upon the Confederation Canal & Power Company unless and until the government of the Province of Ontario has been consulted thereupon and its views ascertained and every care taken by Parliament to guard the interests of municipalities likely to be affected;

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Secretary of State for Canada and to the Railway Committees of both Houses of Parliament.

2. Moved by Mayor Mitchell, seconded by Mr. Baker, that whereas the high rate of interest of mortgages on real estate, amounting in some instances to ten per cent., in addition to a bonus for securing the loan, is a very serious handicap to the purchasing of homes; and

Whereas the cost of money in Canada is not any higher than in the United States;

Therefore resolved that the Union of Canadian Municipalities urge that legislation be passed by the Parliament of Canada and Provincial Legislatures throughout the Dominion strictly limiting the rate of interest on loans covering houses and dwellings to not more than seven per cent. and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Federal and Provincial Governments. Approved.

3. Moved by Joseph. Crowe, Peterboro', seconded by Mr. Wilkinson, Niagara Falls,

Considering that a resolution passed by the City of Peterborough requesting the Legislature "That plans and specifications of roads and work on roads adjacent to cities be placed before the Municipalities concerned for approval";

And that this resolution has received the approval of practically all the cities in the Province and that the Legislature passed same to the Department of Highways;

Therefore Resolved that the Union of Canadian Municipalities urges that above request be put into effect immediately. Approved.

4. Moved by C. W. McCrea, Sault Ste. Marie, seconded by Dr. Rondeau, Westmount,

That the offices of Secretary-Treasurer and Parliamentary Agent be amalgamated, that the person occupying the said office be requested to reside at Ottawa and that the salary attached to said amalgamated offices be 50 per cent. of the fees for the first $2,000,000 received, and an additional 25 per cent. of all other fees received above the said stated amount. Approved.

5. Moved by Mr. Crowe, Peterboro', seconded by Mr. Baker, London,

Considering that at the present time only a very small percentage of the registered voters fulfil their duty as citizens by casting votes;

Therefore resolved that the Union of Canadian Municipalities believes that some means of compelling citizens to vote at elections should be discussed by the Union of Canadian Municipalities so as to find a solution for this unfortunate condition. Approved.

All resolutions were, after careful consideration and thought, approved, which will be forwarded to the members of Legislature and Parliament to be acted on. I may say for your information that it is quite apparent that there is a falling away this year in membership to the extent of 50 per cent. Only about 75 municipalities were represented. This is due, to some extent, by not having a live secretary, and a change has been made also by the provinces having a Municipal Union, and they overlapping; also the fixed per capita cost of membership. This has been remedied so that any place can be a member by sending a donation, large or small. The great work that has been done, and can be done by this union, is worthy of encouragement.

I would recommend that each member of council should at least subscribe for the Municipal Journal and the city pay for same. It would be a great mistake to let such a valuable body pass out of existence as it embraces the whole Dominion. The Provincial Union only deals with minor and local matters.

In the afternoon the delegates were the guests of the mayor and council of the City of Detroit, being motored through the principal streets, shown the vastness and beauty spots; also the great industrial plants of a fast-growing great city. Then we were given a luncheon at the Casino, Belle Isle Park, which is so beautifully situated adjacent to the city, and millions of dollars will be spent on it.

Windsor and the border cities are also growing fast, there being 84,000 population; Windsor has 54,000, which is bound to become a great commercial port, as well as industrial. Nearly all streets are paved.

The convention was a success, and though of small attendance, much information was obtained, which, I hope, will prove valuable.

PEACE TIME EXPLOSIVES

Largest Order Placed By United States Government—Highway Building.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(United Press).—The largest single order for explosives, not excepting the enormous requisitions of the World War, has just been placed with the du Ponts by the United States Government, according to the American Chemical Society. The order is for 100,000,000 pounds, to be used entirely for purposes of peace.

"Most people," the statement read, "consider the manufacture of explosives primarily a wartime activity, and powder manufacturers have frequently been charged unjustly with fomenting international friction.

"But the largest contract, one for 100,000,000 pounds, to be used for the construction of highways, agricultural purposes and other peaceful industrial pursuits.

"This information should reach the general public and be emphasized, for it illustrates the point, so often made, that chemistry becomes a destructive agency only when so required in the defence of the nation."

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

What Oshawa Rotary Club Is Doing For Crippled Children.

COBOURG, September 10.— Rev. R. F. Stillman conducted the services at the Methodist Church yesterday for the first time since his return from vacation, and expressed his pleasure at being back with his congregation. Referring to the coming vote on the Ontario Temperance Act, he said he intended stating some outstanding fact each Sunday.

There were present at the service Rev. Dr. Baker, Principal of Albert College, Belleville, and Prof. Maine, also a member of the Albert College staff. The former preached in the morning service and the latter in the evening, each delivering a strong optimistic message, depicting the work of the College and its influence upon religious education and character building. In the evening Dr. Baker went to Port Hope, where he occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church there.

Rev. A. F. Pollock, Ottawa, who enjoyed holidays here and supplied the work of the Cobourg and Coldsprings Congregational Churches, has returned, and the work on Sunday at these churches was taken by Reb. Adam Hamilton, of Brantford.

Rev. Mr. Tippett, Port Hope, supplied Rev. Canon Sawers' work at St. Peter's Church. Rev. Canon and Mrs. Sawers have been holidaying at Lake of Bays, Muskoka.

Rotary's Good Work.

The Oshawa Rotary Club has been doing some good work for crippled children, as the following will show:

A boy whose leg had been amputated was furnished with a wooden leg.

Another lad was treated, and after amputation of his leg he, too, was supplied with an artificial limb.

Another boy who has club feet has been sent to the Sick Children's Hospital at Toronto for treatment.

Still another boy had a leg apparently paralysed, and he is undergoing treatment to correct the trouble.

A child is being treated for spinal trouble.

In a case of infantile paralysis the transplantation of tendons enables a child to walk.

In all cases the parents were consulted and gave their consent to the generous work undertaken by the Rotarians, and there can be none better than giving the child that is crippled or otherwise handicapped a fairer start in life.

Local and Personal.

Miss Elsie Hall and the Misses Speechly have left to take up their teaching duties at schools in Hamilton Township. They are Peterborough Normal graduates.

Miss May Dawson, formerly a member of the local Public School staff, has gone to Toronto to assume a position there.

Miss May McCaughey returned at the week-end from her trip to New Ontario.

Mr. George Strong and family have returned to Port Hope after a pleasant summer spent at their cottage, Presqu'Ile Point.

General John Hughes, well known in this locality, and his daughter, Mrs. Henry of Orono, are leaving for Venice, California, where they will visit the former's son, Mr. Fred Hughes.

Mr. Earl Strong, of Brighton, has assumed the position of assistant principal of Dufferin School, Toronto.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, pastor of Brighton Methodist Church, has returned from his holidays, and has resumed his pulpit work.

Dr. and Mrs. Cross have returned home to Rochester after spending holidays near Brighton. Dr. Cross is an old Northumberland boy who has won distinction as an educationalist. He has been for some years a member of the staff of a Rochester College.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother Peter, who takes every opportunity to manifest his antagonism. A stinging insult finally provokes Oliver to threaten to kill him, but the thought of Rosamund deters him. In a quarrel over a woman, Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, that night kills Peter in self-defense, and is himself wounded. Lionel extracts a promise from his brother to keep the affair a secret. Suspicion fastens upon Oliver, who unavailingly protests his innocence to Rosamund and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. They tell him a trail of blood, undoubtedly that of the murderer, was found to lead from the dead body to his doorway.

This however, actually established his innocence, for he bears no mark of recent wound. He lays his proof before the justices, who, convinced of his innocence, draw up a document to that effect and give it to him to hold in readiness until needed. Between pricking conscience and fear that his brother will reveal the truth, Lionel becomes so distraught that Oliver suggests a sea expedition for both of them.

Lionel looked up, his eye brightening. Then a thought occurred to him; a thought so mean that again the color flooded into his cheeks, for he was ashamed by it. Yet it clung. If he sailed with Oliver, men would say that he was a partner in the guilt attributed to his brother.

He realized to the full the contemptible quality of his thought and hated himself for conceiving it. But he could not shake off its dominion. It was stronger than his will.

His brother, observing this hesitation, and misreading it, drew him to the fireside and made him sit.

"Listen," he said, as he dropped into the chair opposite. "There is a fine ship standing in the roads below, off Smithick. You'll have seen her. Her master is a desperate adventurer, named Jasper Leigh, who is to be found any afternoon in the alehouse at Penycumwick. I know him of old, and he and his ship are to be acquired. He is ripe for any venture, from scuttling Spaniards to trading in slaves, and so that the price be high enough we may buy him body and soul. His is a stomach that refuses nothing, so there be money in the venture. So here is ship and master ready found; the rest I will provide—the crew, the munitions, the armament—and by the end of March we shall see the Lizard dropping astern. What do you say, Lal? 'Tis surely better than to sit moping here in this place of gloom."

"I'll—I'll think it over," said Lionel, but so listlessly that all Sir Oliver's quickening enthusiasm perished again at once, and no more was said of the venture.

But Lionel did not altogether reject the motion. If on the one hand he was repelled by it, on the other he was attracted almost despite himself. He went so far as to acquire the habit of riding daily over to Penycumwick, and there he made the acquaintance of that hardy and scarred adventurer of whom Sir Oliver had spoken, and listened to the marvels the fellow had to tell—many of them too marvelous to be true—of hazards upon distant seas.

But one day early in March, Master Jasper Leigh had a tale of another kind for him, news that dispelled from Lionel's mind all interest in the captain's ventures on the Spanish Main. The seaman had followed the departing Lionel to the door of the little inn and stood by his stirrup after he had got to horse.

"A word in your ear, good Master Tressilian," said he. "D'ye know what is being concerted here against your brother?"

"Against my brother?"

"Aye—in the matter of the killing of Master Peter Godolphin last Christmas. Seeing that the justices would not move of theirselves, some folk ha' petitioned the Lieutenant of Corniwall to command them to grant a warrant for Sir Oliver's arrest on a charge o' murder. But the justices ha' refused to be driven by his lordship, answering that they hold their office direct from the Queen, and that in such a matter they are answerable to none but her Grace. And now I hear that a petition be gone to London to the Queen herself, begging her to command her justices to perform their duty or quit their office."

Lionel drew a sharp breath, and with dilating eyes regarded the mariner, but made him no answer.

Jasper laid a long finger against his nose and his eyes grew cunning.

"I thought I'd warn you, sir, so as ye may bid Sir Oliver look to himself. 'Tis a fine seaman, and fine seamen be none so plentiful."

Lionel drew his purse from his pocket and without so much as looking into its contents dropped it into the seaman's ready hand, with a muttered word of thanks. He rode home in terror almost. It was come. The blow was about to fall, and his brother at last would be forced to speak. At Penarrow a fresh shock awaited him. He learned from old Nicholas that Sir Oliver was from home, that he had ridden over to Godolphin Court.

The instant conclusion prompted by Lionel's terror was that already the news had reached Sir Oliver and that he had instantly taken action; for he could not conceive that his brother should go to Godolphin Court upon any other business.

But his fears on that score were very idle. Sir Oliver, unable longer to endure the present state of things, had ridden over to lay before Rosamund that proof with which he had taken care to furnish himself. He could do so at last without any fear of hurting Lionel. His journey, however, had been entirely fruitless. She had refused point-blank to receive him, and for all that, with a humility entirely foreign to him, he had induced a servant to return to her with a most urgent message, yet had he been denied. He returned stricken to Penarrow, there to find his brother awaiting him in a passion of impatience.

"Well?" Lionel greeted him. "What will you do now?"

Sir Oliver looked at him from under brows that scowled darkly in reflection of his thoughts.

"Do now? Of what do you talk?" quoth he

"Have you not heard?" And Lionel told him the news.

Sir Oliver stared long at him when he had done, then his lips tightened and he smote his brow.

"So!" he cried. "Would that he why she refused to see me? Did she conceive that I went perhaps to plead? Could she think that? Could she?"

He crossed to the fireplace and stirred the logs with his boot angrily.

"Oh! 'Twere too unworthy. Yet of a certainty 'tis her doing, this."

"What shall you do?" insisted Lionel, unable to repress the question that was uppermost in his mind, and his voice shook.

"Do?" Sir Oliver looked at him over his shoulder. "Prick this bubble, by Heaven! Make an end of it for them, confound them and cover them with shame."

He said it roughly, angrily, and Lionel recoiled, deeming that roughness and anger aimed at himself. He sank into a chair, his knees loosened by his sudden fear.

"You—you will tell them the truth?" he said, in small, quavering voice.

Sir Oliver turned and considered him more attentively.

"A God's name, Lal, what's in thy mind now?" he asked, almost roughly. "Tell them the truth? Why, of course but only as it concerns myself. You're not supposing that I shall tell them it was you? You'll not be accounting me capable of that?"

"What other way is there?"

Sir Oliver explained the matter. The explanation brought Lionel relief. But this relief was ephemeral. Further reflection presented a new fear to him. It came to him that if Sir Oliver cleared himself of necessity his own implication must follow.

Had he but gone with these fears of his to his brother, or had he but been able to abate them sufficiently to allow reason to prevail, he must have been brought to understand how much further they carried him than was at all justified by probability. Oliver would have shown him this, would have told him that with the collapsing of the charge against himself no fresh charge could be leveled against any there, that no scrap of suspicion had ever attached to Lionel or ever could. But Lionel dared not seek his brother in this matter. In his heart he was ashamed of his fears; in his heart he knew himself for a craven. He realized to the full the hideousness of his selfishness, and yet, as before, he was not strong enough to conquer it. In short, his love of himself was greater than his love of his brother, or of twenty brothers.

The morrow—a blustering day of late March—found him again at that alehouse at Penycumwick in the company of Jasper Leigh. A course had occurred to him, as the only course now possible. Last night his brother had muttered something of going to Killigrew with his proofs since Rosamund refused to receive him. Through Killigrew he would yet see her on her knees craving his pardon for the wrong she had done him, for the cruelty she had shown him.

Lionel knew that Killigrew was absent from home just then, but he was expected to return by Easter, and to Easter there was but a week. Therefore he had little time in which to act, little time in which to execute the project that had come into his mind. He cursed himself for conceiving it, but held to it with all the strength of a weak nature.

Yet when he came to sit face to face with Jasper Leigh in that little inn-parlor, with the scrubbed table of plain deal between them, he lacked the courage to set his proposal forth. They drank sherry sack stiffly laced with brandy by Lionel's suggestion instead of the more customary mulled ale. Yet not until he had consumed best part of a pint of it did Lionel feel himself heartened to broaching his loathsome business. Through his head hummed the words his brother had said some time ago when first the name of Jasper Leigh had passed between them—"a desperate adventurer ripe for anything. So the price be high enough you may buy him body and soul."

Money enough to buy Jasper Leigh was ready to Lionel's hand, but it was Sir Oliver's money—the money that was placed at Lionel's disposal by his half-brother's open-handed bounty. And this money he was to employ for Oliver's utter ruin! He cursed himself for a filthy, contemptible hound; he cursed the foul fiend that whispered such suggestions into his mind; he knew himself, despised himself and reviled himself until he came to swear to be strong and to go through with whatever might await him sooner than be guilty of such baseness; the next moment that same resolve would set him shuddering again as he viewed the inevitable consequences that must attend it.

Suddenly the captain set him a question, very softly, that fired the train and blew all his lingering self-resistance into shreds.

"You'll ha' borne my warning to Sir Oliver?" he asked, lowering his voice so as not to be overheard by the vintner who was stirring beyond the thin wooden partition.

Master Lionel nodded, nervously fingering the jewel in his ear, his eyes shifting from their consideration of the seaman's coarse, weather-tanned and airy countenance.

"I did," he said. "But Sir Oliver is headstrong. He will not stir."

"Will he not?" The captain stroked his bushy red beard and cursed profusely and horribly after the fashion of the sea. "'Od's wounds. He's very like to swing if he bides him here.'

"Aye," said Lionel, "if he bides."

He felt his mouth turn dry as he spoke; his heart thudded, but its thuds were softened by a slight insensibility which the liquor had produced in him.

He uttered the words in so curious a tone that the sailor's dark eyes peered at him from under his heavy sandy eyebrows. There was alert inquiry in that glance. Master Lionel got up suddenly.

"Let us take a turn outside, captain," said he.

The captain's eyes narrowed. He scented business. There was something plaguily odd about this young gentleman's manner. He tossed off the remains of his sack, slapped down the pot and rose.

"Your servant, Master Tressillian," said he.

Outside our gentleman untethered his horse from the iron ring to which he had attached the bridle; leading his horse he turned seaward and strode down the road that wound along the estuary toward Smithick.

A sharp breeze from the north was whipping the water into white peaks of foam; the sky was of a hard brightness and the sun shone brilliantly. The tide was running out, and the rock in the very neck of the haven was thrusting its black crest above the water. A cable's length this side of it rode the black hull and naked spars of the Swallow—Captain Leigh's ship.

Lionel stepped along in silence, very gloomy and pensive, hesitating even now. And the crafty mariner reading this hestiation and anxious to conquer it for the sake of such profit as he conceived might lie in the proposal which he scented, paved the way for him at last.

"I think that ye'll have some matter to propose to me," said he slyly. "Out with it, sir, for these never was a man more ready to serve you."

"The fact is," said Lionel, watching the other's face with a sidelong glance, "I am in a difficult position, Master Leigh."

"I've been in a many," laughed the captain, "but never yet in one through which I could not win. Strip forth your own, and haply I can do as much for you as I am wont to do for myself."

"Why, it is this wise," said the other. "My brother will assuredly hand as you have said if he bides him here. He is lost if they bring him to trial. And in that case, faith, I am lost too. It dishonors a man's family to have a member of it hanged. 'Tis a horrible thing to have happen."

"Indeed, indeed!" the sailor agreed encouragingly.

"I would abstract him from this," pursued Lionel, and at the same time cursed the foul fiend that prompted him such specious words to cloak his villainy. "I would abstract him from it, and yet 'tis against my conscience that he should go unpunished, for I swear to you, Master Leigh, that I abhor the deed—a cowardly, murderous deed!"

"Ah!" said the captain. And lest that grim ejaculation should check his gentleman he made haste to add:

"To be sure! To be sure!

Master Lionel stopped and faced the other squarely his shoulders to his horse.

"I'll be quite plain and open with you, Master Leigh. Peter Godolphin was my friend. Sir Oliver is no more than my half-brother. I would give a deal to the man who would abstract Sir Oliver secretly from the doom that hangs over him, and yet do the thing in such a way that Sir Oliver should not thereby escape the punishment he deserves.

The captain looked grim. He laid a finger upon Master Lionel's velvet doublet in line with that false heart of his.

"I am your man," said he. "But the risk is great. Yet ye say that ye'd give a deal"—

"Yourself shall name the price," said Lionel quickly, his eyes burning feverishly, his cheeks white.

"Oh, I can contrive it, never fear," said the captain. "I know to a nicety what you require. How say you no—if I was to carry him overseas to the plantations where they lack toilers of just such thews as his?"

MEN AND HORSES

How closely related is man to the more intelligent of the animals is seen in many of the ailments to which both are prone and the remedies to which they answer.

Doctors and veterinarians are oftentimes surprised to learn of the similarity of their methods of handling the ailments of man and beast.

Sprains, burns, scalds, scratches and many other minor injuries, many everyday ailments, toe in men and animals take the same course, and both answer immediately to the same treatment—Absorbine Jr.

Absorbine was first discovered by a very close student of the horse, W. F. Young, and by him, devoted to its cause. Its very exceptional benefits, however, were promptly seized upon for the human race and, in a milder form, the preparation is sold all over the continent today as Absorbine Jr. It is used for men, women and children everywhere as a positive germicide—a germ killer—and a prompt and certain healer of all hurts. It is useful not only for all the purposes served by ordinary liniments and embrocations, but as a mouth-wash and for anything else where a germicide is needed. Don't wait until you need it. FLORAL EXHIBITIONS.

Flowers Are Morals of Health and Happiness.

Mr. William J. Stewart, in Standard Cyclopeda of Hortculture, says:

Floral exhibitions undoubtedy had their origin, in part, in the desire to display publicly the products of one's skill, and to attain renown and a position of pre-eminence among one's fellows by successful rivalry and the demonstration of superior cultural abilities. But in addition to this factor of self interest and excusable pride, the laudable spirit that seeks to promote a taste for ornamental gardening and floriculture in general, and to acquire knowledge and diffuse information regarding it, has from the first been a powerful incentive; and it cannot be questioned that public floral exhibitions have contributed most substantially to the advancement of refinement and good taste and exercised a patent and salutory influence on the domestic life, health, morals and happiness of the respective communities in which they are held.

Robbers In Halifax Select Homes of Judiciary For Raids.

HALIFAX, N.B., Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—With the burglarizing Monday evening of the residence of Chief Justice Harris, of Nova Scotia, three Halifax judicial homes have been broken into by a gang of thieves during the past two weeks. The homes of D. A. McRae, former Dean of the Dalhousie Law School, and Judge McKenzie of the Supreme Court were previously entered and valuables secured by the robbers.

The Chief Justice is at present residing at his summer home in Annapolis, so that the house was unoccupied at the time of the burglary. When the police arrived on the scene yesterday morning, after being notified of the robbery by the caretaker, they discovered that the house had been thoroughly ransacked and that the thieves had made away with goods valued at several thousands of dollars.

Ald. Stocker Believes There Is Not Enough Work To Keep Two Men Busy.

The first regular meeting of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society since the summer holidays was held yesterday afternoon in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, with Mrs. W. H. Gibbs in the chair in the absence of the president, B. F. Ackerman, and the following members present: Mesdames Darcy, Devey, Kimberley, Hill, Messrs. J. Edgar, G. W. Powell, W. Stocker, R. H. Parsons, F. H. Dobbin, J. Abraham, Mayor J. J. Turner, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, Rev. P. Costello, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Rev. C. W. Rose.

J. Edgar, secretary of the Board, read the minutes of the previous meeting, also the matron's report for the two summer months, recording 13 children in the Shelter during the month of July, with one brought in and two sent out. For the month of August, 14 children were in the Shelter, three brought in and five sent out. There was no sickness during the summer months.

Mrs. W. H. Gibbs read the report of the contents of the Shelter, taken during the summer months. A convenor for the annual tag day, which takes place on the last Saturday of this month, September 27th, was appointed, in Mrs. H. W. Darcy.

An application for the admission of a nineteen months' old infant infant into the Shelter was refused, as the rule of the institution limits the age of infants to two years at least.

An opinion voiced by W. Stocker, that the present would be a good season to paint outbuildings at the Shelter, the work to be done by the caretaker, precipitated some discussion. Mr. Stocker asserted that the combined duties of agent and caretaker might easily be undertaken by one man. Mr. Edgar defended the labors of the present agent and caretaker as being sufficient for the two incumbents. Finally, a motion by W. Stocker, seconded by Dr. Blagrave, to the effect that the outbuildings be painted, the caretaker to do the work, carried, several members refraining from voting on the question.

Mr. Powell reported for July: 5 applications, 1 child made a ward, 2 wards placed out, and 1 returned to the Shelter. For August: 8 applications, 4 wards placed out, and two returned.

Donations to the Shelter were recorded: Murray street Baptist church, pie; Bowling Club, sandwiches; Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of St. James' Methodist church, cake and sandwiches; West End Sewing Circle of Knox Presbyterian church, sandwiches; R. R. Hall, 1 gallon ice cream; Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E., 1 gallon ice cream; St. James' Church Ladies' Aid Society, cake; Jack Bickell, apples.

Accounts were passed, as follows: R. Denne $4.30, H. Allen $14.40, R. Neil $3.15, Giles' Drug Store 25 cents, E. F. Mason, $15.62, Peterboro Milk Products, $9.81, New Centre Meat Market $4.44, Kingan Hardware Co. $1.20, Grafton's store $3.90, Telephones $6.77, J. E. A. Fitzgerald $96.00, G. W. Powell $10.45, chimney repairs $35.00, Allin Ice Co. $4. e Total $209.29.

REST ROOM AT FAIR.

Well Babies' Clinic Once More Will Supply Tent For the Weary.

The Well Babies' Clinic will maintain one of the conveniences of the Exhibition in the form of a rest tent, where weary mothers may take their children during intervals in the merry round of sight seeing. Emergency cases of any sort will be looked after in this tent, where a professional nurse will be in attendance, with everything necessary for first aid work. Gramophone music will be supplied during the afternoon; and mothers wishing advice as to clothing, feeding, etc., may get expert attention from the nurses in charge. An apparatus for warming infants' food will also be available for use. The public is cordially invited to take advantage of the facilities at this tent.

CORN STOCK 12 FT. HIGH.

Corn Stock Grown in Cavan Township Was 12 Feet 2 Inches In Height.

Richard Earle of the 10th Concession of Cavan township, this morning brought a sample of corn into the Examiner office. The stalk, which was of Wisconsin, No. 7, growth, was 12 feet 2 inches in height and carried two cobs of corn. The stalk was taken from a seven acre field of Corn, and Mr. Earle stated that there are many others in the field just as high as this one.

This is thought to be a record height for corn this year, as the corn is about a month late, and this is a poor corn year in most districts.

In 1911 average prison displacement was 600 cubic inches; now it is 132.

CROP REPORTS

MIXED RESULTS OF GRAIN CROP AT MILLBROOK

Some Fields Yield 50 Bushels to the Acre, While Others Give 15.

HERD ACCREDITED

Many Local Competitors Win Judging Tests at Toronto Exhibition.

Deliveries of grain at the local elevator are slow this season. Some wheat and peas were brought in during the week, the former bringing $1.10 a bushel, and peas of the common variety $1.35. Fancy peas are $1.80 a bushel, but practically none have been offering.

It is expected that deliveries will be speeded up this week, providing the farmers have suitable weather for completing their harvest, and that threshing operations may be proceeded with.

The rains of the past week, which have evidently been general over the older part of Ontario, while materially benefitting the corn and root crops, have retarded both harvesting and threshing to a considerable degree. On some farms in this locality oats are still being cut, and quite a quantity of grain is out in stook. Peas also are in several instances as yet uncut, though all this work would have been practically completed had fine, warm weather continued for the past week. Kennedy Bros. had an unusually large acreage in peas this year and will probably have about one thousand bushels when threshing is finished. T. W. Belch threshed his peas last week, the result being somewhat disappointing, not much over fifteen bushels to the acre being realized. A load of mixed barley and oats, which was threshed, showed a yield of 35 bushels, and it is likely this will mean fifty bushels to the acre when the final results for the entire crop are known.

G. Whittington had fifty bushels to the acre as an average when his fall wheat was threshed. Mr. Belch, from spring wheat, averaged but little over 15 bushels. From his pea crop, Mr. Whittington realized from 30 to 35 bushels to the acre, an unusually good result this season, though, according to those who speak of earlier days on the farm, when the "Canadian Beauty" variety was generally sown, this was the average yield looked for each year. On Fallis Line, Mr. N. Belch realized 650 bushels of wheat from 20 acres of this grain, an average of thirty-two and one-half bushels to the acre, which is not so high as a number of other reports.

On the whole, alsike is apparently a fair crop, though there are instances where a good yield is confidently expected. H. Tate had five to seven bushels to the acre when his crop was threshed, eight to nine bushels being considered a more reasonable return for the expense and labor involved.

Fall Ploughing.

Fall ploughing, in preparation for the new crop of fall wheat, is being pushed as rapidly as possible, the present excellent harvest of this grain and fairly good price offered, making it probable that a large acreage will be devoted to it this year. A Fallis and J. McKnight, Fallis Line, finished sowing fall wheat on summer fallow ground last week, but in many cases ploughing is delayed because the crops of oats, peas, etc., in the fields intended for wheat growing is either still uncut or not yet drawn in. While the frequent showers recently have not been sufficiently heavy, or prolonged, to wet more than the outside of the stooks of oats, peas have been more thoroughly drenched, and, in any case, work which the past week would have seen practically finished yet remains to be proceeded with.

The light frosts which were recorded a few nights during the past week have not done any damage and have helped the turnips as the latter apparently only begin to grow vigorously when the cooler weather arrives.

Millbrook Prices.

Prices in the local stores this week include dairy butter at 30 cents and creamery butter at 38 cents; eggs at 30 cents a dozen; pears, 50 cents a basket, and peaches at 30 cents a dozen. Plums, also, are 50 cents a basket.

Green corn sells at 20 cents a dozen cobs, cabbages at 5 cents each, and large, white cauliflowers at from 15 to 25 cents according to size. Tomatoes are 60 cents a basket; small, white pickling onions are 18 cents a pound, and cooking onions 5 cents a bunch of four; celery is 15 cents a bunch, or two bunches for 25 cents.

Potatoes bring $1.00 a bag, and are sold at 25 cents per peck.

Accredited Herd.

T. W. Belch, whose fine herd of twenty pure bred Holstein-Fresian cattle recently passed the third and final test for tuberculin infection without a single reactor being found, received his certificate from the Department of Agriculture last week, officially stating that his cattle are listed as fully accredited.

Certificates in such cases are only issued for one year, and if at the end of twelve months, when a fresh test is made, any reactors are found, the work of establishing a clean record must begin over again.

Infection sometimes takes place from an untested herd pasturing in a neighboring field, from the show ring when exhibited with "unhealthy" animals, as well as in other ways; and apparently it is a matter of considerable difficulty to keep an accredited herd absolutely isolated, on the ordinary farm at least. W. R. Graham, the head of the Poultry Department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, is a noted breeder of Holstein cattle at his farm in Norfolk County.

Providing that the right type of Holstein is bred here for trade with the Old Country, it is likely that a good market may be developed in the near future owing to the dairy herds in England having been disorganized through the outbreak of the foot-and-mouth disease. Breeders should keep in mind, the Department of Agriculture points out, that the British want a darker and more rugged type than our Holstein, "and if we shipped him this kind until he finds out that our favorites are even better, we could do a lot of business."

Judging Tests.

Durham County has been well represented among the junior farmers in their judging of grain, roots, vegetables, cattle, etc., at the Canadian National this year, nearly three hundred contestants from Central Ontario being entered. The boys were coached by the Agricultural representatives from their respective counties, and one result, among many others looked for from the practical experience received, is that skilled judges may be available for the local fall fairs a few years hence.

In beef cattle, W. H. Swain, of Cavan, held eighth place with 154 points; in sheep, Harold Pascoe, Hampton, had 163 points, Lawrence Cryderman, Bowmanville, 153 points; Arch. Glennie, Newcastle, 152 points; and Herb. Dawson, South Monaghan (Northumberland), 146 points, holding 8th, 12th, 13th, and 16th places respectively.

In poultry, Arch. Wilson, Port Hope, came tenth with 153 points. Out of a possible 1,000 points in fruits and vegetables, J. H. Jose, Newcastle, had 845, and held second place; Lloyd Snowden, Bowmanville, had 773 points; Lawrence Cryderman, Bowmanville, 775 points; Howard L. Cryderman, Bowmanville, 650 points; and Lloyd Crago, Bowmanville, 649 points, the four latter coming 7th, 8th, 15th and 16th respectively.

In the grain and roots class, Herbert Dawson, South Monaghan, came 15th, having 398 points to his credit.

Three Crops of Alfalfa In Fields at Same Time

MARMORA, Sept. 10.—Barney Callery, who has just returned from a trip to Windsor, says that he witnessed the unusual in the clover fields west of London. Two crops of this year's alfalfa are stacked in the field with a third growing between in luxuriance. In Leamington County, he reports that there is quite a thousand acres under tobacco cultivation in one place, as fine a crop as ever seen. omatoes and corn are also in superabundance in that same county.

YIELD IS GOOD ON CAVAN FARM

Louis Winslow Had Peas Thresh Out 30 Bushels to the Acre.

WEATHER GOOD

CAVAN, Sept. 10.—The weather since Tuesday has been favorable for harvesting and much grain has been cut. Some have finished cutting, others will finish this week, while those, who owing to low land, were unable to get grain in early, will still have fields to cut.

The threshing machines are busy and crops being threshed are reported as quite up to the average.

Wm. Pudsy threshed wheat on his east hundred and the yield was good.

R. Matchett threshed peas in the field which yielded extra well. He had very little straw. Besides the peas there was a nice amount of oats in the crop.

Louis Winslow on the eleventh line threshed peas which yielded thirty bushels to the acre.

BONAR LAW HERD FOR EXHIBITION

F. M. Rutherford Will Have 18 Head Ayrshires at Big Fair.

BONAR LAW, Sept. 10.—F. M. Rutherford will take 18 head of his pure bred Ayrshires to the Peterboro Exhibition and will also show them at the other Fairs in the district. Mr. Rutherford, who is secretary of the Menie Ayrshire Club, is one of the youngest men engaged in the raising of pure breds but has already made a name for himself throughout the Dominion, some cattle that he sold in Quebec recently receiving favorable notice in the Ayrshire Review.

CROP ROTATION ADDS TO VALUE OF FARM LANDS

All Plants Do Not Take Same Food From the Soil.

SOME SYSTEMS

Fields Under Rotation Receive Fair Proportion of Manure.

(By O. C. White, B.S.A.)

What is meant by rotation of crops?

It is a certain regular succession of crops so arranged that, after each, the land is left in the best possible condition to receive the crop which follows.

Why does the order in which the crops follow each other make a great difference in the yields from year to year?

1. Because different plants have different manurial requirements.

2. Because plants vary in their power to obstract certain foods from the soil.

3. Because all plants do not feed to the same depth in the soil.

4. Because all plants are not alike in the residues they leave behind.

5. Because some plants tend to produce better tilth than others.

6. Because plants vary in their resistance power to bacterial and fungus diseases and to insect enemies.

What are the requirements of any rotation before it may be considered suitable?

1. It must supply the crops needed in the proper proportions.

2. It must be so constituted that weeds can be kept under control.

3. It must yield a reasonable net profit.

4. It must, under properly regulated treatment, maintain soil fertility.

Why should every farmer place his farm under some definite system of cropping, or, in other words, adopt a rotation of crops?

1. Because it will increase crop yields and net profits.

2. Because the cost of fencing, on farms where live stock is kept would be materially reduced, since it would be necessary to fence off only three, four or five fields instead of ten or twelve as is often done.

3. Because larger machinery could be used. Where fields are fewer they must be larger, and large fields lend themselves better than small ones to the use of large machinery which lowers cost of production.

4. Because all cultural operations of one kind would be in one field, thus lowering the cost of reducing the travelling necessary from one small field to another.

5. Because every field would receive, at regular intervals, its fair proportion of manure. No field would therefore be favoured to the disadvantage of the rest of the farm and the whole farm would always be kept up to its highest producing possibilities.

The following rotations, designed to meet the needs of the mixed farmer, are likely to prove satisfactory. Choose the one that appears most suitable to your requirements, apply it to your farm, regulate your cultural operations as called for, and observe critically the results.

ROTATION "T"

(Three years' dutation).

First year—Hoed crop. For corn apply manure in winter or spring at rate of 15 tons per acre and shallow plough shortly before planting time turning under both clover and manure. For roots plough land previous autumn.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike, 6 pounds alfalfa and 6 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay or pasture. Second crop of hay might be used for seed.

This rotation is well suited for intensive dairy farming where soiling crops are used. It would be a most excellent rotation to put into practice where sufficient rough land was available to serve as pasturage. It is the rotation that would supply the greatest amount of forage of the best description for dairying or beef production. It is better suited for heavy than for light soils.

ROTATION "F"

(Four years' duration)

First year.—Hoed crop. Apply manure at rate of 20 tons per acre previous autumn, winter or spring.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover and 8 to 10 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed.

Fourth year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough field shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up in autumn in preparation for hoed crop.

This rotation is most satisfactory from all standpoints, except that it supplies a rather smaller proportion of grain than is often desired. Where live stock is the mainstay of the farm this is, however, a very minor fault.

The rotation might be extended to include one or two years of pasture following the timothy hay and while this arrangement is not considered as desirable as the shorter rotation, it might do fairly well where manual labor is scarce.

SEVENTEEN YEARS BUSY CROP JUDGE

William Hickson of Bobcaygeon Has Had Long Record.

One of the most proficient judges of field crops in Ontario is Mr. Wm. Hickson of Bobcaygeon, who has an enviable reputation among the many judges employed from year to year by the Provincial Government of Ontario. For 17 years Mr. Hickson has found time to go in and out among the crops of Ontario and act as a judge in oats, wheat, corn, etc. He is widely known amongst the farmers and his decision is never disputed.

Mr. Hickson is very conversant with farm problems and conditions. Many a farmer has been helped by him and many a farmer has been helped by him and many a farmer has been greatly benefitted financially by reason of his advice.

Field crop competitions are conducted in connection with Agricultural Societies, the farmer paying a small entrance fee. Some farmers in the vicinity of Bobcaygeon have won as high as $250 in three years by reason of having high class fields. The farms in this section are not judged by Mr. Hickson.

Clean field mean better crops, better crops means a better market and better prices. Many farmers have irradicated mustard, sow thistle and other weeds from their farms by systematic house-cleaning of their fields.

Fields are judged about the ripening time, in fact just a few days previous to cutting, when the grain is fully developed and by which time rust, blight, milldew, etc. can be readily picked out.

During the season Mr. Hickson was unfortunate enough to meet with an accident while judging a field at Richmond Hill. The car in which he was riding overturned when it hit a large boulder hidden in grass. In the accident Mr. Hickson fractured a couple of ribs and otherwise injured his side.

WARSAW FARM NEWS.

Home Grown Tomatoes Appear in Stores—Rain Delays Harvesting.

WARSAW, Sept. 10. — Home grown tomatoes are appearing in the village stores.

Since the road work was done on the Lakefield road it is possible to get to Lakefield with comfort and safety.

Tuesday's rain delayed harvesting.

Quite a few farmers are threshed out and are more than pleased with results. Mr. Alex Calder, Scotch Line threshed over 1000 bushels of grain of various kinds in six hours. The threshing was clean.

Mr. Fred Morgan threshed for room, his wheat turned out 37 bushels to the acre and rye 30 bushels.

Eggs are 30 cents a dozen.

HARVEST SUPPER AT BANNOCKBURN

First Event of Kind Reported, From District—Marmora Crops.

MARMORA, Sept. 10.—Threshing in general is now proceeding at a steady pace in the Marmora district. The outfit of William Davidson makes the third to be operating locally. Walter Deacon has obtained 570 bushels of oats from a very small acreage. In one section, however, threshing is suspended until the buckwheat is ready, there being a greater percentage of that grain there than elsewhere.

Arthur Brown of Bonarlaw has threshed 400 bushels of wheat from ten acres. John Pack's outfit is about to thresh in the Malone area where grain is not so forward as in surrounding sections. Blackberries are being gathered in fairly good quantities. A harvest home supper was held near Bannockburn on the evening of the third. With the crops so bountiful, fair exhibits will be well worth seeing this year.

CANADA SUPREME

Dominion Can Raise Wheat to Feed All the World.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—"I venture to say that Canada alone ultimately will raise sufficient wheat for more than a billion people or twice the present population of all the white races," declared Prof. G. R. Anderson, head of the department of engineering physics and photography, University of Toronto, in a special article in the Morning Post.

"Can Canada be surveyed without the conviction that 200,000,000 people can live there in greater prosperity than the 45,000,000 here?" he asks.

His article is in refutation of gloomy forebodings indulged in by some of the scientists at the recent meeting in Toronto of the British Association for the advancement of Science, with reference to the world's food supply ultimately being insufficient to feed the inhabitants of the earth.

PEACH CROP SHORT

Market Climbs as Okanagan Growers Report Light Yield.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 8.—Okanagan fruit growers report a light crop of peaches there and most of it is going to the prairies. Crawfords are running at about $1.65 on wholesale row, while Albertas are quoted at $1.55. It is doubtful if the growers will ship much fruit this way in carload lots, as there is a general scarcity of all lines, and as a consequence the market as a whole shows an upward tendency. Utah peaches are expected in about the first of the month.

DOURO FARMERS HAVE GRAIN IN THE BARNS NOW

Not Much Threshing Done Near Lakefield.

YIELD GOOD AVERAGE

Prospects Good For the Buckwheat Crop — Vegetables Doing Well.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 10.—In the neighborhood of Lakefield there is very little threshing done as yet but in a few cases there has been some of the earlier crop. T. J. Wood of Douro threshed his fall wheat. T. Garvey and W. A. Fairbain have done some of their threshing in Smith. Nearer Selwyn on the 10th line of Smith several of the farmers have their threshing done.

Stanley Higgins of the 9th line of Smith reports a good average crop with the later crops somewhat the best. The dry weather has been a great benefit to the farmers who have nearly all got their grain in. Some of the grain got a little rust but not very much.

H. J. Abbot of Douro expects the threshing to be general in his neighborhood, probably next week. While the grain is good this year, the ears being well headed out, the straw is light. The prospects for the buckwheat crop is excellent. Harvest apples were fair but the later varieties not very good. Most of the farmers in Douro in the vicinity of Lakefield have their grain all in.

Tomatoes are ripening well at present and corn grown locally is taking a place among the table delicacies.

FARM PRODUCTS RISE IN VALUE

Exchange Rate Shows Highest Point in 48 Months.

TOWARDS PARITY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The financial position of farmers as measured by the exchange value of their products for non-agricultural commodities, is gradually working toward a pre-war parity, according to the review issued by the Department of Agriculture.

As a result of the recent rise in grain prices and the fall in prices of non-agricultural products, the combined exchange value of sixteen leading farm products for the other class of commodities on Aug. 1 had an index rating of 83. Taking the 1913 base as 100, this was said to be the highest point reached in forty-eight months.

Discussing the general agricultural outlook in this country, the Department stated that interest now was beginning to centre on corn and hogs.

"Despite increased corn acreage this year," the review said, "weather conditions have cut the prospective crop considerably under 1923 production, and should there be an early frost a serious shortage of corn will result. A short corn crop means high corn prices and in as much as approximately 85 per cent. of the corn crop is fed to livestock, mainly to hogs, high cost of hog production will result.

"The swine industry is said to be well along in its periodic liquidation with prices beginning to rise and any further liquidation of breeding stock because of expensive corn is expected to send hog prices to materially higher points during the coming year.

"Cotton looks like the biggest crop with the biggest income in five years. Potatoes and fruit are reported on the way to good crops and apparently fairly good prices. There is plenty of hay, and oats are turning out a splendid yield practically everywhere. Land is now being fitted for sowing of fall wheat with some sentiment reported in favor of a larger acreage than last year."

THE FARMER ENJOYS REAL INDEPENDENCE

But Does Not Lose Any By Considering and Using Experience of Others.

The farmer is independent.

Sometimes he is too independent for his own good.

He doesn't like for some chap from the agricultural college to tell him when to sow wheat, or how to sort and grade apples or potatoes. He doesn't like to be told that if he wishes to build up his soil and don't have enough manure that he can do it by adding two or three tons of limestone to the acre, and sowing sweet clover and then turn the crop under, he will have improved the soil wonderfully.

To be told these things and have to do them robs him, as he sees it, of his independence. It makes him think he is dependent, and really he is dependent on weather and pests and other uncontrollable factors in making a crop.

All things considered, no large class of people enjoys a greater degree of real independence than the farmer.

A farmer is independent in that he can make his own plans, arrange his own work and think his own thoughts.

Hessian fly cost Kansas more than $20,000,000 this year.

These Third Prize Oats Thresh Out 60 Bushels

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10.—R. McKelvie, one of the members of the Seymour Council, whose farm is just outside the town limits, was awarded third prize in the standing crop competition for a field of oats. He had threshed the crop and secured a yield of 60 bushels to the acre on that portion which won the prize. He had 20 acres altogether in crop this year, the remainder of his farm being seeded 17 acres of oats and three acres of spring wheat. From the 20 acres he had a total yield of nearly 1000 bushels.

GOOD AYRSHIRE NEEDS HEALTH

Constitution is Primary Requisite, but Conformation Needed.

BEAUTY ESSENTIAL

By J. F. B.

"Now what does type mean? What is the definition of type in the breeding and rearing of the Ayrshire cow? Type, to my mind, is comprised of two units, namely constitution and conformation. You cannot have a first class dairy cow without both these qualities. I mention constitution first because I consider it, if anything, the more important.

"Constitution means health. Therefore, in the building of the perfect cow, we must supply all the parts that tend to the insuring of good health. She must be thick through the heart, deep in flank and middle deep thighs, well sprung in ribs and thick behind the shoulder. She must be well set on her legs, and what is very important she must have good sound feet. Conformation means beauty.

"Beauty is most essential for an animal of any kind of breed, and it is here that our Ayrshire shines in comparison with most other breeds. She must be smooth in her lines, straight in the back, straight and deep in her underline, with broad forehead and short broad muzzle, with well curved horns, neither too long nor too thick, and a long clean neck well set on to her body.

"She must be level and even along her body with no point too prominent in comparison with the rest of her body, and she must have nice flat bones. Her skin must be soft and silky and of medium thickness. She must have a long, deep, broad level vessel with four large soft teats well planted straight down from her vessel, and her vessel must milk away to skin and not appear fleshy after being milked.

"Then last, but by no means least, comes milking capacity. It is rather difficult to judge a good milking cow by appearance, but there are certain signs tht seldom fail, namely—the milk veins ought to be thick and rigid and go well forward near the forelegs. A wide opening between the ribs is another sign of a good milker, and a think, silky, flexible skin. A good deep bulky vessel and milking away to the skin is also a sign of a good milker.

GOOD YIELD ON COBOURG FARMS

Bulk of Grain Grown in Hamilton and Haldimand in the Barns.

FIFTY BUSHELS.

COBOURG, Sept. 10.—Local farmers report the hoe crop this season one of the best for years. Potatoes bid fair to be a bumper crop. Corn was backward for a long time but made wonderful progress the latter part of the summer. Turnips and mangolds are a good crop.

Grain in Barns.

The bulk of the grown in Hamilton and Haldimand Township farms is now in the barns, and the verdict of most farmers is that the crop is the best in years. Added to a good general yield, the quality of the grain is excellent. In this connection the prospect of better prices gives reason for optimism and a cheerful outlook.

Comparatively little threshing has been done yet, but from the vicinity of Centreton, in Haldimand Township, come reports of two farmers who have threshed their fall wheat. One had and average of fifty bushels to the acre and the other went a little better and average of fifty-two bushels.

There are quite a number of late sown fields of grain which have not yet been harvested, and the owners of these low-lying farms are anxious for a repetition of last week's heat wave, which was ideal for putting the grain in proper condition to be put in the barns.

SOW ALFALFA NOW

Now is the time to sow alfalfa for a good thrifty stand. An abundance of moisture generally throughout the country is expected to bring a good fall crop.

PITTING ROOTS IS ECONOMICAL WAY TO STORE

Easier on Sandy Soil or Gravel. But Practical on Clay.

SMALL TROUBLE

Ventilation in Outdoor Pits is as Important as Warmth.

Unforseen circumstances often necessitate extra storage space for field roots or potatoes. Such space may be easily and cheaply obtained by pitting outside, as in a properly constructed pit field roots or potatoes will keep throughout the winter months as well as, if not better, than in the best of cellars. Especially is this true with roots that are to be used for seed-raising, for in a pit evaporation is reduced to a minimum and the roots are, therefore, fresh and crisp in the spring with a consequent maximum vitality.

A pit to keep roots successfully outside during the winter should be well drained, and so constructed as to maintain an even temperature at which the contents will neither grow—and subsequently rot—nor freeze. Such a temperature can be maintained only by providing for adequate ventilation during steady cold. The following describes two types of pits—each suited to a different situation—that have given perfect satisfaction at Ottawa.

Pitting on Sandy or Sloping Land.

The most satisfactory site for a pit is a naturally well drained position, such as the side of a hill or the top of a knoll. If the soil on such a situation is of a sandy or gravelly nature the question of drainage need not be further considered. A shallow trench 8 inches deep, 5 feet wide and of the required length should be dug, and the earth thus removed thrown back 3 feet from the edge. The roots may then be piled up in the trench in a neat pile so as to come to a point about 4 feet above the level of the ground. In building this pile it is advisable to place the outside tier of roots with their tops to the outside, thus obtaining an even surface for covering. A pit of this height and width will hold about one ton to each 4½ feet length.

Covering.

A layer of about 4 inches of coarse straw is sufficient for the first cover. This should be held in place by a layer of about 3 inches of loose earth, laid to within 8 or 10 inches of the top and about half way round the ends. This will leave sufficient space for ventilation. Rain should be prevented from entering the pit by laying a couple of boards along the top in the form of an inverted "V" trough.

During the latter part of November the covering of earth should be increased to 8 inches and the ends covered in. The opening at the top should also be narrowed to about 8 inches, or closed up, leaving openings of one foot in diameter every 3 feet for ventilation.

Later on in the season when steady cold weather is about to set in the covering should be increased by another layer of straw about 6 inches thick which should be followed by at least 6 inches of earth. In making this last covering it is advisable to cover the ventilation holes or strip, as the case may be with straw only up to the level of the second covering of straw.

If it is decided to provide ventilation by means of holes, a trough made of a couple of boards 8 inches wide and 3½ feet long should be inserted over each hole at right angles to the pit after the second layer of straw is put on. The last covering should then cover the troughs entirely excepting the ends, which in very cold weather may be stuffed with straw.

If the ventilation is to be had by means of a strip left uncovered along the top of the pit, a trough running the entire length of the pit may be used. This should be put on and covered in the same manner as the short troughs.

Level Land Or Heavy Clay.

If the only available site for a pit is on heavy clay or very level land, it is necessary to provide drainage. A shallow trench 4 inches deep sloping up to the surface of the ground, so as to make it about 4 feet wide, should be dug to the length required for the pit. If the land is absolutely level this trench should be 3 inches deep at one end and about 6 inches at the other. A board drain may now be inserted into the lower end of the trench, and run away in a deepening trench to a drain hole 3 feet deep and 3 feet across, 8 to 10 feet from the end of the pit. This hole should be covered with boards, and both it and the drain covered with 6 inches of straw followed by the same amount of earth. On very wet land a trench may be dug at a suitable distance all around the drain hole and pit to prevent seepage of surface water into them.

The trench on the pit site should now be covered with 2-inch planks, five feet long placed about 2 inches apart for the entire length and covered with 4 inches of straw. The roots may then be piled up on top of the straw and covered in the manner previously outlined.

DOUBLE DEFEAT HURTS PIRATES

Serious Reverse By Cardinals Puts Pittsburgh Three Games Behind.

ERRORS A FACTOR.

ST. LOUIS Sept. 9.— The Cardinals handed the Pirates a severe setback in their drive for the 1924 pennant this afternoon when they took both games, 7 to 4 and 6 to 4. The first game was featured by the brilliant work of "Chick" Hafey, obtained from the Houston team of the Texas League recently: Pittsburg's four errors in the second game aided the Cardinals in scoring their second victory. e

Pittsburgh's double defeat widened the margin between the League leading Giants and the Pirates to three games. Scores:

1st game

Cubs Beat Reds

CHICAGO, Sept. 9. —O'Farrell's home run in the sixth inning and a shoestring catch by Weis in the ninth inning enabled Chicago to defeat Cincinnati, 4 to 3, to-day. The locals bunched hits for three runs in the third, while the visitors were unable to do much with Alexander. The score:

Cincinnati .... 100 001 010—3 7 2

Tilden, Philadelphia, national champion, and Vincent Richards, of New York, Olympic champion, have been nominated to defend the Davis Cup in the four singles matches against the challenging Australian team at Philadelphia, September 11, by the Selection Committee, it was announced yesterday.

Tilden and William M. Johnston will compose the doubles team. Gerald L. Patterson, captain of the Australian team, has notified the United States Lawn Tennis Association that he and Pat O'Hara Wood would play both singles and doubles matches.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS:

1. Can a player bat improperly and then hit again in the same inning in his regular turn? When he batted improperly, the mistake was discovered and an appeal made to the umpire, who ruled the proper batter out.—B. B. G.

2. Ground rule is that on a batted ball into a certain restricted territory, the batsman shall be entitled to two bases and all runners advance that many. Ball bounds out of restricted territory and batter is thrown out at second. What is the correct ruling on such a play?—F. D. S.

ANSWERS:

1. If a player bats improperly in a certain inning and the mistake is discovered before a ball is pitched to a succeeding batsman, on appeal to the umpire, the proper batsman must be declared out. The player who batted improperly has a perfect right to bat again in the same inning if the regular batting order calls for it.

2. When a ball is batted into restricted territory it becomes dead and there is no chance for a play if the ball bounds out on the playing field. Batsman was entitled to second base.

3. It is perfectly proper for the regular pitcher to return to the rubber at the start of the next inning. When shifted to right field he continues in the lineup and can again be used as a pitcher.

A BOOST FOR "JAKE"

Now if some one would trump up a charge against certain players on the Oshawa and Belleville C.O.B.L. teams, Lindsay might get a chance to play in the play off series with Toronto or Western Ontario says the Lindsay Post.

Somehow we are inclined to think that Mr. Jake Solomon is not entirely to blame for the recent mix-up and protest, but that he is the "goat" in the case —butting for some one else. Lindsay has always found Solomon keen to win, but yet a pretty good sport. Tricky and cunning, of course, but as a rule fair. It may be possible that someone else, perhaps more interested in the financial end of the club, is working behind the scenes making the balls which Jake is being forced to fire.

RAIN HOLDS UP POLO

First Match Postponed For Second Time—Play Thursday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The first polo contest for the international challenge cup scheduled for Tuesday but postponed by rain, will be played on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock if weather permits it was announced last night by the United States Polo Association.

The decision cancelled an earlier intention to play the match to-day. Officials decided ,as rain continued to fall early in the evening, that the field would be impossible to play upon until Thursday.

It was further announced by the Association thoat if weather again prevents the game on Thursday, the first contest will be held on Saturday of this week.

ART VANCE CHASED OUT OF MAJORS ON THREE OCCASIONS

Shunted out of the majors on three occasions because of his woeful lack of control Arthur (Dazzy) Vance, the Brooklyn strike-out king, to-day is regarded as the greatest pitcher in the National League, and it is his ability to put the ball just where it belongs that has brought him his great success.

When Dazzy was with Pittsburgh on his first trip up he was as wild as a hare. That was in 1914, when he came from St. Joseph. The next season found him with the Yankees, where the late Bill Donovan had the time of his life trying to get him to desist from his philanthropic tendencies with the hitters.

Dazzy was shipped to Columbus the next year and in 1917 was with Toledo. He did no better with the Mud Hens, being sent to Memphis but the Yankees got him back in 1918, only to ship him to Rochester in the middle of the season. In 1919 he was placed with Sacramento and after a season on the coast was back with Memphis in 1920 Later the same season he went to New Orleans and it was from the Pelicans Brooklyn got him in 1921.

Dazzy is enjoying his best season with the Dodgers this year and is on his way to a strike-out record The 1924 high light in his record came in a recent game against the Cubs, when he struck out seven in a row. He has terrific speed and mixes a knuckle ball up with the fast one.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

This is a big year for the southpaw pitchers in the majors, particularly in the American League.

It is a noticeable fact that the three leading pennant contenders, New York, Washington and Detroit, have no great liking for left handers.

Ever since the Yankees began winning pennants in 1921 in the American League, rival managers have figured the club weak against southpaws.

This belief was strengthened in every world series between the Giants and Yankees, because of the success of Art Nehf of the New York Nationals.

When Detroit plays New York, Wells, Whitehill and Cole get the call. The sensational Whitehill is often used twice in such a series.

Mogridge and Zachary, Washington's two southpaws, are always used and are usually very successful against the Yankees.

Since both Detroit and Washington are well equipped with southpaws, a meeting between those two clubs is invariably a battle of left handers.

Herb. Pennock, being the only New York southpaw, gets plenty of work against the two other contenders.

If any one of these three clubs come through in the American, the pennant winner in the National is certain to place much reliance in its southpaws in the world series.

When a club is supposed to have a weakness, be it real or fancied, opposing teams never fail to take advantage of it.

Nine times out of ten, it's the team that gets the pitching that wins out in the long run or the short series.

In the battle down the home stretch of the American League race, pitching is going to play its usual very important part.

Supporters of the New York Americans are taking hope in the seeming return to form of the five-star staff of the Yankees.

In his last few starts Joe Bush has been very effective, the "Bullet Joe" of old, with a great fast ball, that has been missing at times this year.

Jones apparently has recovered from his lame arm. Pennock is pitching as consistently as ever. Hoyt has the stuff and should be a big winner.

If the Yankee pitching staff recovers form at the crucial spot in the race, it is going to make the travelling much harder for the other contenders.

The Washington pitching continues good. Tight pitching has helped the Nationals from the start of the campaign.

Concern is being felt over the Detroit staff. Much of the burden of the campaign has been carried by the young pitchers. It may be asking too much for them to keep go-

HEAVIES READY FOR BIG FIGHT

Odds Slightly Favor Firpo, But Opinion Is About Evenly Divided.

STARTS AT 10 P.M.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—With the last legal entanglements apparently stymied, Luis Angel Firpo and Harry Wills, rival aspirants for Jack Dempsey's crown, have completed their training and yesterday declared themselves fit for their battle Thursday night in Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City.

Firpo, because of his devastating right hand punch loomed last night as a slight favorite, with several wagers being reported on him at odds of 6 to 5, but critics who have followed the giant gladiators in their preparations the past few weeks look for a closely fought battle.

There seems to be general agreement that the fight will not go the limit of 12 rounds, but on the other hand, a fairly even division of opinion as to whether the expected knock out will be scored by the "Wild Bull" or the "Brown Panther". As no decisions are permitted under the New Jersey boxing laws, the verdict, in case the match goes the limit, will be unofficial.

Seat Sale Light

Due to the uncertainty caused by deportation proceedings against Firpo, the advance seat sale has not come up to expectations. It has passed 300,000, however, Promoter Tex Rickard said, and if the revival of interest manifested yesterday continues the bowl is expected to be packed to its limit of about 90,000, with gate receipts approximating $1,000,000.

Firpo finished his active work with a brisk sparring session before a crowd of 3,000 in Madison Square Garden. The Argentine's main weapon against the negro will be his powerful right, in the opinion of all critics, but Luis exhibited his left entirely in punishing his two sparring mates, Miguel Ferrera, and Bill Tate, in four round of milling.

Both fighters are confident of the outcome. Firpo relies in his slugging ability, aggressiveness and recuperative powers to beat down the superior defensive skill of Wills, who has other assets in his greater experience and shiftier footwork. The negro also has an effective punch in either hand.

The bout is slated to go on about 10 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time.

A SALUTARY LESSON TO THE LEAGUE

Experience of Oshawa, Kingston and Peterborough Emphasizes Folly of Trying To Evade Central League Residence Rule.

The fate of Oshawa last season and of the Kingston and Peterboro clubs this season in being eliminated from the Central Ontario League because of the presence on their line up of players who were not eligible will surely convince baseball magnates generally that the residence clause in the League and the O.B.A.A. means just what it says—that a player to be eligible must be a continuous resident of the city for which he is playing from January 1st of the current year.

Oshawa last season used Dainty on the rubber although he did not take up residence in Oshawa until several months after January 1st. This year Kingston apparently imported a battery in May, a few days before the season opened and Peterboro used Serth, although they were unable to prove him a continuous resident.

All three clubs paid the penalty for their violation of the rules and must see by this time that the game is not worth the candle.

The Petes' case is probably the most unfortunate of the three inasmuch as they won the second half honors without the assistance of Serth who only won three games all season and played no part whatever in deciding either the first or second half title.

The Central Ontario League as a result of the disqualification of Kingston and Peterboro will be represented in the O.B.A.A. race by a team unable to win either half of the League race—possibly by Oshawa, a club that finished a very bad last on the season's play.

The house-cleaning in the League is regrettable but it was necessary. The adoption of the January 1st residence rule drove Lindsay, Port Hope and, Cobourg out of the League. If it is not to be lived up to by the rest of the teams, then the whole League is a farce.

The sub-committee has shown by its action in regard to Oshawa last year and Kingston and Peterboro this year that in so far as it is concerned the clubs of the Central Ontario League will have to follow the constitution of the League.

Clubs who deviate from the rule take their own chances and should have no complaints if they are caught.

The howl from Kingston about poor sportsmanship are laughable in their lack of logic.

The Ponies management ignored the residence rule completely and called to their assistance a battery, neither member of which knew anything about Kingston until the season was about to open.

The Ponies went into the thing with their eyes open and they should take their medicine just as Peterboro will have to do.

If there is a Central Ontario League next year it is a safe wager that no club in the organization will take a chance on using players that do not qualify.

They may beat the game for a while but the penalty cannot be evaded together.

Ask Oshawa, Kingston or Peterboro.

WILLS IS FAVORED TO DEFEAT FIRPO

Heavyweight Bout May Go the Limit, With Negro Winning on Points—Joe Williams Ventures His Opinion Of The Fight With Reservation of Doubt.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

SOUTHAMPTON, L.I., Sept. 10. —Sitting down to type prophetic lines on the outcome of the fight between Firpo and Wills our fingers move with easy confidence across the keyboard, writing Wills will win either by a knockout in six or seven rounds, or surely on points in 12 rounds .....

A still small voice whispers, "Don't forget Firpo can hit."

Wills ought to win because he is better fitted for a gruelling test, mentally ans physically. Wills has had no embarrassing love entanglements to disturb his thoughts; he has trained hard, sensibly and systematically.

Again the small voice, "Remember what the Argentinian did to Dempsey!"

Wills knows how to fight. It is not easy to hit him and he is no light hitter himself. Bartley Madden told this writer Wills walloped him harder than he had ever been hit before and would have scored a knockout had he fought with greater aggression. No fighter has ever knocked the rugged Madden down .....

The small voice: "Firpo will be a red terror so long as he is able to lift his right hand."

Wills knows the kind of fighter Firpo is. Wills saw him fight Willard and Dempsey. Firpo has never seen Wills. Wills remembers that even old man Willard made a sucker of Firpo in six rounds with a long straight left hand, landing so often ringsiders grew weary tabulating the unreturned blows. Wills has a great left hand—infinitely better than Willard's at the scow puncher's best .....

Another restraining message: "But when Firpo finally got his right over Willard went down, and STAYED DOWN!"

Wills will not make the mistake Dempsey did. He will not charge into Firpo without any preliminary fiddling around. There will be no sudden volcanic outbursts of fighting fury, the type best suited to the South American's savagery. Wills will stand back, bide his time, watch for openings and then fire, with the precision of a sharpshooter.

And still another: "All Firpo's got is a right hand but peasants, it is A RIGHT HAND!"

Two questionable points about Wills: (1) the condition of his hands, always uncertain. (2) the quality of his courage, never of the lofty, heroic sort. Wills says both his hands are hard as granite. You believe him, watching him pummel the big bags and massacre his giant sparring partners. As to his courage you can only guess. He seems confident enough—even more confident, for that matter, than the bull...

Once more: "Any birds who hits hard enough to knock a champion clear out of the ring is no Flat Tire."

Well, that's that. Our dope is that Wills is cagey and clever enough to stay away from the bull's right hand —and any fighter who can do that can beat him.

THE NUT CRACKER

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Four of largest and most ferocious looking dogs in world will assemble in battle formation night Firpo and Wills exchange menacing frowns in Mr. Boyle's Wide Acreage.

And Wills' hounds are no smaller by any known system of weights and measurements. Laid end to end his violin cases cover more ground than big league shorstop operating on piecework basis.

DEMPSEY TO BE INTERESTED SPECTATOR

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(United Press).—Among the thousands at the ringside in Jersey City tomorrow night no one will be more interested in the battle between Harry Wills and Luis Angel Firpo than the heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey.

As an exhibition of mechanical ability, the champion might be only passively interested because he already has fought Firpo and he certainly knows plenty about Wills. But the business factor, as it pertains to his future activity should be of acute concern to Dempsey.

Firpo and Wills are meeting ostensibly for the purpose of deciding the next victim for the champion. If it is a good fight, if either one of the two big cauliflowers make a good showing it will mean another huge purse for the champion. If the fight should go the limit with the winner declared by a "Jersey decision" the situation will be just as complicated as it is now. Perhaps Dempsey might find consolation in that case with the hope that he could meet both of them, but one year hardly will hold two big heavyweight classics and result in a profit for all concerned.

Wills would become a great drawing card against the champion if he should happen to polish off the South American heavyweight in a few rounds. The big colored fighter has been next in line to Dempsey for years, but recently his priority rights to a championship battle have suffered by the claim that he has gone back, that his hands are bad and that he is not the fighter he was several years back.

Despite the fact that he has already been beaten by the champion, Firpo would fill any arena in the country in a return bout against Dempsey, because he knocked Dempsey to his knees twice in that memorable battle last fall and slugged him through the ropes into the press box. If Firpo wins the ballyhoo will be all ready to spring because it can be pointed out with some justification that the Argentinian is a better fighter than he was a year ago and that he could give the champion a better fight.

Dempsey has been insisting that he wants to get back to his regular business. He says he is tired of fiddling around in the movies and on the stage. Perhaps Dempsey is sincere, but it seems peculiar that he does most of his big talking just before one of his films is to be released. The last bunch of pictures he made are now ready for the screen and the champion is running around the country telling one and all that he is ready to hop into the ring on a moment's notice and fight anyone the "public" suggests. The "public," as referred to by prizefighters is sort of an unknown quantity, excepting where it pertains to the gate.

In justice to Dempsey, it must be considered that he has never shown any inclination to dodge any of his challengers. Partisan supporters of Wills have been yelping for years that Dempsey had drawn the color-line and that he was afraid to meet the former stevedore. There was never any reason to believe that Dempsey feared Wills, in fact, it is known that he always considered Wills to be easier than any of his rivals. Dempsey couldn't fight Wills because of political obstacles and if Wills come out of the fight tomorrow night the winner, the promoters will have a tough time picking a spot for the match.

Politicians who keep an eye on boxing are hoping that Firpo wins, because it will eleminate Wills from consideration and will remove that pesky "color-line" argument that is hard to answer when vote-getting time arrives.

Dempsey, despite his moans to the contrary, could have had a fight this year. He could have any number of fights if he wouldn't demand a million dollars for a few minutes' work. He stayed out of the ring this summer, not because he feared any of the battlers he might have met but because the producers who made his picture insisted that he remain out of the ring for at least six months after his pictures were released.

A million dollars of pictures featuring a former champion would not be worth 10 cents, and Firpo showed last summer that a champion can become a former champion with one good sock, good as he may be.

After the experience he had in Shelby, where he found it so difficult to get into condition and where he was so badly off form when he got into the ring with Tom Gibbons, Dempsey will hardly take another big fight until he warms up in a preliminary bout. It was the Gibbons bout that made Dempsey what he was the night he fought Firpo and he will have to be in the same condition to whip Firpo again or to beat Wills if he is called upon to it.

Gibbons could give him a good fight and perhaps Jack Renault, his former sparring partner, could be built up into the size of a trial contender. Gibbons has been pleading for a return bout but for some reason Jack Kearns has not felt inclined to consider any offers. Kearns claims that Gibbons hasn't the color to draw a big card, but he ought to admit that Gibbons has class enough to draw as many as Bill Brennan did in the Garden.

Dempsey ought to be willing to engage in a few minor bouts and work in Madison Square Garden in bouts where his title would not be seriousl endangered.

ens sleeping memories of booming guns on French front.

If footwork makes champions then Firpo and Wills can claim all titles from antweight to stout size heavyweight—their footwork may not be pretty but it's plenty.

Kingston Standard: Official word was received in Kingstin this morning by President James Kane of the K.A.B.I., who is looking after the interests of the Kingston Junior and Intermediate winners in the travels in the O.B.A.A. play-offs, from Secretary Walsh of the O.B.A.A., that Peterborough Lakeviews and Circle Six will play in Kingston on Saturday next, and that representatives of the O.B.A.A. will be in hand to see that things are run according to Hoyle.

The umpiring will be in the hands of Mr. Wylie of Ottawa and only legitimate expenses will be allowed the Peterborough Club.

This settles up any argument in connection with the Junior play-offs with Peterborough. Jakie Solomon said in Peterborough on Saturday that he would appoint the umpires for the next game and he would make all arrangements.

Kingston has had enough of Solomon, and Circle Six refused to have anything more to do with him, and went direct to the O.B.A.A. for their orders, with the result as given above. Solomon, therefore, has nothing more to say in regard to Circle Six, or the Intermediates either, for that matter.

In regard to the Intermediate play-off, President Kane received orders this morning that Kingston would meet Brockville in Kingston on Thursday, with the return game in Brockville on Saturday.

Mr. Kane was appointed to make arrangements for the playing of the game. If rain spoiled the playing of the game to-day between Wolfe Island and Kingston, the game was to take place to-morrow, with Hussars playing the next day against Brockville.

DUNC MUNRO WILL PLAY IN MONTREAL

Reported That He Has Signed Three Year Contract With Canadiens.

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press). — A report this morning says: "According to reliable information received last night, Dunc Monro, captain of the Canadian hockey team which won the Olympic championship at Chamonix last winter, has come to terms with the Canadiens, and left Monday night for Montreal. It is said that Munro has signed for three years at a salary of $4,000 a year, and, in addition, he has been offered a position in Montreal. The report could not be verified last night. It is known that the Canadiens are looking for a strong defence man to pair with Sprague Cleghorn, and if one is secured, Wilfred Coutu may go to Hamilton. Like his former teammates, Albert McCaffery and Hoolie Smith, Munro has been offered several professional contracts, and, like the latter, obtained the best terms from an outside club.

BASEBALL.

The C.G.E. won the second half of the Mercantile League last night when the Examiner team defaulted the game, in order to have the play-off between the Westclox and C.G.E. pulled off and thus terminate the league. Both teams were on hand for the game, but the weather was adverse to playing conditions and there was no umpire on hand. The Examiner team decides to default and allow the C.G.E. and Westclox to play Thursday evening in the first game of the play-off for the league championship. The Westclox are first half winners and the C.G.E. second half winners. Both teams are good and a great game is assured the fans when these two teames hook up. The game is called for 5.30 Thursday evening at Riverside Park and with good weather should draw a big crowd.

PEACEFUL REVOLUTION.

Caused By Failure To Function Because of Presence of Too Many Parties.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Failure of representative branch of Chilean government to function because of presence of too many parties in Congress, is the cause for peaceful revolution which has occurred there and which is confirmed in despatches receved by the State Department yesterday.

Breaking down of Parliamentary Government similar to that which has occurred in Spain, prominent Chileans here say, necessitated drastic action and that for this reason, assumption of power.

G.W.V.A. MEETING.

Ladies' Auxiliary Met on Monday Evening.

A meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A. was held on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. R. J. Devey, in the chair. It was decided to do sewing every Wednesday for relief work and for the annual bazaar, which takes place in November this year. Arrangements were also made for holding a rummage sale in the near future and for the regular winter season card parties.

Mrs. R. Bugg and Mrs. J. Welsh were appointed delegates to the convention of the Provincial Command, to be held in Toronto in the third week in October.

LAY WATER MAIN.

From Rutherford Avenue To 140 Feet East on Wolfe Street.

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission yesterday it was decided to lay a water main on Wolfe street from Rutherford avenue, to 140 feet east.

This will meet the demands of previous requests made by citizens living on Wolfe street.

Completed federal aid roads now total 30,535 miles.

DOUBLE-HEADER WITH QUEEN CITY

Young Petes Play Off in Finals at Riverside Park on Saturday.

Saturday will be gala day in this city when a double header will be run off at Riverside Park, when two Toronto teams will invade this city to play off with the Sacred Heart Midgets for the Midget championship of Ontario, and Kiwanis Bantams for the Bantam title. Bill Prindable's Midgets made a good showing in Toronto when they held the fast Queen City boys to six runs, while the Bantams put up a stiff argument, holding the Toronto boys until the eighth innings. "Dimp" Trebilcock pitched for the Kiwanis and fanned 12 of his opponents, and had his team not taken stage fright they would likely have trimmed Toronto.

Casey Masterson will pitch for the Midgets and will no doubt pull through with a win.

All school children will be given the opportunity of seeing the games free of charge, while adults will be charged the small sum of 25 cents. The gate receipts will go to help defray the Peterboro teams' expenses to Toronto.

There should be a large attendance and the games are sure to be of high class.

The first game will start at 1 o'clock sharp, while the second argument is billed for 3 p.m.

SEVENTEEN KILLED.

HONOLULU, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Seventeen persons are dead at Hanepepe Island, Kauai, as a result of the clash among the strikers and workers on the McBride plantations yesterday, according to word received to-day.

TORONTO, Sept. 10—(Canadian Press).—Word was received at the Parliament Buildings to-day that the condition of Premier Ferguson would prevent his return to the city until Friday. The Premier's illness will prevent the plebiscite questions being made public before Friday or Saturday. It is stated that the questions are ready but must await the return of the Premier.

MURDERERS DIDN'T FEAR THE PENALTY

Attorney Crowe Believes the Youths Weren't Scared of Death.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Robert E. Crowe, State Attorney, in a formal statement issued after the session, said: "I still believe that the death penalty is the only penalty feared by the murderers."

He said the responsibility for the decision rests with the court alone, and that he had no desire to criticize it, but that he would continue to do "everything within my power to enforce the law honestly and vigorously without regard to the status of the criminal."

After the sentence had been pronounced Nathan Leopold, Sr., father of one of the defendants, who sat with his head bowed while the jurist read his opinion, said that he would never attempt to obtain the release of his son from the penitentiary. When asked if that was his attitude, he replied emphatically, "Surely, surely."

SMITH'S WORK NOW USED AGAINST HIM

Evidence Was Taken From Reports and Books Kept By Accused.

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—At the continuation this morning of the trial of Ocean G. Smith, Chief Accountant of the Home Bank, on a charge of making false returns to the Dominion Department of Finance, most of the evidence was identification of reports and books from which monthly returns to the Government were compiled. Thomas Gibbs, who was assistant accountant, giving evidence for the Crown, said that he made out monthly statements to the Government, which were signed by the accused before being forwarded to Ottawa. He identified the handwriting.

On the statements for May and June, 1923, on which the charges against Smith are based as his own, he explained that information for these statements came from the head office. The hearing was resumed at 2.15 this afternoon.

Skelton, Commissioner of the Department of External Affairs, will probably be Canada's representatives at the October conference on Imperial Relations, should the conference be officially called. Australia and South Africa have intimated their willingness to join in the conference.

Messrs. Dandurand, Macdonald and Skelton are now in Geneva, attending the assembly of the League of Nations as Canadian representatives.

FAREWELL SERMON

By Pastor of Indian River Baptist Church.

INDIAN RIVER, September 10.—Pastor F. L. Chorley preached his farewell sermon to a large congregation on Sunday, 31st August.

There was special singing by Mrs. Chorley, who sang very feelingly, "It Pays to Serve Jesus."

At the close of the service the pastor and Mrs. Chorley were requested to stand on the platform, and Mr. Max Soanes read an address in appreciation of the labours of Pastor and Mrs. Chorley.

Mr. A. Evans, the church clerk, then presented the pastor with a purse of money.

JEWELRY STOLEN.

Jewels Stolen Were Valued at Quarter of a Million.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Jewellery valued at a quarter of a million dollars was stolen from the home of J. S. Cosden, wealthy oil man and racehorse owner, at Sand Point, Long Island, on Monday night, it was announced to-day by Gerard Lufsi, head of the investigating company which is in charge of the search for the robbers.

Some of the gems belonged to Lord and Lady Mountbatten, who accompanied the Prince of Wales to this country, and who were guests at the Cosden home.

CAR TURNED TURTLE.

Went Over Twenty Foot Embankment on North Buckhorn Road, With Two Occupants.

Late yesterday afternoon a four-cylinder touring car went over a 20-foot embankment with two occupants, turning turtle. The two men fortunately were able to crawl out from in under and miraculously escaped injury. The accident occurred on the north Buckhorn road in the burn about five miles south of Catchecum Lake.

The two occupants refused to accept assistance or give their names to another party that arrived at the scene of the mishap shortly after its occurrence.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"RIFTING" IS POWERFUL DEAN MELODRAMA.

Dynamic Universal Star in Strongest Role of Her Career.

Priscilla Dean continues to make her appearance in strong emotional roles that bring out the best qualities of her dramatic ability.

"Drifting," coming to the Capitol Theatre to-day and Thursday, is her newest starring vehicle.

"Drifting" is John Colton's stage play which William A. Brady produced with Alice Brady starring on the stage, adapted to the screen by A. P. Younger and Tod Browning, and directed by Tod Browning as a Universal-Jewel special production.

The story is an intensely dramatic, thrilling one of a white woman practically alone in China and engaged in a dangerous occupation—selling the opium that is the curse of the Mongolian empire. The plot ranges from the shadowed streets of Shanghai to the scarlet poppy fields of the hill country.

Fans have always thought of Priscilla Dean as the fiery figure of a woman alone and fighting for her rights against trickery and dishonesty. It is that sort of character that they will see her in in "Drifting."

The role of Cassie Cook which she plays runs the gamut of emotions and is supported by action of thrilling character. For a logical thrill in the story a complete Chinese village perched picturesquely on a hillside was burned, while hundreds of villagers engaged in a terrific battle. This village and several reproductions of Shanghai sections, were built at Universal City under the supervision of Thomas Gubbins, an American authority on China and her customs.

Wallace Beery, "heavy" de luxe Anna May Wong, a gifted Chinese actress, Matt Moore of "The Storm" William V. Mong, Frank Lanning, Bruce Guerin and other popular players, support Dean.

As a special treat for the children, the Capitol has booked Jackie Coogan in his latest picture, "Little Robinson Crusoe." This attraction will be shown next Friday and Saturday. A big children's matinee will be held on Saturday at 2:30.

AT THE GRAND.

"SO THIS IS LONDON."

George M. Cohan's ripping production, "So This is London," had a second performance at the Grand Opera House last evening, before a good-sized audience that seemed to appreciate to the utmost the undeniably clever and amusing atmosphere of the play which delineates the varying viewpoint of the Anglo-Saxon and his cousins from over the water.

"So This is London" gives an admirable presentation of the humor of England and the fun of America, and the Theatrical Enterprise players were fully equal to the demands made upon them. Their portrayal of the famous comedy which has been such a success since its opening is excellent and their premier performances give assurance of entertaining evenings during their various appearances in the city.

Anyone who enjoys a really up-to-date and sparkling comedy, punctuated with hilarious thrusts at the weaknesses of Britons and Americans alike, should not fail to see "So This is London," in its last appearance at the Grand to-night.

AT THE ROYAL.

VIOLA DANA'S IN A NEWLYWED STORY

AT THE ROYAL NOW

Viola Dana in her newest picture "Don't Doubt Your Husband", is one of the merriest photoplays in which she has ever appeared. The story, by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, tells of first year matrimony in smart suburban quarters, punctuated with explosions of jealous temperament and replete with brilliant satire.

Harry Beaumont, fresh from his triumph in directing "Beau Brummel" for John Barrymore, has handled the Dana picture with the same expert authority. An excellent cast includes Alan Forrest, Winifred Bryson, John Patrick, Willard Louis and Robert Dunbar. Notable photography has been contributed by John Arnold.

The final performance will be given to-night.

"HIGH SPEED" WITH RAWLINSON PROMISES THRILLS AND LAUGHS

ROYAL THURSDAY

"High Speed" a rollicking comedy drama by Frederick Jackson, directed by Herbert Blache, is the Universal film feature which brings Herbert Rawlinson, and a cast of popular players to the screen of the Royal Theatre to-morrow.

Rawlinson's pictures have varied in type in the past few months. "Jack O'Clubs" was a whimsical story of an Irish policeman, while "His Mystery Girl" was the sad tale of a man with "nerves," and "Stolen Secrets" a crook drama of unusual characteristics. The last, "The Danc ing Cheat", was a fast action drama of Tia Juana, famous Mexican border resort.

Now comes "High Speed" with the producer's guarantee of laughter The hero is a star amateur athlete in a small town, in love with a girl whose father thinks athletes are not so good and holds out the stop signal at first sign of the growing romance between his beautiful daughter and the champion.

For such a story it would be necessary to have proven players, and Universal chose for the supporting roles such players as Carmelita Geraghty, Otto Hoffman, Bert Roach, Jules Cowles, J. Buckley Russell and Percy Challenger. The director of this production is remembered for "Nobody's Bride".

ORCHESTRA AT ROYAL

The Royal Orchestra which has been a feature at that popular playhouse each season are again back in their accustomed places. New faces have been added which will be further augmented on Monday next. Some of the members contracted for, have engagements at the Exhibition. Lovers of good music can rest assured that nothing is being left undone to supply their needs.

Seventy-seven players competed in the event.

SHOPS WILL STAY IN NORTHERN TOWN.

LINDSAY, Sept. 10.—In conversation with an official of the C.N.R. it has been learned that the report relative to the running of grain trains from Midland to Belleville without change of crews, etc., is without foundation. It was pointed out that such a move was a physical impossibility, owing to the distance (161 miles), length of hours crews would be obliged to work, stops, etc. The bridges along the line were being reinforced in order to permit the use of the monster Mikado engine on this division.

BEAUTY OF JESUS' MESSAGES

In the course of an address Rev. C. C. Albertson said Mount Everest is so high that in presents a different view from every angle. The Matterhorn is majestic, but it has no such diversity of view as Mount Everest. Christ's message to the world is like Mount Everest. The first century had a view of it, and it was what that age needed. The golden age of Greece had passed. Morality had broken down. The noble ethical ideal of Judaism was eclipsed by clouds of tradition.

Came Jesus, with His message of certainty as to God, and His offer of rest. Came Jesus, with His emphasis upon the spirit of religion and upon the possibility of vital union with the Divine. No wonder men turned to Him, as followers turn their faces to the sun. He was the God-Man for all ages! He furnishes the truth we most need now. The Father's testimony long ago is still true: "This is my Beloved Son hear ye Him."

ELEMENTS FAIL TO DAUNT MANY CITY CHILDREN

Exhibition Crowded Early In Spite Of Intermittent Showers.

BIGGEST MIDWAY.

Directors Pleased By Prompt Placing Of All Exhibits Entered.

Rain did not keep thousands of Peterborough children and hundreds of children from the country away from Peterborough Industrial Exhibition to-day, and the aisles and buildings were crowded from shortly after noon when the gates were opened. Between twelve o'clock and four o'clock all children were admitted free.

Street cars to the Fair grounds were crowded to capacity and often left a score of young people standing to await the next car. Every side street disgorged its quota of hurrying children, all with their faces set towards the Exhibition ground.

Swings and merry-go-rounds were quickly filled, and many of the owners of side shows threw their exhibitions open to children free. More side shows are seen this year on the midway than ever before, tents and marquees touching each other in two long lines that extend to the entrance to the grand stand.

The directors of the Exhibition Board are delighted with the manner in which the exhibitors had their stalls arranged for the opening hour There were only two or three who failed to open in full swing at noon, and these were working hard to catch up with their faster neighbours

One of the most popular booths with the early arrivals among the children to-day was the post office educational exhibit, where lectures on postal laws and practice are given periodically. The Canadian Packing Company stall, too, with its pretty representation of a camp scene, had its big quota of admirers, and the chickens in the poultry building made a universal appeal. The eye is quickly caught in the vegetable marquee by the huge stalks of corn, reaching the roof. Just inside the door are monster pumpkins, and the showing of miscellaneous vegetables and grains is remarkably complete.

Bands Paraded

At two o'clock the Peterborough Rangers' Band paraded to the grounds, followed shortly after by the Caledonian Pipe band. Young members of the Salvation Army juvenile band gathered there, completing the trio of city musical organizations that will cater to the success of the fair.

No horse races were scheduled for to-day, but the next three days will see as fine a programme as has been given at Peterborough Fair. The vaudeville performance in front of the grand stand to-morrow will follow the official opening of His Honor Lieut. Governor Henry Cockshutt and between the acts the horse races will take place.

Mothers visiting the Exhibition will find the rest room, between the Lock street gate and the George street gate, a boon. This was donated by a citizen.

Throughout the grounds are telephone booths for the convenience of Exhibition visitors, and a complete mailing system is carried on in the post office exhibition.

We welcome your inspection. Special price for Exhibition Week. Call and see them.

WEDDING BELLS.

HATHERLY—WILSON.

A pretty wedding took place at 11 o'clock this morning, at Trinity Methodist church, which was decorated for the occasion with asters and gladioli, when Edith Victoria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, 279 Thomas street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Irvin Hatherly, of Detroit, son of Mr. James L. Hatherly, of Peterboro, and the late Mrs. Mrs. Hatherly. Rev. A. J. Langford performed the ceremony.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, wore a a charming costume of pearl grey georgette, with black picture hat, brown fox fur neckpiece, and arm bouquet of ophelia roses. She also wore a rope of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

The bride received a large number of pretty and useful gifts, among them several presents from societies in Trinity Church, in which she was an active worker, including several pieces from her Sunday school class and the Trinity Mission Circle, and a picture from the Fidele class. Another handsome gift was a large table lamp from the Examiner Printing Company's staff, of which the bride was a valued member.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with flowers, ferns and palms.

The bride, who was unattended, wore a smart costume of sand and brown, with hat to match, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

The wedding march was played by Mr. M. B. Chenhall, who also accompanied the singing, in clear, sweet voice of "Until," by Miss Greta LeBarr.

Mr. and Mrs. Skinner left by the noon C.P.R. train for Montreal and Quebec. They will reside in Peterboro.

FANNING—KNOX.

George street Methodist church was prettily decorated with palms, ferns and asters for a wedding which took place at two o'clock this afternoon, when Mary Vera, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Knox, 481 Gilmour street, was united in marriage to Weldon E. Fanning, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Fanning. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Harold Young.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mr. J. H. Renwick, wore a smart travelling costume of black satin-stripe Roshanara crepe, trimmed with wide bands of platinum fox fur, the panels and long scarf faced with grey canton. Black shoes and stockings and a hat of black panne velvet were worn, and the bride carried an arm bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marguerite Fanning, wore black satin-faced canton crepe, with black hat and bouquets of sunset roses.

A brother of the bride, Mr. Marvin Knox of St. Catharines, acted as best man.

During the signing of the register, a vocal solo, "At Dawning," was sung in sweet voice by Mrs. Gerald McClelland, who wore poudre blue georgette, with black hat, and corsage of columbia roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Fanning left by motor for Toronto, where they will take a train trip to Montreal and through Quebec province. On their return they will reside in Peterboro.

Citizen Helps Children To See the Exhibition

During the most crowded hour of transporting children to the Fair Grounds, a kindly act was performed by a prominent citizen who wishes his name suppressed.

A party of a dozen children, none of them wearing coats, was half walking, half running, on George Street towards the Exhibition in a downpour of rain. This citizen gathered them together at a corner where street cars stop, and gave each child the price of a fare on the car and a nickel to pay for a ride on the merry-go-round.

He faded away quickly as the passers-by smiled in sympathy with the benevolent deed.

'ASSETS ROTTEN' WITNESS AVERS IN BANK TRIAL

Assistant Chief Accountant Had Refused to Make Out Statements.

MONTHLY REPORTS

Thomas Gibbs Names Securities He Condemned to Bank Colleague.

TORONTO, Sept. 11—(Canadian Press).—In the trial of Ocean G. Smith, former Chief Accountant of the Home Bank, on charges of making false returns to the Department of Finance at Ottawa, Thomas Gibbs, who was assistant to Smith, was on the witness stand yesterday for most of the day under examination by D. L. McCarthy, Crown counsel. In his evidence Mr. Gibbs stated that twice he had refused to make out statements for the bank as suggested, and that he had told Mr. Smith that some of the securities held by the bank were rotten. On his refusal, Mr. Smith or somebody else had made out the statements which were the basis for the monthly reports to the Government.

Were False Assets.

Two of the securities, the witness said, were rotten were the Port McNeill company and the Howe Sound Pulp and Paper Company bonds of which the value marked in Home Bank books as assets was $1,975,000. The third security referred to as rotten by the witness was the Western Pulp and Paper Company on which he had refused to make us a statement for the bank, classifying it as an asset. Witness was asked point blank if he regarded his entries all as correct. He replied that he did not think the item of $30,000 as a gift to M. J. Haney should have been marked as an asset as it was money going out. Mr. McCarthy also wanted to know how the $550,000 fund reserve item in the report to the Government was arrived at, and asked why is wasn't $650,000.

"It might just as well have been, I suppose," said the witness.

He had put it down as $550,000 because he had been instructed to do so. Mr. Gibbs was cross-examined for a few minutes before adjournment by G. N. Shaver for the defence.

Signed By Smith.

Witness said that the chief accountant had done his work faithfully, but would not affirm the suggestion that it was always correct. Earlier in the day he said that he made out the statements that went to the Government and that Smith signed them. Some thirty bank books and records were put in as exhibits and extra vault room is being arranged for the truck loads of exhibits which will be put in before the trial concludes. Several of the directors and counsel for other officials of the bank who are charged with offence under the Banking Act followed the evidence closely yesterday.

"Did you discuss with Mr. Smith any of the other securities which had no market value?"—"The Murray-Kay Company."

"I see it on the list at a par value of 124, 300—the quotation rate is 90—market value is $111,870 and it is carried on with a book value of $118,665 on May 31, 1923, how did you arrive at the market value of that stock?"—"It was arrived at in this way, that Mr. R. P. Gough had previously bought through the bank a considerable amount of Murray-Kay preferred stock at 90 and that was the origin of the quotation being put in."

"Did you discuss with Mr. Smith why that quotation should continue?"—"No doubt I consulted him as to what quotation I should put in."

"Was Murray-Kay stock paying a dividend?"—"No."

"Was it paying a dividend when Mr. Gough paid 90 for it?"—"Yes, a sheet in the ledger will show that."

At this point, Mr. Gough, rising from a seat in the jury box on the far side of the room, removed his overcoat. He was listening intently to the evidence.

Mr. McCarthy—"Did you attempt to obtain market quotation?"

Witness—"There was no market quotation."

JUDGE EVADED MENTAL POINT

Declined to Set Precedent on Big Technicality of the Franks Case.

THREATS 'PHONED

CHICAGO, September 11.—Sheriff Hoffman said that within a few hours after the sentencing of Leopold and Loeb yesterday, he had received several anonymous telephone warnings that preparations were being made to waylay the prisoners and their escorts en route to the penitentiary, and to take the prisoners from his custody.

The addition of ninety-nine years to the life sentence of the slayers was seen as a move to block freedom for them at the end of twenty years. Under the Illinois statutes no move to obtain paroles for them can be undertaken under 33 years on the 99 year sentence. This is 13 years after such a step could be taken on the life sentence, the law providing that a man is eligible for parole if he has 20 years of good conduct to his credit on a life ter .

A graduated scale of credits for good behaviour is provided for prisoners serving 99 years. During the first five years one month is allowed each year. After that it is six months for every two years of clean record in prison.

Thus Leopold and Loeb will be more than 50 years old before either can even think of seeing the outside world again.

"It was all we could have asked," Clarence Darrow, the defence counsel, said after the judgment had been rendered.

In contrast, Robert E. Crowe, the State's attorney, and formerly himself an occupant of the place held by Judge Caverly, said:

"While I do not intend and have no desire to criticize the decision of the court, I still believe that death is the only penalty feared by murderers."

Even as Judge Caverly declined to break precedent by sentencing the boys to hang, so he declined to make precedent by ruling definitely on the big legal technicality of the case, whether a degree of mental sickness, short of legal insanity, might be linked with moral turpitude as a mitigating circumstance. All through the six weeks of the actual hearing this question was the technical background, with the State's attorney trying to switch the proceedings into an insanity hearing and the defence insisting that the question of insanity was barred by the terms of the pleas of guilty.

Victim's Father Talks.

Jacob Franks, father of the murdered boy, was present to hear Judge Caverly's decision. He was the same conspicuous figure that had appeared day by day as the mills of the law ground slowly.

"I am satisfied with what Judge Caverly has ruled," he said in the hall outside when asked for a statement.

"It was not for me to cry out for vengeance. I always have been a law abiding citizen, and so I looked to the law to inflict its penalty on the killers of my boy.

"The people of Illinois felt that their cause was mine and their representatives have done their duty."

"Bobby's" Mother.

"How will Mrs. Franks feel about it," he was asked.

"Mrs. Franks has the same opinion I have," he replied. "We both

WINTHROP PAIR MOTORED NORTH ON HONEYMOON

Rich Elopers Passed Through Vermont on Way to Montreal.

AVOID PUBLICITY

Each Have Million Dollars, Aunt of Girls Affirms.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 11.—Mrs. Emily Winthrop Miles and Mrs. Kate Winthrop Morse, heiress daughters of Grenville Lindall Winthrop, multi-millionaire banker of New York and Lennox, left here Tuesday headed for Montreal, with their chauffeur and electrician husbands. They travelled in two Packards owned by them.

The third night of the double elopement party found Darwin Spurr Morse, twenty-three, Lenox electrician and former chicken expert for the Winthrops, with his twenty-five-year-old bride, Kate, seeking sanctuary in a small room in the Hotel Vermont here.

Emily, thirty-one-year-old daughter of the aristocratic banker, who married Lucien Miles, thirty-three, Winthrop family chauffeaur, sought to escape notoriety by registering at the New Sherwood Hotel under an assumed name. Their identity was revealed when Emily telephoned to Kate at the Hotel Vermont.

Have $1,000,000 Each.

Mrs. Frederic Winthrop, aunt of the eloping girls, said today at her Summer place, "Groton Hall" at Hamilton-Wenham, that she did not believe the girls can be deprived of their marriages, of the income from the $1,000,000 each bequeathed by their mother, Mrs. Mary C. Taylor.

Mrs. Winthrop, who is a leader in North Shore society, said:

"I'm as anxious as anyone to get to the particulars of this double elopement and marriage, in view of what has appeared in the newspapers.

"I feel certain that there is no clause in the will, of the mother of the girls, respecting their income in event of marriage.

"I know my husband has no knowledge of any such clause. If he knew about it, I'm sure I'd know also.' Mr. Winthrop is in Lenox.

"I have not the slightest information as to what has been taking place at 'Groton Place, 'in Lenox. Neither do I know whether there has been a reconcillation between the Winthrop sisters and their father."

Forgiveness Reported.

Reports from Lenox indicated that the elder Winthrop had forgiven his daughters for participation in the most sensational and romantic elopment in metropolitan society circles in a decade, and that he was ready to welcome them back into the family fold, with their poor, workingmen husbands.

All At Theatre Party.

The eloping quartet registered at the Vermont and New Sherwood Hotels. Both pairs dined in seclusion about an hour later in their respective hotels, and in the evening they joined each other in a box party at a burlesque show at the Strong Theatre.

Both couples were up early and headed for the north end of the city, where they had parked their machine in a private garage.

When the Winthrop girls, with their husbands, were met by reporters on Main street, young Morse said that "all were having a dandy time and enjoying themselves immensely."

BARS AGAINST RUSSIAN JEWS

Must Qualify as Agricultural Workers Before Canada Admits Them.

TO LIMIT NUMBER

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Jewish refugees from Russia seeking entry into Canada will be subject to the same restrictions as now apply under the law to all immigrants, namely that they must qualify as agricultural workers and give reasonable assurance that they intend to remain in the rural districts of Canada.

This was the dictum of the Minister of Immigration, Hon. J. A. Robb, who last night received a delegation of steamship men, which asked for a ruling on the status under the Canadian immigration law of Hebrew citizens of Russia now resident in Russia or the Near East. Many of these, it is understood, sought entry into Canada but were unable to qualify as agricultural workers.

It is understood that the Immigration Department a year ago made allowance for a number of Jewish refugees from the countries specified, provided they filled the requirements of the Immigration law. A tentative limit was set to the number to be admitted, but the actual number who have gained admittance as agricultural workers falls short of the qquota set for the twelve month period.

In declining to enlarge the field of immigration in this class, it is presumed that the Immigration Department has in mind the pledges to the United States Government that everything will be done at Canadian ports to prevent the immigration of Europeans who seek to use Canada as a gateway to the United States as a means of evading the restrictions of that country's immigration law.

INDUSTRIOUS ESKIMOS.

Make Visit To Nome To Sell Their Wares.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 11.—(Associated Press).—Every year since Nome can remember the entire native village of King Island makes a pilgrimage to the city, arriving about July 4 and remaining most of the summer.

The natives, a clean, industrious and healthy lot, make the trip of approximately 100 miles in boats which they build from the hides of walrus. Seven of these boats carry the whole population, including all their possessions.

The King Islanders are clever carvers. Arriving in Nome with several tons of ivory, they carve the rough tusks into cribboards, gravels, forks, knives, spoons, umbrella handles, hat-pins and numerous other things. The merchants and people of Nome patronize them liberally, so that the camp usually collects thousands of dollars during the season, and these profits they put back into circulation by purchasing supplies for the next winter.

These Eskimos enter the summer athletic contests at Nome and often develop athletes of ability. At other times they provide entertainments with their orchestra.

BRITAIN READY WITH PROPOSAL ON ARMAMENTS

Will Be Presented When the Time Comes, Lord Parmon Tells League.

JAPAN'S POSITION

Will Resume Naval and Military Appropriations On Former Scale

GENEVA, Sept. 11.— Jugo-Slavia cannot reduce her armaments unless such action on her part is supported by the pact of mutual guarantees, Foreign Minister Marinkovitch of Jugo-Slavia declared yesterday, in opening the discussion before the disarmament commission of the League of Nations. He considered the criticisms of Signor Schanzer of Italy of the United States' plan constructive and he hoped it would clear away for the deliberations of the committee.

M. Marinkovitch defended particular or regional agreements, declaring, fortified by them, the small nations would be able to reduce armaments to a minimum.

Lord Parmoor of Great Britain said he agreed with Signor Schanzer's criticism in the main, adding that no scheme for the control of German armaments could be perfected until Germany was a member of the League.

"When the time comes," he said, "the British Government will present a specific proposal for the consideration of this committee."

M. Matsuda, of Japan, aroused considerable interest when he arose to speak because of his communication to the League that Japan, as soon as her financial situation was improved, intended to resume military and naval appropriations on a pre-earthquake scale.

The Japanese delegate congratulated the authors of the American plan for their "generous initiative" and added that the Japanese Government would support with all its forces whatever plan was adopted.

Japan, however, he added, felt certain apprehensions about the policy of particular alliances. He promised further exposition of Japan's views on compulsory arbitration later on but he expressed the fear that all questions affecting national interests, independence and honor could not yet be submitted to the International Court of Justice.

TEACHERS DECIDED TO MOLD CHILDREN

French Children Are To Be Taught Revolutionary Principles.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—(Associated Press).—The United Federation of School Teachers of France, in session in this city, has resolved that school children be taught revolutionary principles. In the discussion that preceded the vote different orators declared that teachers should take matters in their own hands and begin their class strife propaganda with the little ones, discarding old text books, and "bringing the children to understand that modern society is filled with the germs of injustice."

The federation comprises about 8,000 teachers who previously belonged to the federation which affiliated with the French Federation of Labor, and which separated from that body when the Communists split with the Socialist party.

The ranks of the Communist teachers will be considerably swelled if the amnesty bill passed by the Chamber is adopted by the Senate. This bill reinstates teachers who have been dismissed for subversive action, or for any other reason, and provides for their promotion to posts they would in the ordinary course have reached had they not been dismissed.

FAMOUS PAINTINGS.

TOKIO, Sept. 11.—(Associated Press).—Reproductions of two famous paintings, familiar in millions of homes in the Occident, were presented to the Prince Regent of Japan recently by the Federation of Christian Missions in Japan, most of whose members are Americans.

The pictures are Watts' "Sir Galahad" and Soord's "The Lost Sheep." Below the "Sir Galahad" is a plate bearing Tennyson's lines, "My strength is as the strength of ten because my heart is pure." The inscription at the bottom of the other picture is, "The Good Shepherd Giveth His Life for His Sheep."

Tourists from the United States spent $118,500,000 in Canada last year.

Denounces Montreal Cabal Seeking Change of Leadership in Conservative Party—Silencer Needed for Enemies Within the Ranks.

MEIGHEN REJECTS DICTATION

KINGSTON, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Declaring that what the Montreal Conservatives want is "not a leader who will lead, but a leader who will sell himself body and soul to them and surrender his policies at their dictate," and adding that "Mr. Meighen, happily, is not of that kidney," the Kingston Daily Standard, whose publisher has enjoyed the confidences of both Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Meighen came out editorially yesterday in direct opposition of the demand of the Montreal Gazette and the Montreal Star for a change in the leadership of the Conservative party.

Stating that "it is a notorious fact that if Mr. Meighen would bend the knee to the would-be dictators in Montreal and swallow their political nostrums, he could have their support beyond question," the Standard declares that if Mr. Meighen were now superceded by another leader this would be tantamount to a confession by the Conservatives of all the other provinces that they are willing that the Quebec Conservatives who were not able to elect a single member of parliament in the last election should dictate to all other Conservatives the choice of a Conservative leader",—a supposition that the Standard regards as preposterous.

A Capable Leader.

Strongly supporting Mr. Meighen as a leader of courage and capacity, the Standard recalls that just as there is now a revolt in some quarters against Mr. Meighen's leadership so there was a cabal against Mr. Borden when he was the opposition leader, and it then goes on to reveal a little inside political history by declaring that "this cabal, by the way was headed by some of the very men who afterward were glad to serve under him in his cabinet, when he became prime minister."

Advice to Montreal.

The Standard concludes its article as follows:

"What really seems to be needed at the moment is for the Quebec Conservatives to begin to do some house cleaning on their own part and to choose some leaders in Montreal and elsewhere in Quebec who will not throw out regularly nominated Conservative candidates or listen to the dictates of men who seem to have more money than political ability or acumen and what the Conservative party itself needs more than changed leadership is to put a silencer or a muffler on the enemies and unfriendly spirits within its own ranks."

OLD TIME GHOST EVICTS FAMILY

Charming Old Country House Is Haunted By Ghost.

CHICHESTER, Sussex, England, Sept. 11.—(Associated Press). — "The strange lady" is the name of a ghost which constantly evicts tenants from a charming old country house not far from this city. Families come and families go. Sometimes they stay for several weeks; sometimes they remain for only a few days.

One modern, up-to-date woman who leased the house pooh-poohed the idea that it was haunted and carefully kept all ghost stories away from her three young children. Within a few weeks the children complained to their mother that they did not like to play in their nursery because "the lady" disturbed them.

Finally the up-to-date and skeptical mother also saw the strange woman. She was unwilling to admit it at first, but a boy and girl of 16 and 17 respectively, who were visiting her, complained that they also had seen her.

This female ghost has been seen by so many persons, or at least so many persons have imagined they saw it, that it has become well-known to ghost specialists in all parts of England. The legend told in explanation of the apparition is that the house was owned by a cavalier who during the Civil War took refuge in a secret chamber. His wife denied to the Roundheads that he was in the building. They set fire to the house and the husband was suffocated. His wife lost her reason through the shock, and her spirit is supposed to haunt the building in spite of the fact that it has been rebuilt and little remains of the old mansion.

Japan's total of autos is estimated at about 15,000 .

PRODUCERS SELL DIRECT TO PUBLIC

Covent Garden Porters Reveal by Strike They Are Not Essential.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—The very slight inconvenience inflicted on the retailers or consumers of fruit and vegetables by the strike of the Covent Garden porters has resulted in leading other traders to explore methods of how to dispense with the services of the middleman.

The West Lancashire farmers propose opening shops in the seaside towns to sell their produce direct to the consumers. It is claimed that some small essays already made in this direction show that the farmers can obtain £14 for a ton of potatoes, whereas the price heretofore has been £6. Apples which have been practically given away by shopkeepers at two shillings a score can be sold by the farmers direct to the consumers at five times that sum. Rabbits which hitherto have been scarcely worth shooting for the market may now yield a substantial profit by the new system.

The national farmers' union extends its benediction to the new movement to establish farmers' shops which it is thought may possibly revolutionize the home agriculturist's outlook on methods of making a livelihood.

CHILDREN'S DAY WAS A WASHOUT AT EXHIBITION

Athletic Events Postponed Until Saturday Morning at Ten.

ADMISSION 5 CENTS

Vaudeville and Fireworks Abandoned in Downpour of Rain.

Yesterday's downpour successfully halted activities at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in the evening, but only whetted the appetites for the good things provided by the Board of Directors. The weather is the one thing needed for the success of the Fair over which the Directors have no control.

Following the afternoon rain, which spoiled the day for the young people and halted their races when only one event had been completed, the directors in conference decided to throw the exhibition open to children on Saturday at an admission fee of only five cents. All children applying between nine and four o'clock on Saturday will be admitted at this charge, and will then be entitled to remain in the grounds until closing time.

The races which were unavoidably postponed yesterday will be run off on Saturay morning, and all contestants will be admitted.

The entries for the children events this year far outnumber thats of previous years. For the sevthis events G. H. Roper received 658 tries on the regulation forms sides the scores who applied the races were called and postp The base running contest, the event completed yesterday, wa by Warde McDonald, wit Westbrooke and E. Dormer and third respectively. Prizes events will be distributed the schools.

Clowns Were Busy.

The children who crowded ered portion of the grand st the afternoon despite the in weather joined lustily in the led by Bert Caldwell, and appl vociferously the musical numb rendered by the Rangers' Ba Webber Turner, in charge of tainment, hoped momentarily the rain would so far cease as mit a presentation of the va show he had secured for th sion, but was finally compl allow the children to leave aft one item had been given, an under difficulties. Florence Yorke, presenting ial Belles and Beaus, faced the cap imposed by rain and through her act under shelter large umbrella. Owing to the da of the rain spoiling the beau costumes in which the act is us given, the performers wore st dress. This musical act feati Izetta in accordian playing and si ing, supported by Edna Mosch Jean Dumont Glendora O'Dell a Bruton Woods. It is of a high o der, and many complimentary re marks on the performance wer voiced by members of the Rangers Band, who should be able to judge of the musical ability of the troupe.

The evening grand stand performance and the fireworks display were abandoned when the increasing downpour made their success impossible.

Throughout the afternoon and evening the Caledonian Pipe Band took every temporary cessation of the rain to present selections of their inimitable music at the midway band stand.

Exhibition Notes.

The poultry building was crowded this morning, with 200 birds still to come.

Judging of flowers was completed yesterday afternoon.

Prominent visitors to the Exhibition are Harry May, electrical superintendent of the Canadian National Exhibition, and his assistant, Mr. McClure; and Roth Eaton, the noted clothier of Toronto. They came to Peterboro specially to visit the Exhibition.

One budding pitcher, well known on a city team, succeeded in winning several boxes of chocolate for his admiring friends. When they told him "this is for yourself" he was unable to spill the milk.

DOUBTS CLAIMS OF WHEAT POOL

Jas. Richardson Questions Its Advantages Over Exchange Method.

KEEPS OPEN MIND.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—In his retiring address, President James Richardson, dealing with the pool system of marketing wheat at the annual meeting of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday afternoon, declared that it was difficult to make exact comparisons with the success of the Alberta pool and marketing through the exchange.

"We can say with some certainty that the announcements made by the pool however, have clearly indicated a desire to try to show the operations in the most favorable light but have not supplied all the facts necessary for a judgment on results," Mr. Richardson said. "I must confess," he added, "that we have so far seen nothing to justify the claim that the pool method of marketing has given the Alberta producer any better price than the established methods could and did give."

Continuing, Mr. Richardson asserted that the grain trade not only recognized the right of the farmer to carry out this experiment, but it had placed its elevators, staffs and experience at the disposal of the pool at lower rates than otherwise could have been obtained. "Similar experiments will be made this year in Saskatchewan and Manitoba and it will not be very long until the wisest of teachers—experience, will have decided the issue," he said.

"While we are keeping an open mind on the subject, we are not yet convinced that this innovation is a step along the road of sound economic progress. We still tend to the belief that the free play of opinion in farmers, millers, merchants, exporters and importers the world over has, year in and year out in the past, and will in the future, record a wheat price that has an uncanny way of reflecting true conditions and reflecting them much better than anybody of men can forecast them."

"In the past we have had a very big movement of grain via Vancouver. This is something that we have long expected, and we now welcome it as an additional competitive and regulative influence on transportation costs," declared Mr. Richardson

Referring to the feature of Government-regulation of wheat marketing through the Board of Grain Commissioners, Mr. Richardson said:—

"We do not think it will be an easy matter to extend the regulation of the grain trade by legislation very far without a conflict between such regulations and the operation of the farmers' co-operative companies. We are of the opinion that it is not an easy matter to devise legislation controlling an international business and we are inclined to think that, since the farmers themselves have created agencies of their own for the handling of grain, our legislators would be well-advised to move with caution.'

"So you merely depended on the amount that Mr. Gough paid for it?"—"Yes."

Security of No Value.

"Take another security that had no value, the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee, there is some at a par value of $75,000. How did you arrive at that no valuation? You have it at $80,000."—"Forty was the quotation I got for them."

Witness added that this stock had depreciated in value.

"Then there is some of the Jas. A. Ogilvie, Ltd., stock, preferred shares, par value $250,000. You carried them in at $225,000. Where did you get the market quotation?"—"We took the book value."

"There was no market value?"—"I think not."

"So you simply put them in at the book value of $225,000?"—"Yes."

THE FAIR BOARD TURNS TO JOB

Even the Caledonian Pipers' Stand-In With J. Pluvius Availed Nothing Against the Jinx That Pursues the Exhibition Board.

Directors of the Exhibition met casually and rather mournfully in the secretary's office last night at the close of one of the gloomiest days in the Board's record of disappointments. The glow of an electric heater tended to dispel the accumulated chill and dampness. The atmosphere was comfortable, but its grateful warmth could not penetrate to the dejected heart of every member.

"Boys," began President Denne, breaking the silence, "I had Tom Brown go over and get the Good Book so that we might ponder over the lamentations of Job, before we turn in for the night. Misery likes company, you know, and if we refresh our memories of the tribulations of that great servant of the Lord, we may not feel so blue ourselves. It's probably going to rain until Saturday night and then clear up for the Lindsay show, but when Reg Turner is reading about the joyless Job we'll find it said there that the wicked sometimes prosper. Not only do they prosper but they enjoy all the jazz of life. I haven't read Job in a long time and that goes, I guess, for most of us, but you remember it tells that the children of the wicked dance, and play on the timbrel and the harp, and they sing the latest song hits with organ accompaniment. So we've got Lindsay's pedigree right there. And this afternoon I get a telegram from Jack Carew with "Yes we got no raincoats." What do you know about that Steinkrauss? Last year you recollect it was coon coats, and now they go rubbing it in again.

Before Reg reads a few of the worst or perhaps the most inspiring chapters from the doleful Job I was just going to say a few things, you know, just talking it over between ourselves.

I'm willing to bet that Job was a Fair director just like Johnny Williams, Tom Darrah, Vin Eastwood and the rest of us. If we had the profane history of that time before us we would probably discover that Job's troubles started when he joined the Board of the Spring Stallion Show and Agricultural Society in the land of Uz. Am I right, Steinkrauss?"

"Maybe you are, Rollie. Just as like as not," ventured the imperturable William.

"And the first thing Job knew he had a run in with the camel drivers," continued the President. "Some of them kicked about paying their entry fee, others claimed they got a raw deal from the judges in the start of the 2.59 camel trot, another complained that he didn't get a stall in the barn, and so on. And then the cattle men went after him about not being in their right classes, and the hot-dog concessionaire kicked about getting a place off the midway when he thought he ought to be right on the main drag."

"I'm not sure they had hot-dog stands in those days," Tom Hooper remarked.

"Maybe they hadn't," the President admitted, "but you may be sure somebody was selling something hot for cold days like we get, and you can bank on it that there was the usual grouchers among them. They might have been selling liquor or wines, for Ham Burnham says they could sell it if they liked in those days, instead of orangeade and two per cent."

"Them days is gone forever, Rollie," Webber Turner quoted.

"And we don't want them around here. We'd have Joe Crowe spouting in the Council about the iniquities of the Fair Board, and the Council might cut off our grant."

"But we'd sure get the crowd, Rollie," Reg Turner suggested.

"Well, just referring to Joe Crowe, there's only one thing sadder looking than Bruce Fowler on a cold and rainy Fair day and that's Joe Crowe when he gives the midway the once over and finds it O.K., everything clean and above board like we always have it. Am I right, Paxey?"

"Sure you are, Rollie," answered Paxman. "All we need is boosters to make this the best show ourside of Toronto."

"That's the spirit," nodded the President. "Well as I was saying about Job—don't lose the place Reg, or you mightn't be able to find it again—he was a regular guy before he joined the Uz Fair Board. He knocked around with the boys and he was boosting his home town all the time, trying to raise the standard of the sheen like Tom McIndoo's doing with good hard work for the community, and developing the breed of the asses, and oxen and camels just like Smith Milburn, Roseborough and Bob Grandy and the rest of the boys are doing in their lines to-day."

"Probably some of the women went after him too for ruling out some of the quilts that were used in the Ark and swept all the stakes in post diluvial shows," Chris. Graham added.

"That's a safe bet, Chris," the President approved, "and no doubt he didn't escape the dissatisfied women who showed wild roses or the wild women with tame roses. You know all about it, Young, you and Dave Jordan and George Duncan.

And after a couple of years trying to make the Uz Spring stallion show and Fall Fair a success, Job was doomed as a man of trouble, but just like us he had been through a real school of adversity and had a big store of patience, just like Webber Turner and Tom Hooper. After handling the amusements for ten years they are ready for any kind of trouble, and Hooper whistles away and let's Webber do all the worrying, if he wants to, and most of the work."

"There's a verse in Job somewhere," Webber Turner broke in, "that fits Ommie Ball, Charlie Moore and Bob Grandy and the rest of our shock troops. Reg. ought to read it kinda slow; you know soft music style. It goes like this, "My head is bloody but unbowed."

"That's good stuff," the President commended. "It applies to the whole crowd. The weather may freeze and Lindsay may kid us, but we're not complaining. 'We stand on guard for thee.' Didn't Job say that, McIndoo?"

"I'm not sure, Rollie, about those two quotations," Tom doubted. "In fact I don't believe Reg. will find them in the text, but they're our sentiments just the same."

"There's one line that ain't there and that's, 'It ain't going to rain no more,' said Jack Gillespie. I heard it all afternoon from those youngsters, and I don't want to hear it again. But they showed us an example in good spirits."

"We can't grouse when you think of how those children were disappointed," observed Wells Fraser.

"We're not grousing, Wells," the President asserted. "We're taking our medicine. The people's with us. We're getting more than our share of the bumps, but are we whining, Lillico?"

"Not a whine," responded R. T. "What's the use?"

"But we're jinxed just the same, Mr. President," asserted Sam Oke.

"Well, who's the jinx?" Mr. Denne asked. "Aren't we all good 'drys?' I don't think there's a real wet on this Board. Some may be leaning a little to the Moderation League, but I'm not mentioning any names. If we had A. B. Cunningham and H. B. Cowan on the Board we'd look like a quorum of the driest prohibitionists in the Province. Am I right, Steinkrauss?"

But William withheld endorsement.

"And didn't we have the Kilties out to chase the jinx? They claimed it never rained where they played. We were trying to make it safe. We've got three days ahead of us, and we ought to get a couple of good days out of it. If we don't, Dunsford will be after us with that note."—Taken from the unofficial minutes of the meeting.

COMMUNITY HOUSE LASSWADE PROJECT

Proposed By Rev. C. A. G. Spence For Winter.

APSLEY, Sept. 9.— One of the old-time corn roasts was held on Thursday evening at Jack Kilborne's house on the Burleigh road, Miss Lulu Knox being the hostess, and a very enjoyable time was spent by the young people, a large number of whom attended the function. It would hardly be fair to say how many dozens of corn cobs were consumed by the guests. After supper a very pleasant two hours was spent in dancing.

The first pie social of the season was held at Lasswade on Friday evening, the old homestead of the late Andy Wilson being utilized for the occasion. A prize was given for the best pie and the judges, Messrs. Dan Whitmore and Malcolm Hastings, had a difficult task in deciding who deserved the award, but finally declared the pie made by Ellen Steen to be the best. After an exhibition of moving pictures, the pies were sold by auction, and another prize was given to the owner of the pie that brought the highest price. This fell to Mrs. McKee.

The Rev. C. Spence in an address proposed the opening of a community social club for the winter to provide recreation for the young people and suggested the renting of a house in which the social was held, and which was very well adapted for the purpose. A meeting to decide on the matter, which would be a great boon to the young people of Lasswade, who have never had anything of this kind, was arranged to be held next week. Mr. Hastings, a visitor from Hamilton, in a brief speech, warmly endorsed the idea, and promised to send magazines, etc., on his return home, if the project materialized. He spoke of the many benefits of a movement of this kind and strongly advised the young men, a large number of whom were present, to get together and make it a success. The proceeds of the evening amounted to twenty dollars.

The community choral society of Apsley will be started again next month by Mr. Spence. The society will have a valuable acquisition in the Rev. Mr. Ogden, the new Methodist minister, who has promised to join, and who possesses a fine bass voice. At an entertainment in the parish room on Saturday evening he sang 'Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," which was very much enjoyed.

JUDGE EVADED

felt that we should make no analysis of the case, but accept whatever the future had in store for us. Nothing, you know, will bring Bobby back to us."

"We are satisfied ——" thus chorused Jacob Loeb, uncle of Dickie and Foreman Leopold, brother of 'Babe.'

"These two can go down there and try to do some good in the years that still remain to them," who constantly has been at Dickie's side since his confession of the killing of Robert Franks.

"There is plenty of opportunity for men of their education to work for the good of the unfortunate men who will be their companions, and I hope friends, from now on."

Preparing for It.

All during their weeks in the county jail the two boys have been preparing themselves for prison life. They have read all the books they could lay their hands on, in which the trying problem of adjustment to prison is discussed. They have talked of prison life with jail companions, who knew what Joliet is like. They have looked forward with real eagerness to the adventure.

Both have it in mind to write after reaching the penitentiary. Leopold plans an elaborate story of his life, with an exposition of his philosophy and an explanation of the murder. Loeb has talked of something similar.

Comfortable Cells.

Well educated as they are, they hope to get pleasant prison work eventually. The new and more comfortable cell house at Lockport is not out of the reach of life termers. Neither is the prison farm. Every prison offers educated men berths as teachers, librarians, clerks and so forth. The murderers don't expect to do hard labor very long.

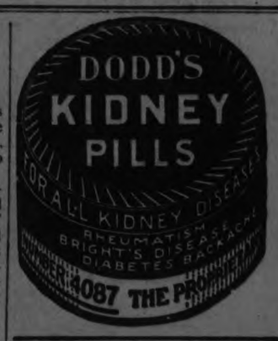
In jail, Loeb and Leopold have made friends quickly and adjusted themselves well. From the first they have entered genially into all the jail sports. The other men seem to like them.

Battle with Crowd.

A battalion of mounted police, bailiffs and armed deputies were battling against a crowd of 1000 men and women around the criminal courts building as early as seven o'clock this morning.

The caracoling steeds of the mounted police were weaving through the throng, flanked by armed deputies on foot, trying desperately to clear the streets about the building for the distance of a whole block.

The police were on the alert for cranks and other suspicious characters that might be mingling in the crowd with a view to doing violence to any of the pricipals in the case.



WEDDING BELLS.

SODEN—SISSON.

The marriage of Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Sisson of Bethany, to Laurence Elder Soden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Soden, of Peterborough, took place in St. Paul's Church, Bethany, on Tuesday, September 9th, the Rev. G. E. Fierheller officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister Miss Dorothy Sisson, while the groom was supported by Dr. J. C. Green of Peterborough. During the signing of the register Miss Dorothy Engle of Peterborough sang "O Promise Me."

Mr. and Mrs. Soden left on a trip to Montreal and New York. On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

EAGLE'S NEST STILL WIRES.

ELKO, Nev., Sept. 11.—(Associated Press).—An eagle's nest abridging two transcontinental telephone wires was found recently by "trouble men" of the Bell Telephone Company to have been the cause for the lines not working across the desert stretch, 70 miles east of here. The nest contained sagebrush, survey stakes and numerous metallic substances, including automobile parts apparently lost from the machines of tourists. The pieces of metal caused a short circuit.

SKUNK FUR.

Skunk fur is very much in demand for collars and cuffs on winter coats. It is dyed particularly well this season.

HERE'S A NEW ONE.

Politics in Canada have taken some queer twists and turns in recent years, and not the least whimscial development is the experiment that is being made in Saskatchewan where the Provincial Progressive Association has made its appearance.

The slogan of the new organization is "party government is detrimental to the people"—yet the association is led by Harris Turner, who hitherto has been one of the few Conservative members of the Legislative.

It is surely a strange banner under which the Conservative leader is marching just now and it will be interesting to know how many supporters he succeeds in enlisting in his fight against the Liberals and Farmers, or how his organization can avoid being a "party" if at the next election it succeeds in securing the return of a number of its candidates.

The war cry of the new group, however, should furnish debating societies with a fascinating topic—Resolved, that party government is detrimental to the people."

Plenty of food there for an evening's controversy, and the Examiner passes the idea on to the U. F. O. Debating League.

THE CHICAGO VERDICT.

If two Canadian youths had pleaded guilty to the murder of a boy whom they slew merely to "get a thrill" the presiding judge would have had no other alternative than to sentence them to death by hanging, and under the circumstances it would have been of little avail to appeal for executive clemency.

The method of administering justice in the United States, however, differs from the Canadian system, and the counsel for the Chicago slayers by having his clients plead guilty has succeeded, because they are minors, in saving them from the gallows.

It is not for Canadians to quarrel with our neighbors' laws and the manner in which they are carried out—and yet most people on this side of the line are doubtless amazed that such a particularly abrocious, deliberate and cold-blooded murder should not have been followed by a death sentence for those who have callously admitted their guilt.

They will agree with Robert E. Crowe, the State's Attorney who conducted the prosecution, that "the death penalty is the only penalty feared by murderers."

It has been an amazing case, its details outdoing the most sensational efforts of the fiction-writers who specialize in stories of crime—and its concluding chapter is as difficult for Canadians to understand as its opening features were to realize.

THE LAST TWO DAYS.

The fact that the weather conditions have not dealt very kindly with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in its opening stages should be regarded as a challenge to the citizens generally to stand loyally behind the Exhibition for the balance of the week.

The expenses in connection with the programme have been unusually heavy, the prize list represents a bigger drain upon the treasury and plant expansion during the summer has been extensive.

It is imperative then that the attendance should be as large as possible, and it is the duty of the city and district to see to it that on Friday and Saturday record crowd spass through the gates of the big fair.

Tomorrow is set down as Citizens' Day, while Saturday is named in honour of the farmers, without whose co-operation the Exhibition could not exist.

The finest programmes of the Exhibition have been prepared for the two last days, and with favourable weather the expectations of the directors that the growth in the size and attractions of the Exhibition will b ematched by a corresponding growth in the attendance figures, should be completely realized.

Every fall fair in Ontario hopes to follow the lead of the Canadian National Exhibition and establish a new record in attendance.

The people of this district should make sure that the Peterborough Industrial is included in the list of exhibitions that have succeeded in their expectations.

It's your Exhibition—you can make it a record-breaker.

GERMANY SHOULD BE FRANK.

If the report is correct that Germany will demand certain concessions before entering the League of Nations, then it is well that Germany should consider very seriously the nature of her demands and the spirit in which she advances them, says the London Advertiser.

Chancellor Stresemann's official organ says—and it doubtless reflects the attitude of the Chancellor—that Germany must not be subjected to humiliation; that she must not be regarded as the nation responsible for the war.

It would be well for Germany if she left these matters alone. She has an opportunity to enter the League of Nations on the same basis as the nations now holding memberships. The league is not a debating society for discussing how the last war started; it is an organization for the prevention of future wars.

The league has proved its ability to deal justly and generously with nations opposed to the Allies in the war. It has dealt with Austria, an ally of Germany, and its dealings have been those of helpful consideration, wise policy, with the result that Austria is in better shape today than Germany.

If Germany is holding back from motives that smack of her old school of diplomatic stupidity, she should revise her standards.

Premier MacDonald, in his invitation to Germany to take a seat at Geneva, did not make any humiliating stipulations. He extended a plain, cordial welcome, the meaning of which could not be turned, twisted or misinterpreted.

Germany would best serve her own interests by an equally frank acceptance of the invitation. If her advisers imagine they can gain anything by seeking to carry some of the Berlin armorplate to Geneva they have entirely missed the spirit of the League of Nations.

DRAFTING THE BALLOT.

The Ontario Government in calling into consultation representatives of both the Prohibition forces and the Moderation League to help frame the ballot to be used in the O. T. A. plebiscite has chosen the course most likely to secure a proper expression of opinion from the people.

It is recognized that the form the ballot will take is of the most vital importance, and with the views of those representing both sides of the question to be taken into consideration it should be possible to arrive at a wording of the questions that will be satisfactory to both drys and wets.

Recent rumours have predicted that the ballot would contains but one question—"Are you in favour of the Ontario Temperance Act?"

A negative majority would, of course, leave it up to the Government to decide what kind of a liquor policy should be substituted for the Ontario Temperance Act.

There are many people who declare that the Government should assume that responsibility—yet when a plebiscite is to be taken it would seem reasonable to take advantage of the opportunity to secure the views of the people on three or four of the most likely alternatives to the present system.

Friday's conference, when both sides will have an opportunity to state their views, should be of material assistance to the Government in arriving at a final conclusion as to the form of the ballot.

It is hoped that there will be a definite announcement soon after the representatives of the opposition forces have had their say.

THE RAILWAY OUTLOOK.

The official railway statement for the month of June, and also for the six months' period ended June, affords interesting and timely information. The gross revenue of all lines, considered as a group, was lower than for the corresponding month of last year, the difference being as between $36,935,095 and $37,264,697. At the same time, operating expenses increased from $33,099,866 to $34,581,298. The final result, after making necessary deductions from net operating revenue, was to create a net operating income for the month of $1,926,974, as against $3,957,772 for June, 1923.

For the first half of the year, gross receipts showed a gain over 1923 of nearly $4,000,000, while operating expenses were larger by a little over $500,000. After bringing all factors into the account, operating income showed a total of $14,361,343, as compared with $12,585,091 for the corresponding period of 1923. On the whole, this must be regarded as encouraging; but only as far as it goes. In view of the shorter crop to be moved in the West this year, the second six months of the current year is not likely to yield as favorable results as were won last year.

Public interest naturally centres on the performance of the Canadian National, and there is also a general disposition to compare the results on that system with those achieved by the Canadian Pacific. A few facts from the official statement will therefore be opportune. For the first half of the year 1924, the Government system had a gross revenue of $114,862,558, as against $115,914,551 last year. There was thus a decrease of $1,051,993. On the other hand, operating expenses were cut from $114,323,194 to $112,233,128; so that there was a gain in net of $1,038,173. This must be regarded as exhibiting capable and resourceful management.

The Canadian Pacific had total receipts amounting to $83,337,823, or $4,732,201 more than last year. On the other hand, operating expenses increased by $2,976,711, with the final result that operating income was but $823,725 larger than in 1923. In comparison with the Canadian National, it is obvious that the corporate system made more drastic reductions in operating cost than did the other.

On going into details, in contrasting these two systems, one finds striking differences in the conditions. The Government road had in June 20,575 miles in operation, as against 13,658 by the Canadian Pacific. The former had a pay-roll of $11,258,779, and the latter of $7,607,464. The Canadian National had an operating revenue of $27.67 per mile of line, and the Canadian Pacific $36.86. In operating expenses they were close together, the public group having $29.25 per mile and the corporate system $20.85. One had freight earnings of $4.85 per train mile, and the other $5.35. In those facts is to be found the difference between operating a comparatively new road and one which has been long established in a more productive territory.

There are most gratifying proofs of high efficiency in operating the Canadian National. It had an average trainload in June of 558.3 tons, as against 518.0 by the Canadian Pacific. The Government line also had an average carload of 24.2, which must be compared with 23.3 by the corporate road. The Canadian National bettered its trainload by 89.8 tons over June of last year, as contrasted with a gain of 32.0 tons by the Canadian Pacific. It is bare justice to the management of Sir Henry Thornton to present facts of this nature. They have in them the potentiality which goes far toward answering the criticism of uncompromising opponents of public ownership. The main obstacle to the complete and early balancing of accounts is the heavy annual loss on the old Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific, which everybody knows were overbuilt to a scandalous degree.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The co-operation of motorists in readily complying with the traffic and parking regulations at the Exhibition will be a valuable help in dealing with a difficult problem.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 11.—Receipts yesterday morning were 29 cars, 386 cattle, 111 calves, 343 hogs, and 462 sheep and lambs.

For a choice 1,200-pound butcher $7.25 was paid, but there were few other good ones available and one local butcher had to take a load of 24 at $5.90 a cwt. to fill in. These were not up to the finish the trade demands. Medium quality killers sold at $5.50 and all butchers' cattle were steady. Butchers' cows were freely taken at firm prices. Extra good cows brought $4.75 and $4.85, and fairly good ones $4.00 to $4.35 a cwt. More of the right kind of butchers' cattle are wanted and medium to common butchers are being taken in their place. Commission men expect to clear the market this week.

Calves are a little too high here to permit of Buffalo shipments, but if possible a couple of loads will be packed up for that purpose. Choice calves sold up to 11 1-2 cents a pound; good mediums, 9 1-2 cents, and common calves, 6 to 7 cents a pound. A few grassers were dealt in at 4 1-2 cents a pound.

Lambs were being sold somewhat firmer yesterday morning, the general asked price being 13 cents a pound. Most of the trades for the ewe lambs went through at that price, and one small lot brought 13 1-4 cents.

Sheep are firm, and Irving & Parsons sold a load of breeding ewes at 7 cents a pound.

Lambs are up 50 cents a cwt.

Packers buyers are sitting pat on their hog bid of $9.00 a cwt. f.o.b. and $10.00 off cars. The hog run has slowed up again, and purchases are not easily made at the quotations.

Judging the Corn Crop in the District—Improving the Roadway.

CAMPBELLFORD, September 11—James McLean, of Richmond Hill, arrived here last night to judge the corn crop in Percy and Seymour Townships in the competition carried on under the auspices of the Agricultural Societies. The oat crop was judged and the results announced about six weeks ago. Mr. McLean is vice-president of the Ontario Fairs Association, and is well known throughout the Province as a judge of heavy horses at the fall exhibitions.

The corn crop in Percy and Seymour is at least up to the average, and is now ready to be put into the silo. While the growth has been retarded by the recent cold weather, the crop has not been damaged to any serious extent by the light frosts.

Mr. McLean expects to complete his work in Percy to-day.

Change of Date.

Since their announcement in yesterday's Examiner of a euchre party to be held at the residence of Mrs. P. J. Kelly next Tuesday afternoon and evening, the ladies of St. Mary's Parish have learned that Tuesday evening is the date selected by the Northumberland Regimental Band for a corn roast. The ladies for that reason have dicided to change the date of their euchre party to next Monday evening, the programme to be the same as that announced yesterday.

Improving the Roadway.

The $1,600 which the town received this year for the Counties Council as its share of the road grant is being spent in widening the highway at the sharp turn on Sebastopol Street, a point that has always been considered dangerous. The soil that is required to make the fill is being taken from the steep hill on Portage Street. The Town Council is thus getting that latter work, which has been urged by the residents for years, performed without any cost to the ratepayers and every person who drives a car out the Hastings Road will welcome the improvement on Sebastopol Street.

The New Bridge.

"Strong enough to carry a freight train," is the general opinion of the capacity of the new bridge when the repair work now in progress is completed. All the old cement flooring, with the exception of a few yards, has been removed, a slow and laborious process. The cross-beams of steel and the stringers have been laid as far as the floor-way has been cleared away. These beams and stringers have at least three times the strength of the ones they replace. In addition, instead of three stringers, the bridge, when finished, will have five.

Stringers of steel have also been laid for the foundation of the side-walk on the south side, instead of the wooden ones that have been taken out. The old plank walks will be replaced by cement, and when the superstructure is painted, Campbellford will have a bridge creditable in appearance and one likely to last longer than its three predecessors.

Prize-List Issued.

The prize list for the Campbellford Fair, which will be held on the 25th and 26th inst., has just been issued by Secretary J. Nelson Stone. The society this year offers over $2,000 in prizes, an increase of $400 on the 1923 awards.

Merchants and others have been generous in donating special prizes and this has enabled the directors to add a number of novel features to the programme.

The $5 cash prize donated by The Peterboro Examiner has been set aside by the directors for two prizes for babies under one year old, $3 to the winner of the first, and $2 to the second. Last year The Examiner $5 special was devoted to the same purpose, and the feature was a popular one as was shown by the large number of entries. Some member of the medical profession will be selected for the delicate position of judge, and the infants will be exhibited in the women's rest room.

John L. Hay is no auto speed fiend although he drives a car. Mr. Hay offers $5, $3 as the first and $2 as the second prize, for the 4-cylinder cars that are driven at the slowest rate around the half-mile track in high gear.

The boys will have a chance to display their horsemanship, and special prizes will be awarded to lads who show foals on the halter and for the best riders under 16 years.

As usual, Director W. J. Abernethy has secured a large number of specials for the poultry department, and the makers of cheese have not been overlooked.

Personal.

Mrs. H. Labrash, accompanied by her two children, spent Sunday at Dartford, visiting her mother, Mrs. Wilson.

James Blute, manager of the Windsor hotel, held the lucky number and won the electric lamp, at the Regent Theatre last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Orin Parkin of Lindsay and Mr. and Mrs. Skuce of Reaboro, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Stillman, Rear street.

Miss Ethel Fiske of Grafton, is spending a week or two with Mrs. C. A. Wilson, Bridge street. She motored to Campbellford with Mr. Gerald Wilson, who had been to Toronto for his holidays.

Mr. James Jones of Meyersburg, has purchased the house on Canrobert street lately owned by Mrs. Seaborn and his family and he will move in in a few days.

Mr. J. E. Adams and Mr. Allan Cameron of Peterboro, were in Campbellford on Tuesday, on business.

Miss St. John of Uxbridge, has accepted a position as milliner in Miss K. Oulton's millinery store.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Brown intend moving from their home in Toronto to Campbellford, as soon as they can find a suitable place.

NEWS FROM MADOC.

Women Interested In Prohibition Held a Meeting—Harvest Festival Service.

MADOC, Sept. 11.—A meeting of women interested in the prohibition cause was held in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening. Mrs. A. H. Foster led in devotional exercise, and then Mrs. Bailey asked that a chairman be appointed. Mrs. W. Cross was made chairman and Mrs. Alexander secretary, pro tem.

It was decided to organize fully so as to be ready when the question to be asked at the coming plebiscite should be made public. The following were elected as officers:

President—Mrs. W. Cross.
Vice-Pres. for west district—Mrs. G. Maybee.
Vice-Pres. for east district—Mrs. E. West.
Secretary—Mrs. Jenkins.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. P. J. Alexander.

A committee composed of members of the different churches was formed, and also a committee for the revision of the voters' list.

It was decided to hold an open meting for ladies on Monday, Sept. 22nd, in the Town Hall, to discuss the Ontario Temperance Act. All women in Madoc and the surrounding district are urgently requested to attend this meeting.

The ladies hope to secure the services of special speakers for the meetings to be held later.

Harvest Service.

The Anglican church at Bannockburn held the annual Harvest Thanksgiving services on Sunday evening last. A large congregation attended, including visitors from Madoc and other places. Archdeacon Beamish of St. Thomas' church, Belleville, was the special preacher for the occasion. The service was fully choral. Mr. James Aylsworth, of Madoc, rendered a very fine cornet solo.

Miss Clark of Winnipeg, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Jewell.

Rev. Mr. Strother left yesterday for a short visit with friends in Creemore, a former parish. On Sunday next Mr. Strother will take the services in Woodbrige, while Rev. Mr. Patterson, rector in that town, will conduct the Harvest Festival services in St. John's church here. Mr. Patterson is a brother of Mrs. Strother, and will be at the rectory for a few days.

Madoc, like other places, has shivered for the last few days. Some are shivering merely because they are cold; others because they are forced to make vast inroads on the precious store of fuel that was thought sufficient for the whole fall, but the farmers are shivering more than all; shivering with apprehension of the impending danger to their crops. Many have not nearly all their grain in, and so much wet weather is causing the grain to sprout in the stooks. There has been considerable frost ,but no very great danger has been reported as yet. It is to be hoped that Old Sol will repent and show his glowing face soon to dispel the growing fears that are beginning to envelope even the most optimistic.

WOODWARD RESIGNS.

Headed Poll in Last Election, Now Resigns Post.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Charles Woodward, who headed the poll in the last election has resigned his seat in the legislature, he announced yesterday. He made no explanation beyond saying that resignation was in the hands of Premier John Oliver, and that he was acting on his own initiative and that there was no compact with Brigadier-General V. W. Odlum and Christopher McCrae, two of his fellow-Liberal members for Vancouver to take similar action. Three members have been protesting against the proposal of the government to sell 170 acres of timber land at Capilano, contending that sale would endanger Vancouver's water supply.

GIANT BRITISH AIR BATTLESHIP, MOST POWERFUL ONE-ENGINE CRAFT, ATTRACTS WORLD EXPERTS

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Aeronautic experts from the four corners of the world have been gathering under the giant wing of England's new "mystery plane," latest wonder of the air.

The marvel which brings wrinkles to the brows of the interested visitors is that this aerial behemoth can work its wonders with a single engine.

It is England's first aerial battleship, the most powerful single-engine craft, and surrounding it was much mystery until it made a recent trial flight at the Brough Aerodrome near Hull. It flew perfectly.

It is driven by a 100-horsepower Napier engine and is capable of travelling at 120 miles an hour for more than 1000 miles without having to replenish fuel.

Its gross weight is more than nine tons and it measures 88 feet across the wings. It is 54 feet long and 19 feet high. A crowd of men can shelter themselves comfortably under its lower wing, as the above picture shows.

When equipped for action it can carry three tons of bombs or torpedoes, and a crew of three men.

And yet the wings can be so collapsed that it can be housed in the smallest possible space.

COLBORNE DROPPED GAME TO BRIGHTON

Both Colborne and Hastings, League Leaders, Lose at Home.

BRIGHTON, Sept. 11.—The unusual situation of both leading teams losing on their own grounds prevailed to-day in the Northumberland League. Orland won in Colborne 13-10 and Brighton won in Hastings 8-5. Campbellford has dropped out and defaulted games to Hastings, Orland, Brighton and Roseneath. Roseneath has returned the compliment by defaulting to Campbellford the game scheduled for Saturday. The correct standing now is:

Brighton Won in Hastings.

BRIGHTON, Sept. 10.— The Brighton team surprised themselves and everyone else when they went to Hastings to-day and won 8-5. The weather was suitable for almost anything but baseball, a light rain falling during the early innings and the cold numbing the players' fingers. But under the circumstances the team played good ball.

Stevenson registered no less than twelve strikeouts, but yielded ten hits and walked six. Shannon only struck out six and walked three, but he kept Hastings' eight hits well scattered. Herringtotn pitched the last innings for the home team and fanned three.

The lead alternated during the early innings and the score was tied, 4-4, at the end of the fifth. In the sixth Frise, the Brighton catcher, won the game by hitting a three bagger wtih the bases full. Brown had three hits, E. Walt and G. Walt two. For Hastings Stevenson and Lambert got two hits each.

Herrington starred in the field with a couple of catches of foul flies and the Walt brothers made nice catches in the outfield for Brighton. Both catchers, Scriver and Frise, worked well behind the plate. Thorne, Brown and D. Lemoine all played their bases well.

Umpires Sprung and Clapper handled the game very efficiently.

RUM-RUNNER IS AWAY OVERDUE

Vanished From New York With $120,000 in Cash on "Business Deal."

CRAFT FOUNDERED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Where is George S. Muller, called "Doc" by his intimate friends, former part owner of the speedy rum-runner Rex, and the $120,000 in cash he took away with him from his home, No. 14 Eighth street, West New York, in June 23 last?

The police of New York City were asked yesterday to broadcast an alarm in he hope of finding out whether he is dead or alive.

The last heard of him was when he started for Sheepshead Bay in an automibile, this large sum of money in bills with him. He sent the car back to his home with the word that he would be gone several days. He has not been heard from since. Muller was thirty-five years old.

Hi-Jackers Sought

Lieutenant Otis of the West New York Police Department, said:

"I learned that the money he took away with him was $120,000 and not $90,000 as first reported. A possible solution is that the hi-jackers killed him, took his money and dropped the body in the sea.

"You will recall some of the adventures of the Rex of which Muller formerly was part owner. One occasion she was captured and the search showed she had a great number of pistols and handcuffs aboard her. Later she was released and then she was found abandoned off Sheeps head Bay, her hold filled with men. Not a member of the crew was aboard. On the shore was the body of a man stark naked. But it was not Muller's body. It was that of a man named Kelly."

Interceded for Ship

Here is the story of Muller and the Rex as given by Peter Sullivan, one of the heads of the United States Customs Prohibition Unit. Sullivan said:

"It was on June 19 when Muller came to this office to intercede for the Rex, following its capture with the handcuffs and pistols. He talked with me and said he was part owner of the yacht. Then he went out in the hall and talked with someone. He gave his name as George S. Muller and his home as West New York."

From the information given the New York police yesterday by the West New York poltce, Muller disappeared with the fortune in cash just four days after this interview with Sullivan, June 23.

The Rex had been released, as there was no prohibition violation in her master carrying pistols and hand cuffs. She was fast and modern in equipment.

On July 29, a few days over a month since Muller went away in his fast car from the New Jersey town, the Rex was found ashore off Sheepshead Bay. She was rum-laden, but not a soul was aboard.

Sent His Auto Back

It was learned that when he left home he wore old clothes, no collar or tie. He sent the car back from Sheepshead Bay by a friend, Daniel O'Connell.

All that he told his wife was that he was off on a business deal.

The description of the missing man sent out by the New York police yesterday is as follows:

"Thirty-five years old, poorly dressed, weighs 145 pounds. Wore brown suit and straw hat when last seen."

Says He Had $80,000

Mrs. Muller consented to give some details of the disappearance of her husband. She said:

"I have never been distrubed about his absence until now that it goes into three months. The days he left he gave me a check for 2.00 for household expenses, which I cashed."

She said she believed he carried $80,000 with him in bills ranging from $100 to $1,000.

THE PEKING CABINET.

Merchants Request Bankers Not To Advance Any Money to Government.

LONDON, Sept. 11. — (Canadian Press).— Peking Cabinet has been taken over by military council, says a despatch from Pekin to the Daily Mail. The despatch adds that great activity prevails in government departments and that the Finance Minister is trying to raise funds for military purposes. Shanghai merchants have telegraphed Peking bankers not to advance any money to government saying this would serve only to lengthen the war.

CHICKS LAY EGGS.

Stratford Chickens Lay When Only 5 Months Old.

STRATFORD, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Philip Schmidt of Dufferin street, has in his possession two black minorca pullets that have matured at unusually tender age. Young chickens, though only five months old, have already started laying. Mr. Schmidt says he has seldom heard of such chickens laying before six months of age.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

AUBURN NEGLECTED?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I will just take up a short space in your paper, but I have something to tell the people. Thirty years ago a friend of mine, John Turner by name, who resided in Auburn, left here and went to the States. For thirty years he never saw his home town. He has been back lately renewing old acquaintances and viewing old well known spots. The city has naturally changed a great deal during his absence and he passed several pleasant and complimentary remarks on the work of our city fathers. But one thing marred the beauty—one thing still rankled in his breast when he left the city this morning, and that was Auburn—the spot where he was born

"When I left here about 1894," he said, "Auburn was a pretty spot and boasted of good sidewalks. Now in 1924, thirty years advanced, where there is a piece of sidewalk you can hardly see it on account of weeds and sunflowers—and there are mud holes to dodge as well."

I wonder Mr. Editor what it will be like in another 30 years? Thanking you, I remain,

Yours truly,
E. VINETTE, Auburn.

WOMAN AND RELIGION.

Woman is essentially religious. She cannot break away from the embrace of God. An irreligious woman appears a monstrosity. She cannot be an unbeliever or an atheist. She must trust. She must lean on another stronger than herself. She must worship. The relation between religion and conduct may not always be clear to her. She may have stumbled and fallen, but she must pray. She may have singed her wings, but she must hover round the light. Rob her of religion and you take away her womanhood.

Making wash day pleasant—

Just use Rinso where you used to use bar soap—for soaking, boiling, or in your washing machine.

THE hardest part of wash-day, rubbing, rubbing, rubbing, has given way to the new method of soaking the clothes clean with Rinso.

This wonderful new soap gently loosens the dirt and a thorough rinsing leaves things white and glistening as you never could get them before.

Only spots where the dirt is ground-in, such as neck bands, cuff edges, and the like need a light rubbing, and a little dry Rinso rubbed on these spots quickly makes the dirt disappear.

Rinso is sold by all grocers and department stores

"EXPERTS."

When England controlled food during the war, says Beveridge, the economist, she learned it was better not to put "experts" in charge of various jobs. An expert is all right in his place, Beveridge admits, but in a difficult situation what's needed is some one with common sense.

An expert knows too much about his subject, often — is handicapped by precedent. Why is it called "common sense"? It's not common, by any means.

Some one has defined an "expert" as a man who lives 100 miles away and charges $100 a day.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter. By repeated insults Peter finally provokes Oliver to threaten murder, and when Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in an unwitnessed quarrel over a woman, suspicion falls on Oliver. Even Rosamund believes him guilty and asks him to explain the trail of blood found leading from the body to the doorway. Feeling bound to protect Lionel, Oliver can do nothing but protest his innocence. But he goes to the justices and asks them to draw up a document attesting to the fact that he bears on his body no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, injured in the encounter, was not his. This document he takes away to hold in readiness until needed.

A few weeks later Lionel learns from Jasper Leigh, a pirate sea captain whose ship is lying in the harbor, that the queen has been petitioned to command the justices to bring Oliver to trial—which they had previously refused to do. Oliver, meantime, goes to Rosamund to lay the proof of his innocence before her, but she refuses to see him. Lionel tells him of the petition to the queen. Half-crazed with fear that should Oliver clear himself his own implication will follow, he formulates a scheme to get Oliver out of the way, and goes to Jasper Leigh for assistance. Leigh suggests abducting Oliver and carrying him overseas to toil on the plantations.

He lowered his voice and spoke with some slight hesitation, fearing that he proposed perhaps more than his prospective employer might desire.

"He might return," was the answer that dispelled all doubts on that score.

"Ah!" said the skipper. "What o' the Barbary rovers, then? They lack slaves and are ever ready to trade, though they be niggardly payers. I never heard of none that returned once they had him safe aboard their galleys. I ha' done some trading with them, bartering human freights for spices and eastern carpets and the like."

Master Lionel breathed hard.

"'Tis a horrible fate is't not?"

The captain stroked his beard.

"Yet 'tis the only really safe bestowal, and when all is said 'tis not so horrible as hanging, and certainly less dishonoring to a man's kin. Ye'd be serving Sir Oliver and yourself."

"'Tis so, 'tis so," cried Master Lionel almost fiercely. "And the price?"

The seaman shifted on his short, sturdy legs, and his face grew pensive.

"A hundred pound?" he suggested tentatively.

"Done with you for a hundred pounds," was the prompt answer—"He took his head in his hands and groaned aloud."

so prompt that Captain Leigh realized he had driven a fool's bargain which it was incumbent upon him to amend.

"That is, a hundred pounds for myself," he corrected slowly. "Then there be the crew to reckon for—to keep their counsel and lend a hand; 'twill mean another hundred at the least."

Master Lionel considered a moment.

"It is more than I can lay my hands on at short notice. But, look you, you shall have a hundred and fifty pounds in coin and the balance in jewels. You shall not be the loser in that, I promise you. And when you come again and bring me word that all is done as you now undertake there shall be the like again."

Upon that the bargain was settled. And when Lionel came to talk of ways and means he found that he had allied himself to a man who understood his business thoroughly. All the assistance that the skipper asked was that Master Lionel should lure his gentleman to some concerted spot conveniently near the water side. There Leigh would have a boat and his men in readiness, and the rest might very safely be left to him.

In a flash Lionel bethought him of the proper place for this. He swung round and pointed across the water to Trefusis Point and the gray pile of Godolphin Court all bathed in sunshine now.

"Trust me," said Master Leigh. "And the money?"

"When you have him safely aboard come to me at Penarrow," he replied, which showed that after all he did not trust Master Leigh any further than he was compelled.

On that they parted. Lionel mounted and rose away, whilst Master Leigh made a trumpet of his hands and hallooed to the ship.

As he stood waiting for the boat that came off to fetch him a smile slowly overspread the adventurer's rugged face.

CHAPTER VII
TREPANNED

Master Lionel was absent most of the following day from Penarrow upon a pretext of making certain purchases in Truro. It would be half past seven when he returned, and as he entered he met Sir Oliver in the hall.

"I have a message for you from Godolphin Court," he announced, and saw his brother stiffen and his face change color. "A boy met me at the gates and bade me tell you that Mistress Rosamund desires a word with you forthwith."

Sir Oliver's heart almost stopped, then went off at a gallop.

"Be thou blessed for these good tidings!" he answered on a note of high excitement. "I go at once."

And on the instant he departed. Such was his eagerness, indeed, that under the hot spur of it he did not even stay to fetch that parchment which was to be his unanswerable advocate.

Master Lionel said no word as his brother swept out. He shrank back a little into the shadows. He was white to the lips and felt as he would stifle. As the door closed he moved suddenly. He sprang to follow Sir Oliver. Conscience cried out to him that he could not do this thing. But Fear was swift to answer that outcry. Unless he permitted what was planned to take its course his life might pay the penalty.

He turned and lurched into the dining room upon legs that trembled.

He found the table set for supper as on that other night when he had staggered in with a wound in his side to be cared for and sheltered by Sir Oliver. He did not approach the table; he crossed to the fire and sat down there holding out his hands to the blaze. He was very cold and could not still his trembling. His very teeth chattered.

Nicholas came in to know if he would sup. He answered unsteadily that despite the lateness of the hour he would await Sir Oliver's return.

"Is Sir Oliver abroad?" quoth the servant in surprise.

"He went out a moment since, I know not whither," replied Lionel. "But since he has not supped he is not like to be long absent."

Upon that he dismissed the servant and sat huddled there, a prey to mental tortures which were not to be repressed. His mind would turn upon naught but the steadfast, unwavering affection of which Sir Oliver ever had been prodigal toward him. In this very matter of Peter Godolphin's death, what sacrifices had not Sir Oliver made to shield him? From so much love and self-sacrifice in the past he inclined to argue now that not even in extreme peril would his brother betray him. And then that bad streak of fear which made a villain of him reminded him that to argue thus was to argue upon supposition that it would be perilous to trust such an assumption; that if, after all, Sir Oliver should fail him in the crucial test, then was he lost indeed.

Then came doubt, and, finally, assurance of another sort, assurance that this was not so and that he knew it; assurance that he lied to himself, seeking to condone the thing he did. He took his head in his hands and groaned aloud. He was a villain, a black hearted, soulless villain! He reviled himself again. There came a moment when he rose shuddering, resolved even in this eleventh hour to go after his brother and save him from the doom that awaited him out yonder in the night.

But again that resolve was withered by the breath of selfish fear. Limply he resumed his seat, and his thoughts took a fresh turn.

The clock over the stables chimed the hour of eight. Master Lionel shrank back in his chair at the sound. The thing would be doing even now. In his mind he saw it all—saw his brother come running in his eagerness to the gates of Godolphin Court, and then dark forms resolve themselves from the surrounding darkness and fall silently upon him.

Another half hour sat he there. The thing was done by now, and this assurance seemed to quiet him a little.

Then came Nicholas again to babble of some possible mischance having overtaken his master.

"What mischance should have overtaken him?" growled Lionel, as if in scorn of the idea.

"I pray none indeed," replied the servant. "But Sir Oliver lacks not for enemies nowadays, and 'tis scarce safe for he to be abroad after dark."

Master Lionel dismissed the notion contemptuously. For pretence's sake he announced that he would wait no longer, whereupon Nicholas brought in his supper and left him again to go and linger about the door, looking out into the night and listening for his master's return. He had paid a visit to the stables and knew that Sir Oliver had gone forth afoot.

Meanwhile Master Lionel must make pretence of eating, though actual eating must have choked him. He smeared his platter, broke food and avidly drank a bumper of claret. Then he, too, feigned a growing anxiety and went to join Nicholas. Thus they spent the weary night, watching for the return of one whom Master Lionel knew would return no more.

At dawn they roused the servants and sent them to scour the countryside and put the news of Sir Oliver's disappearance abroad. Lionel himself rode out to Arwenack to ask Sir John Killigrew bluntly if he knew aught of this matter.

Sir John showed a startled face, but swore readily enough that he had not so much as seen Sir Oliver for days. He was gentle with Lionel, whom he liked, as everybody liked him. The lad was so mild and kindly in his ways; so vastly different from his arrogant, overbearing brother, that his virtue shone the more brightly by that contrast.

"I confess it is natural you should come to me," said Sir John. "But, my word on it, I have no knowledge of him. It is not my way to beset my enemies in the dark."

"Indeed, indeed, Sir John, I had not supposed it in my heart," replied the afflicted Lionel. "Forgive me that I should have come to ask a question so unworthy. Set it down to my distracted state. I have not been the same man these months, I think since that happening in Godolphin Park. It is a fearsome burden to know your own brother—though I thank God he is no more than my half-brother—guilty of so foul a deed."

"How?" cried Killigrew, amazed. "You say that? You believed it yourself?"

Master Lionel looked confused, a look which Sir John entirely misunderstood and interpreted entirely in the young man's favor. And it was thus and in that moment that was sown the generous seed of the friendship that was to spring up between these two men, its roots fertilized by Sir John's pity that one so gentle-natured, so honest, and so upright should be cursed with so villainous a brother.

"I see, I see, he said. And he sighed. "You know that we are daily expecting an order from the Queen to her justices to take the action which hitherto they have refused against your—against Sir Oliver."

He frowned thoughtfully.

"D'ye think Sir Oliver had news of this?"

At once Master Lionel saw the drift of what was in the other's mind.

"I know it," he replied. "Myself I bore it him. But why do you ask?"

"Does it not help us perhaps to understand and explain Sir Oliver's disappearance? God lack! Surely, knowing that, he were a fool to have tarried here, for he would hang beyond all doubt did he stay for the coming of her grace's messenger."

"My God!" said Lionel, staring. "You—you think he is fled then?"

Sir John shrugged.

"What else is to be thought?"

Lionel hung his head.

"What else, indeed?" said he, and took his leave like a man overwrought, as, indeed, he was. He had never considered that so obvious a conclusion must follow upon his work so fully to explain the happening and to set at rest any doubt concerning it.

He returned to Penarrow, and bluntly told Nicholas what Sir John suspected and what he feared must be the true reason of Sir Oliver's disappearance. The servant, however, was none so easy to convince.

"But do ee believe that he done it?" cried Nicholas. "Do ee believe it, Master Lionel?"

There was reproach amounting to horror in the servant's voice.

"God help me, what else can I believe now that he is fled?"

Nicholas sidled up to him with tightened lips. He set two gnarled fingers on the young man's arm.

"He'm not fled, Master Lionel," he announced with grim impressiveness. "He'm never a turntail. Sir Oliver he don't fear neither man nor devil, and if so be him had killed Master Godolphin, he'd never ha' denied it. Don't ee believe Sir John Killigrew. Sir John ever hated he."

But in all that countryside the servant was the only one to hold this view. If a doubt had lingered anywhere of Sir Oliver's guilt that doubt was now dispelled by this flight of his before the approach of the expected orders from the Queen.

Gives complete relief from perspiration annoyance

It is no longer necessary to endure the annoyance of excessive perspiration. Every woman can have complete freedom from the embarrassment and discomfort which it causes.

Extreme perspiration of one part of the body, such as the underarms, is due to local irregularities of the sweat glands. The underarm perspiration glands are very sensitive and easily stimulated to unusual activity by excitement, heat or nervousness. Clothing and the hollow of the underarm make normal evaporation impossible, so that in order to maintain scrupulous personal daintiness, corrective measures are necessary. Soap and water alone are not sufficient.

Odorono, an antiseptic toilet water, was formulated by a physician for the special purpose of correcting this condition harmlessly, without affecting the natural healthful perspiration of the rest of the body. It is a clear, rosy-coloured liquid, and comes to you in a smart little uniquely shaped bottle. It is delightfully easy to use, and quite harmless. You simply pat it on to the underarm, with a piece of soft cloth, or absorbent cotton, or with the tips of the fingers. One application does away with all perspiration odor and moisture for at least three days. Two or three applications a week will keep your underarms always dry and immaculate. For sale at all toilet counters—three sizes, 35c., 60c. and $1.00.

YOUNGER THAN WIFE'S CHILDREN.

They call themselves "the happiest couple in Nebraska"—despite a disparity of almost 40 years in their ages. Mrs. Lloyd Pauley of Omaha, who admits she is "past 60," had her hair bobbed and dyed a vivid red all for love of her 22-year-old husband. Pauley acquired by marriage six children, ranging in ages from 27 to 43, and eight grandchildren. He calls her "mumsey" and "sweetheart" and she calls him "dearest boy."

Later that day came Captain Leigh to Penarrow inquiring for Sir Oliver.

Nicholas brought word of his presence and his inquiry to Master Lionel, who bade him be admitted.

The thick-set little seaman rolled in on his bowed legs, and leered at his employer when they were alone.

"He's snug and safe aboard," he announced. "The thing were done as clean as peeling an apple, and as quiet."

"Why did you ask for him?" quoth Master Lionel.

"Why?" Jasper leered again. "My business was with him. There was some talk between us of him going a voyage with me. I've heard the gossip over at Smithick. This will fit in with it." He laid that finger of his to his nose. "Trust me to help a sound tale along. 'Twere a clumsy business to come here asking for you, sir. Ye'll know now how to account for my visit."

Lionel paid him the price agreed and dismissed him upon receiving the assurance that the Swallow would put to sea upon the next tide.

When it became known that Sir Oliver had been in treaty with Master Leigh for a passage overseas, and that it was but on that account that Master Leigh had tarried in that haven, even Nicholas began to doubt.

Gradually Lionel recovered his tranquility as the days flowed on. What was done was done, and, in any case, being now beyond recall, there was no profit in repining. He never knew how fortune aided him, as fortune will sometimes aid a villain. The royal poursuivants arrived some six days later, and Master Baine was the recipient of a curt summons to render himself to London, there to account for his breach of trust in having refused to perform his sworn duty. Had Sir Andrew Flack but survived the chill that had carried him off a month ago, Master Justice Baine would have made short work of the accusation lodged against him.

As it was, when he urged the positive knowledge he possessed, and told them how he made the examination to which Sir Oliver had voluntarily submitted, his single word carried not slightest conviction. Not for a moment was it supposed that this was aught but the subterfuge of one who had been lax in his duty and who sought to save himself from the consequences of that laxity. And the fact that he cited as his fellow-witness a gentleman now deceased but served to confirm his judges in this opinion. He was deposed from his office and subjected to a heavy fine, and there the matter ended, for the hue-and-cry that was afoot entirely failed to discover any trace of the missing Sir Oliver.

For Master Lionel a new existence set in from that day. Looked upon as one in danger of suffering for his brother's sins, the countryside determined to help him as far as possible to bear his burden. Great stress was laid upon the fact that after all he was no more than Sir Oliver's half-brother; some there were who would have carried their kindness to the lengths of suggesting that perhaps he was not even that, and that it was but natural that Ralph Tressilian's second wife should have repaid her husband in kind for his outrageous infidelities.

This movement of sympathy was led by Sir John Killigrew, and it spread in so rapid and marked a manner that very soon Master Lionel was almost persuaded that it was no more than he deserved, and he began to sun himself in the favor of a countryside that hitherto had shown little but hostility for men of the Tresillian blood.

CHAPTER VIII
THE SPANIARD

The Swallow, having passed through a gale in the Bay of Biscay—a gale which she weathered like the surprisingly steady old tub she was—rounded Cape Finisterre and so emerged from tempest into peace, from leaden skies and mountainous seas into a sunny azure calm. It was like a sudden transition from winter into spring, and she ran along now, close hauled to the soft easterly breeze, with a gentle list to port.

It had never been Master Leigh's intent to have got so far as this without coming to an understanding with his prisoner. But the wind had been stronger than his intentions, and he had been compelled to run before it and to head to southward until its fury should abate. Thus it fell out that the skipper was forced to wait until they stood along the coast o Portugal—but well out to sea, for the coast of Portugal was none too healthy just then to English seamen—before commanding Sir Oliver to be haled into his presence.

In the cramped quarters of the cabin in the poop of the little vessel sat her captain as a greasy table, over which a lamp was swinging faintly to the gentle heave of the ship. He was smoking a foul pipe, whose fumes hung heavily upon the air of that little chamber, and there was a bottle of Nantes at his elbow.

To him, sitting thus in state, was Sir Oliver introduced—his wrists still pinioned behind him. He was haggard and hollow-eyed, and he carried a week's growth of beard on his chin. Also his garments were still in disorder from the struggle he had made when taken, and from the fact that he had been compelled to lie in them ever since.

Since his height was such that it was impossible for him to stand upright in that low-ceilinged cabin, a stool was thrust forward for him by one of the ruffians of Leigh's crew who had haled him from his confinement beneath the hatchway.

He sat down quite listlessly, and stared vacantly at the skipper. Master Leigh was somewhat discomposed by his odd calm when he had looked for angry outbursts. He dismissed the two seamen who had fetched Sir Oliver, and when they had departed and closed the cabin door he addressed his captive.

"Sir Oliver," said he, stroking his red beard, "ye've been most foully abused."

The sunshine filtered through one of the horn windows and beat full upon Sir Oliver's expressionless face.

"It was not necessary, you knave, to bring me hither to tell me so much," he answered.

"Quite so," said Master Leigh. "But I have something more to add. Ye'll be thinking that I ha' done you a disservice. There ye wrong me. Through me you are brought to know true friends from secret enemies; henceforward ye'll know which to trust and which to mistrust."

Sir Oliver seemed to rouse himself a little from his passivity, stimulated despite himself by the impudence of this rogue. He stretched a leg and smiled sourly.

"You'll end by telling me that I am in your debt," said he.

"You'll end by saying so yourself," the captain assured him. "D'ye know what I was bidden to do with you?"

"Faith, I neither know nor care," was the surprising answer, wearily delivered. "If it is for my entertainment that you purpose to tell me, I beg you'll spare yourself the trouble."

It was not an answer that helped the captain. He puffed at his pipe a moment.

"I was bidden," said he presently, "to carry you to Barbary and sell you there into the service of the Moors. That I might serve you, I made believe to accept this task."

"God's death!" swore Sir Oliver. "You carry make-believe to an odd length."

"The weather has been against me. It were no intention o' mine to ha' come so far south with you. But we've been driven by the gale. That is overpast, and so that ye'll promise to bear no plaint against me, and to make good some of the loss I'll make by going out of my course, and missing a cargo that I wot of, I'll put about and fetch you home again within a week."

WINE MERCHANT SAYS TOBACCO SPOILS TASTE FOR CHOICE BRANDS

STRASBURG, Sept. 10.—(Associated Press).—Thirsty Americans who visit a famous old-fashioned wine restaurant in this city, which has a cellar that is known to connoisseurs all over Europe, are frequently surprised at not being able to obtain vintages which had been recommended to them by friends. The proprietor is an artist in blending food and wines and will not serve his choice wines to persons who order cocktails and begin smoking before their wines are served.

He insists that the cocktail and all other mixed drinks are a nuisance which should be confined to restaurants and bars which do not specialize in fine wines and will not waste his precious cellar on men and women who spoil their taste for delicate wine by mixing tobacco up with their dinner.

Ever buy a wooden nutmeg?

Being fond of nutmeg's spicy flavor and seeing an opportunity to stock up on them to advantage, Grandmother bought generously.

There was to be rice pudding for supper. Grandmother took the golden-brown beauty from the oven and prepared to give it its finishing touch—a sprinkling of nutmeg. Out came the grater and one of the new nutmegs. She scraped and looked puzzled. Scraped again, and looked closer. Sawdust!! The nutmegs were made of wood.

How far from such methods we have traveled in these days of advertised merchandise. The merchant of today signs his name to what he says about what he sells. He knows that when you come to buy you will expect the goods in his store to be what he has said. He knows that if he deceives you once, your trade is gone for ever.

Latest Scientific "Miracle"—Light Without Heat

How the Amazing Discovery of a French Savant May Solve the Fuel Problem of the Future, and "Reform" Surgical Operations

"COLD light," the dream of scientific men for generations, has been achieved at last.

The French Academy of Science announces the discovery of two processes by the famous electrician, Dussaud, each of which produces brilliant illumination without increase in temperature.

Every method of artificial illumination heretofore known is essentially a heat process. The sole object of a candle, lamp, electric bulb or arc, is to give light. But 92 per cent of all the energy goes off in heat, and only 8 per cent is transformed into light—a terrific waste.

The first of Professor Dussaud's discoveries is an electro-chemical process, "by which the thermic and luminous forms of energy are separated," a formula which may eventually save the world millions of tons of coal and fuel and electric power.

The second, of more immediate and spectacular interest, is the mechanical process illustrated in the large drawing on this page.

A wheel ten feet in diameter whirls continually on its axis, like the fly-wheel of an engine. On the rim of this wheel, at close intervals, are set enormous incandescent bulbs, each thirty thousand times more powerful than the ordinary electric light.

At the exact top of the wheel, there is an electric contact, which completes current at this point only. As each bulb is brought opposite this contact it is illuminated, it gives forth a tremendous jet of light, but is whirled on by the next bulb whirls along after it and its place.

The wheel turns so fast that to the eye the light is continuous. It almost as if the wheel were stationary, and that one big bulb at the top were giving all the light—but as a matter of fact the light comes alternately from each of the bulbs in succession as they whirl up to and touch and pass over the contact point.

The net result is a terrifically powerful flare of light in which heat is not really completely eliminated, but is reduced to a negligible minimum, which for practical purposes means the same thing.

People who do not experiment with ordinary electric lights have no conception of how much heat they normally give. They know that a common bulb burning for an hour or so makes the glass or metal shade around it quite hot to the touch, but they may not realize that if the bulb were wrapped in one fold of a blanket or enclosed in a wooden box, or even laid among rags, it would start a conflagration in a short time.

A bulb of the size and power used on this cold light wheel would normally produce as much heat as a stove, and if enclosed for purposes of concentration, it could produce bad burns and fire.

The most interesting immediate purpose to which this cold light wheel has been put is for "direct vision" surgical operations, to take the place of X-rays.

By holding the hand close against an ordinary electric light one notices that the flesh around the edges of the fingers becomes slightly transparent. One sees the red blood beneath the flesh and a faint outline of the bones.

Scientists have long known that if there were a sufficiently powerful light close behind a human body, properly concentrated and enclosed, it would make the body at least as transparent as it is with the X-ray. But the knowledge has been useless, for an enclosed light of the necessary power would inflict terrible burns.

The cold light machine has solved this difficulty. A specially constructed glass operating table is placed immediately above the box in which the big wheel is enclosed. Most of the wheel, of course, is beneath the level of the floor. Quite close to the body of the patient, is a funnel-like contrivance with a huge lens, so arranged that the powerful rays are concentrated directly upward, through the portion of the body on which it is desired to operate. This may be continued throughout a long major operation, taking from one to three hours.

The portion of the body directly in line with the light rays becomes translucent or transparent. The surgeon, with the naked eye, or with lightly smoked glasses, operates on a living body, in which he can see the bones, chief organs and even the biggest veins and arteries, outlined or in shadow, just as he would see them on an X-ray plate.

But there is this startling difference: In the X-ray plates, or in the fluoroscope, which is a sort of direct vision X-ray, the observer sees the picture in monotones of gray, black and white, like a photograph or a scene in the movies; in the case of the cold light machines, he sees it all in a vivid and almost terrifying red. The body is full of blood, and the light coming through it has the baleful glare of a red lantern.

Observers who have witnessed the experiments in Paris say that the effect is weird, with the body of the patient a luminous, transparent red, the vivid red lights staining the hands and face of the operating surgeon to crimson, and causing a great circle of red on the ceiling, broken by the moving black shadows of surgeon and nurse as they bend over the body of the patient.

Lurid, however, as the picture seems, the process is not dangerous and will be of tremendous use in certain branches of surgery. It is believed that it may be applied with particular value in bronchoscopy. This is used when a patient has swallowed or inhaled into the lungs some hard, foreign matter that would cause death if not removed. By the present method, which has been brought to marvelous efficiency, the object is first located on X-ray photographic plates, and then the surgeon goes after it by inserting a tube down the gullet or windpipe. He now depends entirely for visual guidance on spying down the tube, inside the end of which is a tiny, almost microscopic, electric light. With the cold light machine, the object to be removed would stand out as clearly as on an X-ray plate, and while the operator was looking down the tube, a second observer could watch and direct the progress of the probing by direct vision. The same would be true of probing for bullets, and for a great variety of other operations.

The other entirely different cold light process discovered by Professor Dussaud is too technical in detail for any but the highly trained scientific mind. It is, however, an apparently successful attempt to produce artificially a kind of light analogous to that with which nature has endowed the firefly and certain deep-sea fish.

Three years ago, Professor Walter N. Hess, of Cornell University, discovered the cold light produced by the fire-fly was a product of a substance which he called "cold fat." Some years previous, Professor Dahlgren, of Princeton, discovered in luminous fishes a similar substance which he called "luciferin"; but all efforts to duplicate the process or the substance artificially have thus far failed.

A Contact Plate at the Top of the Wheel Lights Only One Bulb at a Time for a Fraction of a Second. Although the Bulbs Threw a Continuous Light, No One Is in Contact Long Enough to Become Hot. The Cold Light Is So Powerful It Makes the Body Transparent.

DELORO READY FOR NEXT TILT IN O.B.A.A. RACE

Trent Valley Champs Eliminated Point Ann in Play-Off at Cobourg.

FINAL SCORE IS 9-5

Intermediate Teams Play Good Ball Under Miserable Conditions.

(By F. D. C.)

Bob Elliott's Deloro team, champions of the Trent Valley League eliminated Point Ann, the Bay of Quinte representatives from the O.B.A.A. intermediate race by beating the Cement crew 9 runs to 5 in the play off game at Cobourg yesterday. Point Ann had won the first game of the series at home, lost the return at Deloro and yesterday were dropped into the discard.

Deloro both outfielded and outhit the Goyer-Green-Maracle outfit in the final clash and at one stage led by 7 runs to 1 but the losers put up a game fight and the result was never certain until Deloro scored two runs in the eighth.

The game was played under miserable weather conditions. It was cold to start with and rain fell throughout the greater part of the struggle. The pitchers had to work with a wet ball and on a mound ankle deep in mud and under the circumstances both Leal for Deloro and Sonny Green for the losers made a creditable showing while the game was suprisingly good in view of the handicap under which the teams worked.

Point Ann scored a run in the first inning and led by 1-0 until Deloro scored two in the fourth to take the lead. Five runs in the fifth in which a homer with two on by "Hec" Boudreau, the hard-hitting Deloro right fielder played a big part, gave the Elliott crew a six run margin and although Point Ann carved four off the lead by registering twice in each of the next two frames the winners came back with a pair in the eighth to clinch their victory.

Leal on the rubber for Deloro allowed eight hits and fanned two men while his Indian rival was touched for nine safeties and retired three by the strike out route.

Some Costly Errors.

Leal's support was much better than that accorded Green. Bennett at second base for Point Ann had four costly errors and had to be derricked in the fifth inning while Bradshaw the first baseman was taken out of the game for a foolish play that cost a run.

There was plenty of good fielding in spite of the conditions. Tompkins in the outfield for Point Ann made a beautiful running catch. Maracle the third baseman was responsible for a neat double play starting with a one handed grab. Schultz the Deloro first baseman made two fine plays on hard hit balls and Leal, A. Quinn and Schultz pulled off a fast twin killing.

With one down in Point Ann's first Gaulin singled to right and went to third on Goyer's double to the same field. J. Maracle popped to A. Quinn. M. Green's single off Regan's glove scored Gaulin. Bradshaw fouled to Regan.

Deloro took the lead in the last of the fourth. A. Quinn was hit. Johnston and Boudreau both flied out to Johnston but Regan beat out a hit to Bennett and A. Quinn scored when the second baseman threw past first, the batter reaching second. J. Quinn hit to Bennett and Bradshaw instead of touching first after taking the throw tried to tag the batter and dropped the ball. Regan scored on the play after which Brown popped to Gaulin. Reid replaced Bradshaw at first.

The Big Inning.

The winners had a field day in the fifth. And Bennett again was largely responsible. Leal started with a single through short. Schultz hit to Bennett who tagged Leal and then threw over first in trying to complete a double, Schultz reaching second. Ada cracked one at Bennett who let it roll through and Schultz scored. M. Green was brought in to second, Bennett going to the outfield. A. Quinn walked and Johnston dropped a single into right filling the bases. A wild pitch scored Ada and then Boudreau cracked a homer over the left field fence scoring Quinn and Johnston in front of him. Tompkins made a fine catch of Regan's drive. J. Quinn lined a triple into right centre but Brown popped to C. Maracle.

That made it 7 to 1 but Point Ann kept on trying. They got two back in the sixth. Gaulin walked and pulled the delayed steal, completing the circuit when Schultz's throw hit him and Regan let the return throw from the outfield get away. Soup Goyer followed with the longest hit of the day, a tremendous drive over the trees in deep right field. The slow-moving catcher only made three bases on the drive. He scored a moment later when J. Maracle grounded to Schultz. The next two batters were easy.

Point Ann added another pair in the seventh. C. Maracle walked and Bennett doubled to left. Reid's sacrifice fly to Ada scored Maracle and Bennett also scored on the centre fielder's bad throw in. Sonny Green tripled to centre and Gaulin walked but Schultz handled Goyer's hard smash nicely and J. Maracle flied to Boudreau.

Deloro made it sure in the eighth. With J. Quinn out of the way, Brown singled past third. Leal flied to M. Green but Schultz doubled to left, scoring Brown and went all the way round himself on J. Maracle's wide throw to third and C. Maracle's bad toss. Ada flied to J. Maracle for the third out.

Deloro will meet the C.G.E.-Bethany winners in the next round, the first game likely at Deloro on Saturday.

MINORS ON SATURDAY

Return Games Here Between Toronto and Local Youngsters.

Anyone who follows minor series baseball, bantam, midget and juvenile, cannot help but notice and remark upon the big strides the youngsters are making in the game and the manner in which they have mastered many of the fine points of the game. One of the bright spots in the bantam game staged in Toronto between the McCormick's playground team and Bob Mackey's local Kiwanis nine was the manner in which MacDuffy, one of the diminutive players of the Toronto squad and their lead off man and shortstop handled himself at the plate. This crafty youngster went through all the antics which the big stars like Cobb and the rest of them are supposed to do in his effort to get the pitcher flurried and in a hole to force him to groove it or give a walk. Each time MacDuffy faced "Dimp" Trebilcock there was a battle of wits and the little batter usually won, for in five appearances he drew two walks and hit once.

The two Toronto teams, McCormicks and Humewoods will play their return game with the Kiwanis and Sacred Heart respectively here Saturday, and both games promise to be humdingers. The locals, managers and players alike, are confident that they can connect with the Toronto pitchers and win. The fact that they are playing on their home lot and will have supporters should help to bolster up their confidence.

MILLION ON FIGHT.

Most of Wagers Favor Firpo To Win By Knockout.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Close to a million dollars, it was predicted in Wall Street circles yesterday, would be wagered on the outcome of the Luis Firpo-Harry Wills fight tonight.

One firm of betting commissioners alone reported it had handled more than $250,000 on the fight, with Firpo ruling a slight favorite in most cases.

Most of the wagers on Firpo were on the basis that he would win by a knockout. One bet of $1,000 to $4,000 was reported that Firpo would score a knockout in the first round.

The fight programme, which includes five other bouts, is scheduled to start at 8.15 p.m., eastern daylight time. The main event is slated for 10 p.m., but Promoter Tex Rickard announced that if rain threatens during the programme, he will put it on immediately and without regard to the rest of the card so as to avoid possible interference. In the event rain blocks the entire show, it will be staged Friday night.

The advance seat sale, which boomed yesterday in spite of the eleventh hour efforts of those who have been seeking the deportation of Firpo, passed the $400,000 mark, according to Rickard.

WHEN THE KNOCKOUT PUNCH LANDS!

This Diagram With the Much-Knocked-Out Mr. Fred Fulton Posing, Shows the Nerve Tract Traveled by the Dream Punch in Fistiana.

Here is what actually happens to a man when he is knocked "cold" in the prize ring: When the lower jaw is struck on its point—or button—with a sharp punch, the upper angle of the jaw is driven forcibly into the glenoid cavity of the skull, above and behind which is situated the delicate labyrinth of the inner ear.

The jaw bone strikes hard upon the thin plate of bone that supports these sensitive organs and gives a shock to the semi-circular canals that is instantly transmitted by them to the bulb of the brain, producing dizziness, nausea, and momentary paralysis

This explains why a sideways blow on the jaw is more effective as a knockout than one delivered flush upon the point of the jaw. The full shock of a sideways blow is received in but one glenoid cavity, while the shock of a blow in the centre is divided between the cavities on the two sides.

POLO ON SATURDAY

Series of Three Games — Starting Week Late.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press). — Complete re-arrangement of the schedule of polo games between teams representing Great Britain and the United States was announced by the United States Polo Association, because of rain which previously had caused three postponements of the opening game.

The series, which was to have started last Saturday, will begin this Saturday, a second game being played Tuesday, and the third and last the following Saturday.

POSTPONED BALL GAMES

American League—New York at Boston postponed, rain.

International—Syracuse at Toronto, two games, postponed, cold weather. Rochester at Buffalo, two games, postponed, cold weather.

We still think Tex Rickard could have made a better show of that Chicago murder trial if they had let him hold it in the Garden.

TENNIS SCHEDULE

Time for Local Games Extended to Wednesday, Sept. 17.

On account of the cold wet weather the time limit for the first round has been extended to Wednesday, September 17. Please take advantage of this and get your games off as early as possible.

In order to get on with the second round all matches not played by Wednesday, September 17 will be defaulted to the teams ready to play. This, of course, is providing weather conditions are favourable for playing. There are 12 matches still to be played in the first round.

SALMON TROUT WON ST. LEGER

H. H. Aga Khan Scored Second Race Classic Victory of Season.

BY TWO LENGTHS

LONDON, Sept. 11.— (Candian Press Cable.)—H. H. Aga Khan yesterday scored his second victory this season in the classics for three-year-olds when his bay colt Salmon Trout, by The Tetrarch out of Salamendre, trained by R. Dawson at Whatcombe, Berkshire, won the St. Leger Stakes, over the course of one mile, six furlongs and 132 yards at Doncaster. Santorb, a brown colt by Santoi out of Countess Torby, owned by A. Barclay Walker, finished second, with the favorite, Sol Joel's Polyphontes, by Polymelus-Own Sisetr, was third. Seventeen ran. Salmon Trout went to the post at odds of 6 to 1 against; Santorb, at 40 to 1 against, and Polyphontes, the favorite, at 100 to 30 against.

The big field was not long at the post and when the barrier ascended got off to a fine start. Arcade went out in front quickly, but gave way to Hurry Belle, the pair being followed by Eaglestone, Santorb, War Gold, Irismond, Polyhontes and Zodiac, with Salmon Trout just behind Sansovino, the Derby winner. They raced in this order for the first half mile when Eaglestone forced the pace and got clear of Hurry Belle, Arcade, Polyphontes and Santorb, the whipper-in still being Salmon Trout. At the half-way mark Polyphontes was in third place and there were no further changes until on entering the straight Polyphontes shot out in front. The favorite was hotly pursued by Santorb, Watford, Transvaal, Irismond, Cape Horn, and Salmon Trout. A quarter of a mile from home Santorb closed with Polyphontes and took command at the distance post but was promptly challenged by the Aga Khan colt who came on with "wet sail," and won comfortably by two lengths, with half a length separating Santorb and Polyhontes for second and third place. Obliterates finished fourth. Sansovino finished in eigth place while Spalpeen brought up the rear. The time of the race was 3 min. 13 1-5 seconds.

WILLS AND FIRPO.

Little Physical Contrast Is Shown Between These Fighters.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11. — Harry Wills and Luis Firpo will enter the ring for their 12-round bout at Boyle's Thirty Acres to-day on a comparatively physical balance.

Each will weigh in the vicinity of 218 lbs., with Wills tending to surpass the figure and Firpo to reduce it. Wills, who shares with Jess Willard possession of the longest reach in fistiana, will have an advantage of five inches in this regard, and he also owns heavier arms than his rival, who has the biggest torso. In chest, neck and height the men are nearly aliki.

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

CAMERA COOTIES.

SOUTHAMPTON, L.I., Sept. 11.—It takes all sorts of fancy debris to make a tasty dish of hash and the exact number of assorted nuts required to populate one so-called civilized world is bigger than the combined batting averages of Pop Anson and Ty Cobb.

No one probably ever will be able to unearth mystery of high powered business executive who can't give Morgan or Rockfeller more than three minutes of his time at the most, yet will stand for hours before drug store window watching pale, thin anemic demonstrate Dr. Bunkum's health suspenders.

Some of country's most inquisitive minds find themselves completely stymied trying to unearth one sound, presentable reason why people with obvious intelligence and normal pituitary glands will spend worst hours of their lives collecting autographs of visiting gold fish trainers and other headline hogs.

Another strata of national imbecility that warrants official observation is made of gibbering beetles who carry away stone columns from historic graveyards as souvenirs and pilfer strands of hangman's noose to keep fashionable murder fresh in demented brain cells.

But the three-star special in the bughouse sweepstakes, guaranteed to canter in a demoniacal first by seven insane lengths or your straitjacket back, is the amateur kodak fiend.

This incurable snapshot plague abounds in large and endless numbers at training camps of fighters and is invariably accompanied by an accomplice of the neither sex who takes turn about in posing with the thick-eared gladiators.

Wills, who is as easy to get along with as the family mattress, has posed for a million camera cooties and in every guise from a Scandinavian squash to Abie's Irish Rose.

The current diet is furnished in two colors by Wills and Firpo. In the middle of a round, whether it be of drinks or right crosses, the fiend will lift his pulsating voice and plead "Hold that pose just for a second, please!"

Firpo has been equally obliging, but less satisfactory. It's hard to get thrilling action picture of portly sphaghetti addict who sleeps with mouth wide open and ears pinned back.

MAY BEAT RUTH'S RECORD

Kraft of Fort Worth Has 54 Homers With 8 More Games to Play

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 9.—With Fort Worth already an easy winner of the Texas League pennant for the fifth year in succession, interest is centered in the effort of Clarence (Big Boy) Kraft, to reach or pass the home run record of Babe Ruth, made in 1932. Kraft has made fifty-four home runs to date and has eight more games in which to make five to tie Ruth, or six to pass him.

Kraft has been playing ball for up ward of fifteen years. He has always been a hard hitter, but only in the last four years has his home run hitting been attracting attention. He has been the main offensive force of the Fort Worth club for six years Should kraft run his string to fifty-nine or sixty in the closing games several civic bodies will try to raise a purse of 10,000 for him.

ADMIRABLE.

A special gold medal should be struck off for Einar Owren and wife of Attleboro, Mass. On an income of $35 a week, they are raising 12 children. Einar is 43. Somehow he has managed to save enough to build a foundry, and his wife is buying a comfortable home from her savings.

These parents came from Denmark. We need more like them. Their children, by the way, recently took health prizes, beauty prizes and school honors.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Good pitching has been one of the big factors in the fine showing of the Washington club.

Good pitching very often can be traced back to the proper managerial handling of the material at hand. Manager Harris of Washington has handled his pitchers wisely.

A manager can easily burn up his pitching early in the race by poor handling of his staff. New managers are prone to do it. Not Harris.

I once heard Connie Mack make the remark, and Connie was winning pennants at that time, that he would prefer losing certain games if the winning meant that he would be forced to call upon a pitcher who had not had proper rest.

"Often a manager must gamble with a rookie, almost concede defeat, in preference to breaking up the routine of his staff by indiscriminate use of certain pitchers," is the way he put it.

Much of a big league manager's success depends upon his handling of his pitchers. It is a ticklish job that lays his judgment open to the second guesser.

If a manager permits a pitcher to remain on the rubber after the second guessers have demanded his removal, and a bunch of runs result, he is taken to task for delaying the shift.

If a manager yanks a pitcher at the slightest signs of wavering, and his successor is batted hard, the college yell is that he should have gambled with his original selection.

Proper handling of a pitching staff is one big problem.

Walter Johnson is having one of his best years as a result of Manager Harris' pre-season statement that he did not intend to use Johnson as a relief pitcher.

Harris has made good that statement. There have been times when the sending of Johnson to the relief of a certain pitcher would have practically insured victory, but Harris always gambled with someone else and usually wisely.

Johnson is getting his proper rest between starts. Is not being burned out as a relief pitcher, due to the constant warming up that is necessary, and is going great guns as a result.

In helping to carry out his theory as to Johnson and releif work he has gone to the other extreme with certain pitchers.

For instance ,take Allan Russel. He is one of the best, if not the best, relief man in the American League. That is Russell's job with Washington. He is never called upon to start games.

Russell has been told that relief work is his job for the season and he is performing nobly in that respect.

Pitcher Fred Marberry, aside from starting games, is the Nationals' second best relief twirler. This recruit pitcher has been a big help to Manager Harris.

One of the reasons for Washingtons' fine play, and the success of Stanley Harris as a manager, can be traced to his wise selection of pitchers.

For some of them he picks the spots. Others are regarded as starting pitchers, a certain few as finishers.

System seems to be the keynote of the success that has come to the Washington staff.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. There is a runner on third and one out. Batsman hits long fly to left center, two of the outfielders going after the ball. The left fielder calls for the play, gets the ball in his hands but stumbles, causing the ball to bound into the air. The center feilder catches the ball before it touches the ground. Can the runner on third start for the plate the moment the ball strikes the hands of the left fielder or must he hold his base until the center fielder has actually completed the catch?—R. T. H.

2. Can a base runner score from third on a balk? If the count is three and two on the batter and the umpire calls a balk, can the batsman take first base on such a ruling?—D.F.H.

3. Batter hits a ball over the fence and as he rounds third base the coacher pats him on the back for his effort. Is the runner out for the actions of coacher? Batter hits ball to fartherest corner of playing field and as he rounds third coacher slaps him on back. When runner crosses plate the ball is just being returned to the infield. Is runner out or safe? D.S.A.

ANSWERS

1. Runner has a right to advance the moment the ball strikes the hands of the left fielder. He need not wait until the center fielder has actually completed the catch.

2. Calling of a balk entitles all base runners to advance one base, so that a runner on third most positively can score. The calling of a balk never has any effect on the batsman. He cannot at any time go to first base on a balk.

3. On a ball batted out of the playing field, entitling the batsman to a home run, no attention should be paid to the act of the coacher in slapping the runner on the back. There is really no chance for a play. On batted balls that remain in the playing fields there is always a chance for a play and the coacher must not touch the runner. For such a technicality the umpire would have the rules behind him in calling the runner out, because of the coacher's act.

TO BURN 218 SHIPS.

Actual Cost of Wooden Fleet Was $235,000,000.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Preparations for the burning of 218 wooden ships built by the United States Shipping Board, at a cost of $235,000,000 for use in the World War, are being made by the Government and Western Marine.

The salvage company, which has an option to purchase the ships from the Government for $262,000, provided the metal in the first 10 destroyed shows the purchasers a fair profit on their investment.

The ships are only part of the big idle fleet that has been in James River for several years. The huge bonfire will occur in the Potomac River off Tidewater, Va.

TWENTY MET DEATH IN TERRIFIC CLASH

Most Terrific Outbreak In History of Honolulu Teritory.

HONOLULU, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Twenty persons dead, unnumbered injured are lying in hospitals, officers under orders to shoot strikers as they approached, distracted widows with children, tracking from jails to hospitals and morgues in search of missing strikers. This was the aftermath to-day of a clash between cane strikers and workers, Tuesday at Hanepe, Island of Kauai. The dead included sixteen Filipines and four policemen.

The situation seemed under control yesterday while the funeral of many of the victims was being held and to-day only a few Filipines could be seen in the vicinity of the outbreak. They were not recognized as strikers, however, as all the strikers who were not killed in the fighting Tuesday were in hiding, in hospitals or in jail.

The outbreak was said to be the most terrific clash in the history of that territory.

A coroner's jury has been obtained to investigate the cause and fix the responsibility for the disturbance which started when the strikers were interrupted by the police as the former attempted to kidnapp workers on the McBride plantations near Hanepe.

A LINDSAY-PETERBORO PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY

New Inter-Urban Connecting Link Will Encourage Trade and Bring Two Centres Closer Together.

Residents in Peterborough will be glad to learn that the prospects are bright for a Lindsay-Peterborough provincial highway.

Interests in Lindsay have been working for some time and as a result of their efforts, from reports of the Department of Highways, it looks as though the construction of the proposed highway is a sure thing.

Mr. Leon Frazer, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, received a communictaion to-day from the Deputy Minister of Highways, Mr. S. Squires. He is in favor of the project and advised Mr. Frazer that he would submit the matter to his government. Although Mr. Squires has the authority to declare a road a provincial highway, he is obtaining the approval of the Cabinet before proceeding further.

Between Lindsay and Peterboro there is a heavy traffic and according to general opinion the part of the road from the Chemong road to Lindsay is of a lower standard than other inter-urban through roads carrying so heavy a traffic. It is felt that Peterborough and Lindsay are entitled to a provincial highway, which will prove an aid to both centres, fostering communication, and encouraging commercial intercourse.

PLAYING ON STREETS.

Parents To Be Severely Dealt With If Children Are Found on Streets.

TORONTO, September 11. — That parents who are "negligent" in allowing their children to play on the streets be "severely dealt with," is the method which one coroner's jury advances as a means of reducing what Coroner M. M. Crawford last night termed "this terrible toll of children in motor car accidents."

Intimation to the above effect was contained in one of the riders attached to the verdict of accidental death which a jury returned at the morgue last night after investigating death of Robert Oliver, aged 4 years, as a result of injuries received when he was struck by a motor car driven by Arthur A. Coombs. The driver of the car was exonerated from all blame.

MARRIED A SHOOTER.

Ottawa Girl Who Was Shot Four Times, Married In Jail.

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Dorothy A. Hunter, a former Ottawa girl, who was shot four times by her fiance, Kenneth Gowlett, married him yesterday in the county jail. The shooting occurred on August 31, and Gowlett is locked up awaiting his trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

The former Miss Hunter declared at the time of the shooting that she still loved Gowlett, but would never marry him. She was recently released from the hospital, where she recovered from the bullet wounds. Both gave ages as 18. The shooting followed a trivial quarrel.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Increase of $233,651 Is Shown Over Last Week's Total.

This week's clearings for the banks in this city, show an increase of $233,651, which is one of the highest weekly increases recorded during the past year. The second week in September appears to be a good week for banks as for the same week last year the total clearings were $883,052 as compared with $851,656 for this year. For the corresponding week one month ago the total was $710,411 and the total for last week was $818,005.

TELEGRAPH MEN ARE ON STRIKE

Canadian Press Operators Went Out on Strike This Afternoon at 2 O'clock.

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The Canadian Press telegraphers went out on strike at two o'clock this afternoon.

At a meeting recently held between the representatives of the company and the general committee of telegraphers, the former offered to arbitrate, claiming they have the right to do so under the present agreement with the operators negotiated in 1920. This was refused, and the board of conciliation was proposed, which the operators' representatives answered with a strike ultimatum. The company made application for such a board, which was granted by the Minister of Labor, but the latest information in the hands of the company was that the men refused the board and proceeded to strike.

So that nothing might be left undone to avert the strike, J. F. B. Livesay, general manager of the company, last night wired Roscoe Johnston, international president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, at headquarters in Chicago, pointing out that the company contends the agreement negotiated in 1920, and signed by Mr. Johnson, is of a permanent character, and that the arbitration clause, number 22, was incorporated expressly to meet such a situation as now prevails.

The company contended the present dispute should be arbitrated under that clause, but the men, on the contrary, said it did not apply. Mr. Johnson was then requested to exercise his authority as international president, so that before the strike is made effective, "there shall be arbitration of the whole dispute under that clause or at least that there shall be arbitration of interpretation of such clause."

Mr. Livesay stated to-day that so far no reply had been received from Mr. Johnson. "The whole attitude of the men's general committee has run counter to every recognized principal of labor unionism," the general manager declared.

DOG SHOW WILL OPEN TO-MORROW

Entries From All Over the Province—Well Worth Seeing.

The dog show which will be a feature of the Exhibition on Friday and Saturday of this week, in an innovation at the Fair this year, and promises to be one of the most interesting sections of the entire group of exhibits. The directors, in view of the initial expense, which is large, are making a charge of 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. They are merely following the example of Toronto in this regard, and, from the number of entries from various parts of the province, including London, Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto, Kingston, Port Hope and Cobourg, the canine exhibition will be well worth while the admission charge. Dog lovers will be anxious to see what other places can send in competition with the many splendid dogs born and bred in Peterborough.

Toronto Exhibition's dog show is always one of the crowded sections. On one very fine day, there was as interested audience for the photographer who had a hard task persuading the largest and the smallest dogs in the show, a giant mastiff and a tiny Pekingese, that they would look very well together in a picture. He had no difficulty with the big dog, which was very docile, but the tiny canine was pettishly disciplined to pose properly.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—James Jeffrey, lad about 15 years of age, was dangerously if not fatally injured late yesterday in a hunting accident. With his brother Charlie Jeffrey, he was in a boat down the bay shooting. Handing his brother the shot gun, stock first, James was shot through left hand and will lose that member, while a portion of the charge passed into his face when the gun went off. He was taken to the shore and carried to the hospital a mile away by his brother. Reports this morning were that he was in a critical condition.

NOTORIOUS MINE SWINDLE PLAN FORMS BASIS OF PLOT IN FOX PRODUCTION OF "THE PLUNDERER"

Colorado has long been noted for being one of the leading mining states of the Union. The fame of Leadville and Cripple Creek rests almost entirely upon their production of precious metals. Previous to the discovery of the lead-carbonate silver ores of Leadville in 1879, gold-mining was predominant. In the succeeding years until 1894 silver-mining took the lead In nineteen years the yield of gold was over 35 millions of dollars; the value of the silver output for the same period was over 386 millions of dollars.

With such a volume of business the opportunities for wildcat speculation and the successful exploitation of a vast variety of fraudulent mining schemes were enormous.

One of the best remembered of these dishonest transactions was the "Sure Thing" Mine Deal, as we will call it. Two hard boiled investors from the East, who had made respectable fortunes in promoting coal mines in Pennsylvania, drifted out to Colorado and started looking around for a good proposition in silver mines. They were a practical pair and studied conditions carefully before attempting to come to any decision. Engaging the services of a mining engineer whose past record stood the closest investigation, they looked over mine after mine without finding a satisfactory proposition. Of one thing they were determined: not to be "gypped." The only terms they would consider were 'cheap for cash'. To take full advantage of a ready money deal was the foundation of their business creed.

One day their engineer came to them in great glee. He had found, he claimed, just what they were looking for. A mine had been put on the market which met every requisite they demanded. Its situation, working conditions, grade of ore and the price at which it was offered made it an unusual bargain. The owner gave ill health as his only reason for selling. The reputation of the mine was well known; every claim made for it could be substantiated.

For a year they watched their property closely, made themselves entirely familiar with its workings and smiled broadly at the steady growth of their bank balance—and then received a shock; They had been swindled to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The scheme by which they had been tricked was simple: In taking out the ore, tunnels were run in such a way as to leave a number of square pillars of ore, ostensibly to support the roof. It was decided to remove one of these pillars and it was found to be hollow. Tons of ore had been scooped out of it.

The process contained nothing of magic. Alongside of the 'Sure Thing' mine was another mine that had been "worked out" about the time the speculators from Pennsylvania made their investment. It was owned by the same man who had sold them the "Sure thing". Before he abandoned it, he had run tunnels, come up under the pillars of ore in the other mine and helped himself to the silver he has sold to the new proprietors of the "Sure Thing".

The incident largely forms the basis of the plot for the Fox production "The Plunderer," with Frank Mayo and a strong cast, which opens a three day run at the Regent Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

AT THE ROYAL.

"HIGH SPEED" ALL THAT THE NAME IMPLIES AT THE ROYAL TO-DAY

Public Demands Clean Comedy Like "High Speed," Rawlinson's Latest

"A laugh a day will keep the doctor away."

Some one so paraphrased the old saying, and the number of good comedy features which have been produced for the screen in the past year or two would indicate that scenario editors believe in it. At least, they certainly believe in the theatre man's declaration that clean humor is the result of the present day public's demand.

Laughs in good measure and of a human sort are provided for the public's delectation in the situation of two young people desperately trying to elope, in Frederick Jackson's story, "High Speed," which is Herbert Rawlinson's latest picture, coming to the Royal Theatre to-day. It is a Universal production, directed by Herbert Blache, who made "Nobody's Bride," "The Near Lady" and other pictures.

Rawlinson will be seen in the role of a young star athlete who is not favored as a possible son-in-law, by the city's chief capitalist. In eloping, the athlete and the banker's daughter go through a scale of experiences calculated to take the starch out of anyone's romance. Carmelite Geraghty is the girl, while Otto Hoffman, Bert Roach, Jules Cowles, J. Buckley Russell and Percy Challenger have other principal roles.

"High Speed" is said to be crammed with genuine humor, the effect intensified throughout with titles by Robert Hopkins, titler of "Courtin' Calamity," "Forty-Horse Hawkins" and many other big Universal Productions.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"DRIFTING" WITH DEAN OFFERS MANY THRILLS

Stange Locale Heightens Interest in Screen Version of Famous Play

Priscilla Dean is the star of "Drifting," the drama of love and psychology coming to the screen of the Capitol theatre.

Miss Dean's appearance in "Drifting" makes the film version interesting to those who saw or read about the play, for the heroine's role is essentially dramatic and the work of Dean has always been dramatic and emotional. From what is known of the play is must make an excellent screen vehicle for her.

"Drifting" is the story of a girl who quit selling opium in Shanghai because she was sick of the game—and then was forced back into it by the necessity of getting a chum out of the country before she became addicted to the habit. The heart of China, mysterious and veiled in fogs of the human past, is stripped bare for a moment to show the secret of the nation's curse—the scarlet poppy fields from whence comes the drug, opium.

For the roles supporting Miss Dean actors of unusual qualifications were absolutely essential. Wallace Beery of "The Flame of Life," and "Robin Hood," and fearfully remembered as "Bavu," the Russian beast, handles the "heavy" role. Matt Moore of "The Storm" is the leading man. Ann May Wong, Chinese actress of fine emotional characteristics, has a very sympathetic role.

Other players chosen were William V. Mon, J. Farrell McDonald, Bruce Guerin, Frank Lanning, Mlle. Rose Dione, William Moran and Marie de Albert.

A complete village stretching in a straggling street down the side of a hill and through a narrow ravine is one of several spectacular sets built for the production. The burning of the village is a picturesque thrill in the picture.

JACKIE COOGAN SEEN AMID THE CANNIBALS

After witnessing "Little Robinson Crusoe", Jackie Coogan's latest Metro-Goldwyn picture, which opens at the Capitol Theatre Friday the wonder arise why this film wasn't made sooner! It is so obvious that Jackie should appear in a juvenile version of the famous Robinson Crusoe story—the famous boy star in the immortal tale of a desert isle.

Only this isle, as pictured by Willard Mack, who wrote the story, is far from uninhabited; it is filled with cannibals, and right there is the material that makes this feature one of the most humorous and entertaining films of the year. Jackie's adventures realize to the full every dream of boyhood days, and it is, for once, not too much to say that the picture is a "knock-out."

AT THE GRAND.

Once in a while things happen in real life as they sometimes happen in the dreams of fiction writers. Such an instance occurred in "The Cat and the Canary," which will be seen for the first time on any stock stage next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Grand.

"The Cat and the Canary" has been the biggest money winner that has been produced in the United States in several years. It has already checked off a profit of nearly $2,000,000, and the end is not yet in sight.

It ran for two solid years at the National Theatre, New York, and it was played in London, on the Continent and in Australia, and there have been a score of companies on the road.

Now to get down to the fiction-come-true angle. The happy part of it is that the show was produced by 10 box office boys, advance agents and salaried theatrical managers, who raised $6,200 to finance the play.

John Willard, miner, actor, reporter and soldier of fortune, conceived the idea for "The Cat and the Canary" one afternoon while he was flying over the Argonne, bombing German machine gun nests. Willard was a captain in the United States air forces at that time.

After the war, he forgot all about the idea, until it suddenly came back to him. He sat down and wrote his play in record-breaking time, and has since become famous and wealthy beyond his dreams.

ACCOUNTANT GIBBS SUPPLIED EVIDENCE

Said That Bank Had a Rotten Lot of Securities.

TORONTO, Sept. 11—(Canadian Press).—The efforts of the Crown prosecutor, D. L. McCarthy, K.C., in yesterday's Home Bank trial proceedings were directed chiefly to the investigation of certain of the bank's books, evidence being secured through Thomas Gibbs, who for four years was assistant to Chief Accountant Ocean G. Smith, against whom the first charges are being made.

Mr. McCarthy directed his questions to points he had already alluded to in his outline of the case, namely, switching of liabilities into assets column, adding of premiums to interest and giving of high book values to securities without market value. It was elicited from witness that a block of shares of the Manufacturers' Holding Co., which appeared on the books with a value of $25,000, were without market value, and were, in fact, given to the bank by Mr. Daly as president.

In regard to another transaction, dealing with the conversion of stock and inflation of book value to the extent of nearly a million dollars, the witness declared: "I refused to make them up. I said we had a rotten lot of securities and that these were the worst of the lot." The figures, he stated, were afterwards added by the accused. Mr. Gibbs also said that in regard to some United States balance, he had been instructed to add premiums to unpaid interest and then premiums to interest and premiums.

The payment to M. J. Haney of $30,000, stated the witness, was entered as an asset under the heading, "Re Mercantile Securities" call loans, the witness stated significantly were confined to Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, at each of which cities there were directors. In concluding his examination, Mr. McCarthy inquired whether the books of the bank at the head office were balanced every month.

"The figures balanced," replied Mr. Gibbs drily.

Supreme Court Judge Johnston of Alpine, Kansas, who is a native of Kemptville, Ont., occupied the seat beside Judge Coatsworth when the proceedings were resumed yesterday morning.

The Canadian Johns-Manville Company, which conducted a test of its fire-proof materials on the Market Square on the occasion of the recent Firemen's Convention here, would like to correct a misapprehension which exists in the minds of some with regard to their demonstration. The report was circulated that the fire reel was called to the scene to quench the fire which had been ignited to show the flame-resisting properties of the little house, whereas the reel was in attendance simply as a portion of the apparatus on view in connection with the Firemen's Convention.

John Horner Found Dead in Hunter Street Gatehouse By Relief Man.

John Horner, formerly section foreman at Millbrook, and latterly gateman on the C.N.R. tracks at Hunter Street, was found dead in his shanty to-day when his relief man arrived at three o'clock. Only a few minutes before he had lowered the gates for the shunter, and raised them.

Mr. Horner had spent about fifty years of his life in the service of the G.T.R. and C.N.R., and was well known in Peterborough and district. Owing to difficulty in obtaining the coroner, the body lay for some time in the little cabin where the deceased had spent so many hours of his latter years.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Peterborough Re-Distribution

To Editor, The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I noticed in yesterday's Press report that Mr. Roland Denne lays the responsibility upon my shoulders, for the Re-distribution that took place in Peterborough.

Of course, Mr. Denne knew better than this, but this is a part of his policy, of "putting it over," as he describes his procedure in the chaste and scholarly language of a rising statesman.

Mr. Denne contended that he protested to the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen and the Honourable H. H. Stevens, his party leaders, against the proposed re-distribution,

The facts are, as the records of the House show, that Mr. Stevens moved that Otonabee, Douro and Lakefield be added to West Peterborough, and every Tory Member of the Re-distribution Committee voted in favor of it.

So the inference is that after Mr. Denne had represented to Mr. Meighen and Mr. Stevens, what he though would be a splendid arrangement to help the Tory Party, Mr. Meighen and Mr. Stevens did exactly the opposite to what Mr. Denne wanted.

I might say that I do not blame Mr. Meighen or Mr. Stevens, because they have had considerable experience with Mr. Denne, who got them into a jam in a by-election in 1921, and I think that both of these gentlemen sized up Mr. Denne, in a way that led them to believe that whenever he made a recommendation, the proper course would be to kick it downstairs.

There is one thing in regard to Mr. Denne's speech at Norwood, and that is that he disclosed with unconscious frankness, how little influence he has, with Mr. Meighen and the Party Leaders at Ottawa, and just what Mr. Meighen thinks of Mr. Denne and his political future.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR OPENS THE FAIR

Official Ceremony In Welcome Sunshine Gives New Aspect To Exhibition.

GREAT OCCASION.

The twenty-second annual Fair under the auspices of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition Board was officially opened this afternoon by His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Henry Cockshutt, in an address in which he praised Peterboro for its development in the twenty years since he last visited it. The grand stand was well filled for the ceremony, and the entire Exhibition took on a new aspect in the warm, summer-like sunshine.

His Worship Mayor Turner presided at the luncheon in the Empress Hotel, which preceded the ceremony at the Exhibition Grounds and in a happy speech of welcome drew to the attention of the distinguished visitor the advantages Peterboro enjoys by reason of its natural location and the number of industries centred here, with a rich farming environment. "Ontario is the Garden of Eden of this great Dominion," he declared, and insinuated that Peterboro occupies a choice nosition in the garden.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor commented on Ontario's being the second largest province in Canada, with more than its proportionate share of the good things of soil and mine. The Province is almost self-contained in its products, has a coast line of 2,500 miles on the fresh water lakes; 1,100 miles of navigable fresh water and the largest island in fresh water in the world, Manitoulin.

His Honor urged, in the interests of a united Dominion and Empire, that questions of creed and class be smothered in the general effort for the good of all. He commented favorably on the feeling that now exists between citizens in communities. "We should all strive to see that differences of opinion are subordinated and the country is all one, united for Canada and the Empire," he concluded.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, eulogized the Lieutenant-Governor's family connections and commented on the eminence to which all members of it have risen. "We are honored here by the presence of one who represents the Crown of England, and holds the position of first citizen of the Province of Ontario," he said.

Official Opening

At the especially constructed stand at the Exhibition Grounds, Roland Denne, president of the Exhibition Board, introduced the speakers and expressed the opinion that the present fair will go down to history as the most auspicious of all exhibitions up to this time. He outlined the uphill fight the Exhibition Board has made to bring the Exhibition to its present high peak, and said the Board is doing a real community work.

The Lieutenant Governor, in his official opening of the Exhibition, said such affairs are vitally important in the industrial and agricultural life of the country. Agriculture is the basis of success in the cities, and in its turn is dependent upon the purchasing field provided by industry. Remarking that by virtue of his position he was deprived of the privilege of talking politics, His Honor said he was permitted to tell the people that they themselves were responsible for the governments that ruled in municipalities, provinces and in the dominion. "It is by the individual that the government is elected, and you get the government you vote for," he declared.

In closing the distinguished visitor urged the necessity of training children in a way to insure the future success of the province. Parents are responsible for the training of the children, and are making the viewpoint of future generations.

Made Presetnation.

Thomas McIndoo, second vice-president of the Exhibition Board, presented the Lieutenant-Governor, on behalf of the Fair Board, with a book of views of Peterborough, declaring this a "loyal city; true to the British Empire."

E. F. Mason, chairman of the reception committee of the Exhibition Board, told of the crowded buildings, added to yearly but still too small. The aim is, he said, to make Peterborough Industrial Exhibition second only to Toronto.

Other speakers were Mayor J. J. Turner and J. Wells Fraser, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

FILING CABINET QUITE ORIGINAL

Made of Steel, It Is Shown Here For First Time In Canada.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the fair this year is that of the Office Specialty Mfg. Co., Ltd., Newmarket, Ont. All the latest features in filing systems and office equipment are found in their display. The high standard set by the company in the past has been readily maintained, if not improved. To recall exhibits of other years, we find that the Office Specialty Mfg. Co., Ltd., was the first and only company to offer a fire resisting filing cabinet, better known as the "Fire Wall" Cabinet. Then acem the "Dry Insulated Safe," the safe that resisted the test of the most severe fire.

This year one of the outstanding features in this exhibit is a steel filing cabinet, known as the "New Steel" File, and sold at an amazingly low price. This marvel of filing utility and durability is arresting and holding the attention of visitors in the Manufacturers' Building, who quickly recognize its unparalleled merits. Then an office desk made of steel is attracting considerable interest. These are shown here for the first time in Canada, and are truly worth while inspecting.

This splendid and instructive exhibit for business men is in charge of D. A. Costello, the company's energeic Eastern and Western representative. Mr. Costello enjoys the capable assistance of W. Proctor of the Toronto System Department.

Mr. Costello is himself a filing system expert and he will be pleased to plan any kind of office system desired. He can be reached by mail to box 816 Peterboro, or by phoning 1585M.

Assassin's Bullet Saved Life of Austrian Chancellor.

GENEVA, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Austria's Chancellor made a unique announcement here yesterday that the assassin who attempted to kill him in Vienna some weeks ago actually saved his life. His arrival in Geneva was the first public appearance of Chancellor Seipel since the bullet lodged in his body. When attacked he was suffering from the most serious stages of diabetes, with seven per cent. sugar in his blood. Specialists had given him only a few months to live. During the enforcement quiet in treatment of the wound, however, the Chancellor was entirely cured of the malady.

BRITAIN IS WILLING TO ACCEPT COMPULSORY ARBITRATION PLAN

Important Announcement By British Delegate At Geneva Conference—Reserves Right of Search and Capture If Engaged in Defence of Any Other Country.

SEEN AS ANGLO-FRENCH ENTENTE.

GENEVA, Sept. 12.—Greata Britain dramatically dropped a naval bomb into the Geneva conference Thursday and the new Anglo-French entente was appraised by many as approaching the character of an out and out alliance, when Sir Cecil Hurst, eminent jurist and British delegate, declared Great Britain's readiness to accept compulsory arbitration, provided she would not be brought into court because of some act of her navy performed in attempting to maintain or restore peace.

This declaration has set Geneva agog more than anything since Premiers MacDonald and Herriot committed themselves in principle to the settlement of any and all disputes by obligatory arbitration by some world tribunal or tribunals.

Retain Right of Search

The British reservation was interpreted as meaning that once the British navy begins to operate, her right of search and capture, which formed the subject of controversy between the United States and England before the United States entered the great war, can not be questioned juridically.

The effect of the announcement is that if the British reservation is accepted by the other powers, continental countries will not only get economic help from England as part of the proposed pact of security or sanctions, but also the full and immense support of the British fleets in case any country in defiance of an arbitral decision opens hostilities and attacks another state.

LABOR COMPACT WITHIN EMPIRE

Closer Relations Between the British and Canadian Groups Proposed.

OFFICIAL LETTER.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—The following official communication from the labor commonwealth group in the British House of Commons was received here Thursday by the Montreal District Council of the Canadian Labor party, confirming the report that the latter organization had been asked whether they would send delegates to an inter-Dominion conference early next year.

The actual text of the invitation follows:

House of Commons,
London, Eng., Aug., 1924.

Dear Sir,—I am instructed by the Labor Commonwealth, a group of British members of Parliament, to write and ask your views with regard to the prospects of our different labor parties entering into closer relations with a view to the formation of a labor policy for the Empire. The Labor Commonwealth Group was very sorry that the projected inter-Dominion conference was postponed, and would like to hear from you whether delegates from your party could attend early next year. It would be of considerable assistance to us if you would forward any pamphlets, publications or newspaper articles which you may have, laying down the policy which you pursue or propose to pursue in Imperial matters. The Labor Commonwealth group consists of about sixty members of the British House of Commons, and we meet regularly for the exchange of opinions and information and have been hearing short addresses from experts on various aspects of Imperial matters. The chairman of the group is George Lansbury.

(Signed) Yours truly,
L. Haden Guest, Hon. Secretary.

Four Days of Almost Continuous Rain Have Done Huge Damage.

TOWN UNDER WATER.

QUEBEC, September 12. — Canadian Press. — Fed by four days of almost continuous rain, the rivers in this district, and the eastern townships are raging floods, and are doing huge damage.

The town of St. Raymond was reported to be very badly affected, the lower part of the town being under water. The power plant at Fort Neuf is badly damaged. There are a series of wash outs reported on the main line of the Canadian National Railways to Murray Bay, and trains going to Chicoutimi had to go round by St. Pierre. Many cattle and sheep are said to have been swept away by the flood and a number of valuable log booms have broken from their moorings and have gone adrift.

At St. Albans, the house of a farmer named George Neaud was carried away by the flood and only for the fact that the majority of the residents of the district had spent a sleepless night watching developments, loss of life might have been recorded. The work completed on some of the highways has been rendered useless by the sweep of water and the damage in this respect is particularly severe.

On Thursday the climax of the flood seemed to have been reached; at noon there were distinct signs of improvement.

AGREES ON BOUNDARY.

Lloyd George Endorses Lord Birkenhead's Letter.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Referring to the Irish boundary question in his speech at Penmaenmawr, Wales, Wednesday night, Lloyd George said that Lord Birkenhead's letter to the Earl of Balfour seemed to him to contain the only responsible interpretation of the boundary clause of the Irish treaty and he asserted that he stood by this letter and all it contained.

Lord Birkenhead's letter to the Earl of Balfour mentioned in the above despatch interprets the Irish treaty as providing for a boundary commission to settle only small frontiers rather than to consider transferring large sections of Ulster to the Irish Free State.

RUSSIAN TRADE TREATY A FAKE

Lloyd George Says It Was Patched Up To Satisfy Socialists.

HELD UP PREMIER.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — (Canadian Press Cable)—Lloyd George made a most important declaration on the Anglo-Russian treaty in a speech at Pennaenmaur, Wales, Wednesday night.

The former premier declared that the treaty was a fake and folly which had been hastily patched up at the end of the recent session of Parliament because Premier MacDonald had been held up by the socialist gunmen of his own party. He declared that it was an act of criminal recklessness at such a time to guarantee huge sums of money to be spent in another country by a government whose principles were predatory.

Lloyd George said he recognized that in voting against the guarantee the liberals would be challenging the government on a major issue which was an integral part of the government's programme but if the Liberals shirked that challenge they would forfeit the nation's confidence and respect.

May Defeat Government

Lloyd George obviously assumes that the Liberals will join the conservatives in defeating the government on the Anglo-Russian treaty when it comes before parliament for ratification as the government will be obliged to treat the vote as one of no confidence and will be compelled to resign.

The Manchester Guardian, the greatest Liberal organ in the United Kingdom, while admitting that the treaty is not a matter for enthusiasm suggests that it does not warrant all the noise that is being made with regard to it. The chief allegation against the treaty, the Guardian says is that it does nothing, and that paper thinks this would be a poor plea in an appeal by the Liberals of the country.

The Guardian's London correspondent forecasts that many Liberal members of the House of Commons will refuse to join Lloyd George in voting against the ratification of the treaty.

Consulted Leaders

It should be noted however that Lloyd George in his speech reiterated what he had previously said in the House of Commons that in denouncing the Anglo-Russian treaty he had consulted such prominent Liberal M.P.'s as Sir John Simon and C. F. G. Masterman and every available Liberal leader with reference to the character of the deal made by the Labor government with Russia.

The Chronicle, which nowadays is a supporter of Lloyd George, admits that while Liberalism and Labor may be heading for a collision over Russia they are completely in accord on Irish matters "The omens are," says the Chronicle, "that when the commons resumes its sittings the Irish business will soon be disposed of and it will not be until October that an appeal to the electors may be foreshadowed either on the Russian business or on some other matter."

ZR-3 READY TO FLY TO U. S.

PUNJAB RIOTING KILLED FIFTEEN

Trouble Started By Pamphlet Regarded As Insult to the Moslems.

SIMLA, Punjab, Sept. 12.—Fifteen persons were killed and twenty wounded during communal rioting Tuesday and yesterday at Kohat in the northwest frontier province. The trouble began on Tuesday when firearms were used and when there was some incendiarism.

The origin of the trouble is ascribed to an offensive pamphlet which was considered as insulting to the holy places of the Moslems.

CHICAGO SENTENCE.

"If Boys Were Not Insane They Deserved Punishment," Says Labor Paper.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — (United Press).—The Daily Herald Labor paper commenting yesterday upon the Loeb-Leopold sentence says: "From the workers point of view, the crime cannot fairly be attributed to the person of great wealth although there is no doubt but that it had something to do with it. What was wrong with Loeb and Leopold was diseased imaginations." Declaring the punishment suitable, the Herald said "if they are insane, it is necessary that they be kept under restraint."

RAIN IN FRANCE HURTS HARVEST

Forty Per Cent of Crop In the North Wasted by Bad Weather.

FLOUR DEARER.

PARIS, Sept. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Among the problems facing the Government in dealing with the question of the high cost of living is the deficiency of the harvest due to the abnormally wet season. The northern section of France especially has suffered from the wet weather, and the reaping, which has been later than usual, has been greatly retarded in consequence. The drying and carting of the wheat has been seriously interfered with by persistent rains and a shortage of labor.

The farmers in the north of France estimate that 40 per cent. of the harvest has been wasted as a result of the unfavorable conditions. This section, which ordinarily supplies other districts with wheat, is now itself buying wheat in Central France.

Owing to the deficiency in the French harvest it will be necessary to import abnormally large quantities of foreign wheat.

A section of the press asks for a reduction of the recently increased duty on foreign wheat or the abolition of the duty entirely, while other newspapers declare that even the abolition of the duty will not reduce the price of foreign wheat to the level of the home-grown product.

In the meantime the price of flour continues to increase, but the Government is expected to take action with a view to the relief of the people in this connection.

YEAR'S WHEAT EXPORT.

Canada's Total Sixty Million Bushels In Excess of Last Year.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Wheat exported from Canada for the 12 months ending Aug. 31, 1924, exceeded in volume by almost 60,000,000 bushels that exported for the corresponding 12 months previous, according to reports issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics yesterday. The figures for the current year period were 280,100,061 bushels, and in the previous 12 months 229,681,814 bushels. The estimated value respectively were $293,995,127 and $263,819,430. Of the total exported in the last 12 months over 200,000,000 went to the United Kingdom an increase of 26,000,000 bushels. The amount exported to the United States in the 1924 period was 21,320,242 bushels, as compared with 12,536,048 bushels for the corresponding 12 months of the 1923 period.

CLASH IN IRELAND.

Civic Guard and Population Kilkenin Clashed.

BELFAST, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Violent clash between civic guard and the population if Kilkerrin, County Galway, resulting from attempts of guard to quell riot is reported from Galway town which is in the hands of soldiers who are patrolling the place and maintaining order. The trouble started when a mob resisted civic guard and chased policemen into their barracks.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF GUN KILLED GIRL AND WOUNDED MAN

Toronto Man Slipped Stepping Into Punt at Lake Scugog —Unaware Girl In Boat Was Shot Until He Returned With Hand Bandaged.

FATALITY NEAR JANETVILLE.

LINDSAY, September 12.—(Special).—Miss Hines of Toronto, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon, in a shooting accident at Shoreacres, near Janetville Station, when a double barrel shot gun discharged into her side.

Miss Hines had been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Recey of Toronto, at their cottage on the shore of Lake Scugog, and yesterday afternoon the party was about to embark in a punt when the accident happened. Miss Hines was sitting on the centre seat of the punt and a shot gun lay in the bow. Mr. Recey had one foot in the punt, and the other on a log when he accidentally slipped. The gun discharged, the shot striking Miss Hines' thigh and side.

Mr. Recey had part of his right hand torn off by the shot, and not noticing that Miss Hines had been struck, he rushed to the cottage where he obtained a towel to wrap around his injured hand. On his return to the punt he was horrified to find Miss Hines dead.

The baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Recey had a remarkable escape having been removed a few seconds before the accident from a part of the punt that was riddled with shot.

Mr. Recey is at present in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay.

VAUDEVILLE BILL AT FAIR PLEASES

Acts Are Diversified, With Thrills and Humor Well Mixed.

Of all the attractions at the Exhibition the vaudeville performance is outstanding, and between the antics of Daredevil Doherty and the beautiful renditions of Bert Caldwell, Toronto baritone, the programme excited the admiration of the audience. This year's vaudeville is well diversified, both sensational and spectacular. Yesterday afternoon, before a good crowd, the full performance was enacted for the first time.

A scrutinous eye upon the crowd as they strained their necks and then shuddered as Daredevil Doherty came down the long shoot on his bicycle from a high pinnacle, making a thirty-foot jump in mid-air from platform to platform with such speed that he shot away across the grounds before he could stop, indicated that the large gathering were at least thrilled, if not terrified for the moment, with the death defying stunt.

Poodles and Dootie were as foolish as their names would imply, the two comedy acrobats providing the mirth. Their outrageous pranks were intermixed with some real skilful performing.

Adele Nelson and Company caught the crowd's eye with their acrobatic and balancing act, a real snappy affair. It is a smart performance well worth seeing.

Josh and Tilden, in their comedy rube act, and the Burtons' comedy knockout acrobatic act provided more fun, more thrills. They were both crowd pleasers, the latter doing some smart tumbling and the former going through some unusual antics in the course of the performance.

Music lovers were given a treat by the Colonial Belles with some peppy jazz selections, coupled with an odd real old-time song. Their gorgeous costumes and wigs and elaborately decorated instruments added color to the presentation.

Several vocal selections were given by Bert Caldwell, accompanied by the Rangers Band. His strong magnetic voice carried well into all quarters of the stand. After his first rendition the great mass came quickly to silence, whenever he again appeared. He is possessed of a beautiful clear toned voice, particularly suited for outdoor singing.

FRENCH TROOPS RECROSS RHINE

Numerous Contingents Have Already Departed From German Towns.

MOVE GRADUALLY.

DORTMUND, Germany, Sept. 12—Preparations for the departure of the French troops from Dortmund, Hoerde and Luenen now are well under way, and numerous scattering contingents have already departed across the Rhine.

It is believed the evacuation will proceed in such stages as to avoid any undue display and that it will not afford the natives an opportunity for showing jubilation.

ULSTER UNMOVED.

Birkenhead's Letter Makes No Difference in Boundary Stand.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, when interviewed yesterday, said Viscount Birkenhead's letter urging Ulster to co-operate with the Boundary Commission, would make no difference in his refusal to appoint an Ulster representative on the Commission. For one reason among many, said Sir James, to do so would deprive Ulster of the right to appeal against any decision the Boundary Commission, if it is ever set up, might formulate.

JAPAN NEUTRAL.

Will Not Interfere With Chinas' Present Affairs.

TOKIO, Sept. 12.— (Canadian Press).—Japan has no intention of intervening in the domestic difficulties of China, Baron Kijuro Shidebara, Foreign Minister, told Associated Press yesterday morning when asked to outline Japanese Government's policy in regard to present Civil War in China.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 11th, I find that G. N. Gordon accuses Mr. Denne of making a jam in the by-election of 1921. Now this statement is unwarranted, as Mr. Denne was the real nominee of the Conservative party and first in the field, and it looked for a while that the fight would be between Mr. Denne and Mr. Campbell, the Progressive, but when it was seen that there would be free for all, Mr. Gordon, absolutely sure of a class of vote, opened his sails to the wind. I think what we need badly in the political life of Canada are candidates of the type of Agnes McPhail, who will stand true to the principles that they are elected on, no matter what the outcome is. Thanking you, I remain, yours, etc.,

W. H. MERRILL.

STREET FROCK.

The street frock of crepe de chine with pleated or tucked sections and a coat or cape to match is so much in evidence it has become almost a uniform.

ATTRACTIVE.

An attractive cape is composed entirely of tucks beginning with very wide ones at the hem and graduating to very small ones at the shoulders.

LONG BOA.

An important and charming accessory for the evening is a long boa of curled ostrich, either in white or some very delicate color.

AIRPLANE CRAVATS.

Airplane cravats are very smart and are tied closely about the throat with long ends that make right angles like propellers.

LEATHER FURNITURE

Leather furniture and upholstery that is very dark may be polished with oil and turpentine.

CHECKED WOOLS.

Checked wools are very much in evidence in the new collections. Bright yellows and greens are combined with Russian and Spanish colorings followed.

BEACH CAPES.

Beach capes of rubberized material are printed in futuristic patterns and cut on the lines dictated by fashion.

WE CALL IT MUD.

At a semi-annual sale of unclaimed packages, a man bought a "blind bargain," and it proved to be a trunkful of mud. The friends of the fellow who paid $5.50 for this Western clay had a good laugh, and this funpoking period prompted the purchaser to turn the joke, if possible; so he sent a sample of the "mud" to a chemist and the assay showed that the contents of the trunk were worth $2000 in gold.

The man that will locate the way bill for this shipment, and then trace the place where this "mud" was found, will not only prove that he is a "fool for luck," but he will demonstrate that he is a wise prospector.

Almost every day we receive a bunch of mud, but we never take time to assay it. Every day some opportunity is handed us and most of us call it "mud."

THE GUMPS—THE GUMP SPECIAL

THE MANUFACTURERS' BUILDING IS A BUSY SPOT AT LOCAL FAIR

Free Ham Sandwiches a Feature of One Booth—A Telephone and Post Office Exhibit.

The little puffed-up red devil that hung suspended from a chain of wire and bead bracelets in the small booth at the entrance of the Manufacturers' Building yesterday made a bright spot of colour in the dismal drizzle that ushered in the first day, but the interior of the big place was alight with colour of electric lights and bright bunting and alive with the clamor of the children, who gazed at the different exhibits and asked for the samples that are practically non existent at the Fair this year. There is not much literature distributed and very little free stuff. The Canadian Packing, however, came across with ham sandwiches that had a thronging patronage from small men and women.

At the entrance to the building, on the left, is the handsome dining-room interior that represents the contribution of Messrs. D. Belleghem and Sons to the Exhibition this year. Here is a solid oak nine-piece suite with Hungarian ash panels, and a floor lamp that represents the prize to be awarded the lucky person who can estimate most closely the weight of the furniture in the enclosure. Guesses on this suite yesterday ranged all the way from the little boy's hazard of 79 pounds to the seventon guess of one large-minded lady.

Flags and buntings in artistic fashion are draped over and around most of the exhibits, and many of them have pretty beaver board backgrounds in pale tints. Interesting mechanical exhibits that attracted a good deal of atention were in the Bell Telephone Company's section and the Post Office Department. The former shows a 'phone service, "from your telephone to the operator", a board whereon is assembled the twoh undred places that go to the making up of a desk set, and samples of telephone wires and cables. A telephone booth, completely fitted up and connected, is also within their enclosure.

Interesting Post Office Exhibit

A miniature Post Office, showing the complete workings ot the interior, with a delivery wicket, letter rack and electric cancelling machine on view, is flanked by a dark room where educational lantern slides connected with Postal work are shown and described by the gentlemen in charge. The opening slide was a presentation of His Majesty, King George Fifth, which seemed unfamiliar to the children watching one of the shows, the only comment being "Oh, look at the gentleman," from one little boy.

A large and interesting-looking exhibit by the Quaker Oats Company has for a central point a revolving, electrically-lighted wheel, surrounded by bags and packages of flours and cereals and chicken feeds, brightened by the shine of the aluminum pots and pans that constitute the "porridge" premiums. The bowls of puffed rice and wheat that were patronized so liberally last year at this section are absent this season.

Next door is the A. McDonald Lumber Company's booth, with samples of lumbers and roofing, door frames in natural woods and 'hope' chests of cedar in pale pink and rose.

The Peterboro Utilities Commission has a large section, part of which is partitioned off to form a model kitchen. In the store part are electric appliances of every variety, from a waffle iron to an electric grate with red tiling and a four-hole electric stove. In the kitchen, against a cream beaverboard background, is an electric stove, a sink and dish washer, a clothes washer and electric ironer and kitchen cabinet.

"Delyte" tipless lamps, the "hundred per cent Canadian" lamps from Guelph, with a model bathroom fitted up with shining porcelains, is in charge of R. G. Sturgeon.

Wheat and Bread Trimming.

A uniquqe and effective arrangement is that of the Peterboro Cereal Company's products, in a small house beside the east door. Thatched and sided with sheaves of real wheat, its latticed windows are outlined with real loaves of various shapes and sizes, in long curleycue and short, stubby patterns. Indoors is a simulated kitchen, on the table a large wheat-sheaf loaf and above it a sign reading "Sooner or later, Reindeer Flour" fashioned from bread made from Manitoba wheat.

The Heintzman Company has an imposing corner, fitted with rugs and lighted floor lamps, with a novel decoration in a huge black and yellow striped umbrella. Here are the latest models in musical instruments, from a baby grand piano to a gramophone that supplies continuous music. Grey beaver board with a rose border in Greek key pattern makes an effective backing.

A brilliant and extremely decorative scheme has been utilized in a section where the entire space is devoted to an immense funnel of red and white bunting, centered by a circle of lighted frosted lamps, advertising "J. J. Turner & Sons Sign Department."

The latest improved types of milking outfits and separators make a dignified showing in the DeLaval Company's corner, and the Peterboro Lumber Company has an educational and entertaining exhibit in its showing of asbestos products from the Asbestos mines in Quebec. Here is the dark blue rock with its shredded white, fluffy covering, and its further progress is viewed in the samples shown of fire-proof roofings and insulating materials.

In the western corner is the striking effect achieved by the Canadian Packing Company's exhibit, where ham sandwiches are served from a camper's tent, surrounded by cedar trees and green foliage, with a grotto where running water purls over rocks, and a foreground camp-fire.

Decoy Ducks.

In the central space is the Peterboro Canoe Company's exhibit of long, slender canoes and paddles, with decoy ducks waiting in the bottom of one of the canoes, and snowshoes and toboggans in the rear.

Office fixtures of various types, impressive and good-looking, fill the section devoted to the Office Specialty Company of Newmarket. Here are fyling cabinets and the new steel efficiency desks and the safes, arranged in bright office interior.

Next door is the toothsome display of the many products of the Canada Starch Company of Montreal, and, against a pretty background of blue and white, the section taken by the Maple Leaf Milling Company, where packaged flours and feeds are relieved by the artificial delicacy of the two big cakes, donated by Messrs. L. Potvin and Coleman Brothers respectively, which form first and second prizes to be drawn for at the end of the Fair, to those holding lucky number tickets distributed impartially at this booth.

Main Building Exhibits.

In the Main Building, other mercantile exhibits are arranged. The Cressman Company's section is very effective and is entirely decorative, confining itself to the representation of a woodland scene, with real trees and foliage and undergrowth. In the centre stands Little Red Riding Hood, with her scarlet cloak and basket, on her face the happy expression that probably ante-dated the arrival of the wolf on the scene, behind her a cheerfully-lighted miniature house. An estimating contest also accompanies this exhibit, as does the demonstration of the Turnbull Company, Limited, where congoleum rugs and mattresses are displayed in attractive fashion on a green linoleum floor covering. Across the way is the rich living-room interior arranged by Messrs. R. Hall & Son, with a suite in taupe velours, the luxurious Chesterfield backed by its companion table, the windows hung with beautiful draperies.

Barrie's, Limited, have a display of expensive furs with coats and neckpieces on view, backed by long lines of pelts.

The Singer Sewing Machine corner shows the latest ideas in sewing machines for hand or electric power; Messrs. McColl Brother, through their local agent, Mr. C.C. Showen, have a snappy section where motor oils and Hi-Test gasoline is advertised against a backing of Red Indian heads; Fred H. Rowan's small corner hold samples of shingling and roofing materials and a tiny, electrically-lighted house, and Nelson Brothers show piped and pipless furnaces in their section.

Roy's Studio has its usual showing of beautiful photographs of many types, with adult and baby faces in natural poses, the piece de resistance being a large portrait photograph of the Hon. Mackenzie King posed against a flag.

Messrs. Grant and Thorpe had a comfortable section yesterday, where the rays of heat from lighted electric grates drew a constant attendance. Electric fixtures and various electric attachments, such as portable heaters and washers and a vacuum cleaner, are arranged here in most attractive fashion.

Messrs. Brimmell and Irwin, who are conducting a style show in men's wearing apparel on Friday and Saturday, are showing the latest ideas in clothes to suit the classy dresser.

MIDWAY PROVIDES GOOD AMUSEMENTS

Webber Turner Congratulated in Securing High Class Show.

Webber Turner and the merry men associated with him on the amusement committee of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board are being congratulated on all sides on having secured for this year's Fair a return of the International Amusement Company. Just as soon as last year's Exhibition closed Mr. Turner signed this company up for this year, making sure of having the show that has the cleanest record of any touring Canada.

That the midway is above reproach is testified by the participation yesterday in its delights of four clergymen, who tried feat of skill after feat and appeared to be having a really good time. A. R. Lavoie, the genial manager, was not surprised when informed of the visit of the befrocked gentlemen, for it is his show and he has travelled all of Canada with it. He knows it is as clean as the hundred of recommendations from city councils, police chiefs and fair boards declare it to be, and he is personally acquainted with every man who travels with the show, knowing all of them to be courteous and square.

With its own trains of six cars packed to the doors with impedimenta of the show professton and exhibits, the International Amusement Company carries six rides and ten shows. Associated with it here are some forty concessions, booths in which prizes are offered in return for skillful throwing of darts, balls or hoops. A complete office, with files, desks, and ledgers, is carried, and here the secretary, W. Green, rules supreme. Intricate and complete records are kept of all money dealings, and copies of the companie's daily ledger sheet are handed to the directors of the Fair for settlement purposes. A cook house, too, accompanies the show, and here the showmen receive their meals from 10 o'clock the forenoon until 2 o'clock in the morning.

Tested For Safety.

The aeroplane ride, one of the most popular with old and young alike, is a wonderful piece of mechanism containing over a thousand parts. It is erected in a few hours and tested for safety by being operated when loaded with sandbags. All of the mechanics, like all the other showmen with the midway, are Canadians.

The whip, another ride in which care is needed for safety and smooth running, cost $9,000. Just as an evidence of the magnitude of the preparation necessary before this ride can be put into operation, it may be said that the plates on which the cars travel weigh 500 pounds each and number 44. Yet the whole apparatus can be erected in working order in from three to four hours, and the floors are exactly level, tested by a spirit level.

The Ferris wheel, another of the prime favorites, contains over 1,000 parts and is erected in wonderfully quick time by the skilled mechanics who operate it.

In providing a children's ride Mr. Lavoie has followed the lead of the Toronto Exhibition, merely as a service to the children. This diminutive merry-go-round is quite safe for the tiniest tots, and parents appreciate it to the full.

In the Side Shows.

Of the ten big shows, all with peculiar merits, probably none receives more attention or more favorable comment than that in which C. S. Pitcher, the Toronto glass blower, demonstrates his wonderful work. This is an educational show of the highest merit apart from its entertaining qualities. Seated at a high table with his blow torch and glass tubes, Mr. Pitcher makes with apparent ease dainty deer apparently perched for flight or black and white dogs carrying baskets, and puts the completed studies in glass under a big glass dome. Vases with delicate handles, miniature table lamps, pretty birds with gauze like wings, and a score of other intricate and beautiful designs are readily fashioned by the master craftsman, and not least among the wonders of this show is the endless thread of spider-web like glass the 1400th part of an inch thick, that Mr. Pitcher spins from an ordinary glass tube. Every visitor is given a sample of the glass-blower's work.

Of particular interest to the large number of farmers attending the exhibition on Saturday will be Hayward's pony circus. Mr. Hayward, himself a farmer, taught the ponies tricks until he had produced the most wonderful troupe of trained animals known. The ponies skate, add figures, and do many intellectual feats that the average man finds difficult enough.

Colonel W. D. Pedro has a unique show in his big circus tent. The Colonel served with Villa in the Mexican rebellion and after escaping from the country of perpetual warfare and exhibiting pictures of the battle operations when his pictures were seized and the show closed. He has come on to Peterborough with the natural wonders he picked up in Mexico, and is here demonstrating his power over snakes and his ability to work in beads. Among the exhibits are a quirt that Villa carried during his campaign and a devil child from New Mexico.

Strong Man's Challenge.

George Walker, heavyweight wrestling champion of Canada, challenges the strong man to be found in every community, and it is said he usually wins in the tests of strength. The famous anchor man of the Board of Works' team has been named as a possible opponent for the husky "strong man."

In the "Collection of Strange People", John Nalon, who has been in the profession since boyhood, presents the unusual in humanity. Among those to be seen are Claire Thelma, a beautiful mind reader, and Electricia, who sits in a chair modelled after that in Sing Sing while electric current s turned through her body.

Ggole alley is all that its name suggests. The bluest man in Peterborough will see a joke if he enters here and the humorist will probably need medical assistance to overcome his giggles.

The mystery show, where a living head appears on a board and a half lady, Menita, moves and speaks, is educative and interesting, as is also the Canadian War Exhibit, in charge of Mrs. Mabel Monahan.

Other attractions are the balloon buster, that cost $3,000 to instal; houpla, "pitch till you win," dart games of several varieties, big tom, spill the mik, and guess your weight.

All Clean; All Alive.

Everyone, from the child seeing his first exhibition to the hardened follower of every amusement troupe, will find something interesting in the aggregation of features presented by the International Amusement Company, and the most moral of uplifters cannot find a fault with a single show.

As for the contention of some that these shows come to town and take away all the money, when The Examiner asked Mr. Lavoie if this is so he smilingly said it might be in some places where the carters work for nothing and the butchers supply free meat and the bakers give their bread gratis. As it is in a city like Peterborough the show people spend about $200 on moving from station to fair grounds; they buy food and clothing, and board in hotels and rooming houses.

DARROW'S PLEA MASTER STROKE

Chicago Lawyer Visiting at Campbellford Explains Features of Caverley's Decision.

CAUSE OF CRITICISM.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12.—W. H. Stevenson, a Chicago lawyer, who has been spending a short vacation at Healey Falls, was naturally interested in the sentence of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, the youths of that city who pleaded guilty of murder. The news that those defendants, instead of being sent to the gallows, were sentenced by Chief Justice Caverly to the penitentiary for life, was brought to Campbellford by The Examiner of Wednesday, six hours in advance of the Toronto evening and 24 hours ahead of the morning papers of that city.

Mr. Stevenson left for home yesterday, but before his departure he discussed the case, throwing considerable light upon the operations of the criminal law in Illinois, for every State in the American Union has its own code.

The Pardoning Power.

"The public," Mr. Stevenson said, "would not be disposed to criticize the sentence if there was any assurance that it would be carried out to the letter and that the defendants would be kept in confinement for the remainder of their lives. But it is the doubt on this point that causes all the uneasiness and hostile criticism.

"The Governor of every State in the American Union is invested with absolute pardoning powers, and may at his own discretion set free any criminal convicted in a State court. If the offender has been convicted in a Federal court, then the pardoning power belongs to the President. In some States, Michigan for example, they have a Pardoning Board, but the functions of the members are purely advisory, and the Governor can act independent of these findings whether they recommend in favor or against a pardon.

"There has been in the past more than one arbitrary exercise of this power by Governors. When the Chicago anarchists were convicted in 1887 in one of the most famous court trials of the age, four of them were hanged and three sent to the penitentiary for life. The liberation of these prisoners was made an issue in every election for Governor—held every two years—until the late J. P. Aitgeld, known as a friend of the anarchists, was elected in 1893. One of his first official acts on taking office was to set these prisoners at liberty, so that the moral lesson taught by their conviction and punishment was lost.

History to Repeat Itself.

"There is no doubt that after the feeling created by the sentence of Leopold and Loeb has subsided, that a movement will be started to secure their release. Quietly this movement may be conducted, but nevertheless it is certain to be an issue every two years, when a Governor is chosen. The convicted anarchists served six years in prison; the terms put in by Leopold and Loeb may be even shorter.

Clever Defence.

"The clever work of the counsel for the defence had much to do with saving the necks of his youthful clients. To have them plead guilty on all counts was a masterstroke. No judge will accept a defendant's plea of guilty of a capital offence without investigation into his mental status and other circumstances.

"In Chicago courts it is the jury, not the judge, who decides the punishment to be administered the defendant whom they find guilty. That is to say, the jury either sends to the gallows or to the penitentiary the person convicted of murder.

"Leopold and Loeb would have fared worse if a jury had pronounced their final sentence. A jury is always influenced by popular clamor and is not likely to spin such fine legal threads as a man versed in all the technicalities of the law.

"Anyway, the world is safer with such paraoniacs, such moral degenerates as these two young men so disposed of that they can work no more of their diabolical schemes. That they should ever be liberated to menace society again would be a calamity as well as a reflection on the administration of justice in Illinois."

THE TOO-EASY LIFE.

Have you ever stopped to think what this world would be like if nothing went wrong?

We often sigh for the Milenium, Are we certain we should enjoy it?

One of the greatest thinkers of the last century faced this problem like an honest man. "There is no epic of the certainties," was in his conclusion. He meant that you would never enjoy reading about a man who was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and spent the rest of his life in eating out of it everything he wanted. The epic you love is the epic of accident and uncertainty, the epic of fear and sorrow, of struggle and victory, of courage and endurance.

Do not let us, then, complain, about this world. Do you remember the famous Belgian verses: "Life is vain: A little hate. . . And then—good-day! Life is short: A little hope. A little dream. . And then—good-night!" There is a third and far finer verse, seldom quoted:

La vie est telle
Que Dieu la fit;
Et telle, quelle,
Elle suffit!

Which means, "Life is as God made it, and, as it is, it suffices."

We can imagine no grander life for a man. Every hardship, every difficulty, every darkness, calls for a hero.

Other worldliness alone can transform this world, because the other world is the reality of which this is the shadow.—Dean Inge.

NO MORE TEARS BY FILM STARS

Screen Plays of the Future to Transfer Emotional Climax to the Fans.

By THEODORE ROBERTS.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—The motion picture of the future? It will differ from the screen play of today in two essentials:

1. Spectators will "emote" for themselves.

2. It will deal with absolute facts.

In foretelling these changes I am not relying on guesswork; I am drawing my conclusions from the pictures of today and the success which greets the picture which progresses along the twin lines I have just indicated.

To understand what I mean by the phrase "permitting the spectators to 'emote' for themselves," it is necessary to know something of the old and rival schools of French and German stage acting. The French school succeeded so well and produced so much that was fine because it permitted the audience to experience its own emotional reactions; the German school believed in doing everything before the eyes of the audience, giving that audience absolutely no opportunity to share in the "emoting."

The French school believed in showing the reasons for a great tragedy and then permitting the audience to feel it for themselves, the German training forced the actor to play out the tragedy in detail, leaving the audience to admire but never share in the emotions of the player.

Big Change Has Come.

When motion pictures outgrew the stage of mechanical novelties the producers elected to follow the German model in screen acting. The public, delighted with the new entertainment, demanded to see every facial expression and every detail of "how the actor did it."

But in the past decade there has come about a tremendous change in the public. They have been educated past the abvious and are demanding more subtle entertainment values. Unconsciously the screen audiences of the world are insisting on sharing in the emotional crisis of the photoplays instead of merely watching them.

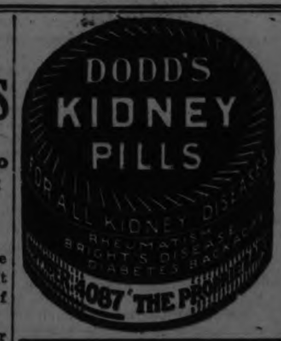
Let the Audience Weep.

All this I can illustrate by describing the scenes—the old and the new. In a picture of a few years ago in which the star was to convey a feeling of great sorrow, he or she would have been called upon to cry a few real tears in huge close-ups for many feet of exposed film.

In the picture of the future the star will tell the story of this great sorrow, but when it comes to the climax the player will turn from the camera and bury his head in his arms. But the audience will carry on, doing their own crying if the actor's work has been convincing.

Just as the spectators of today and tomorrow demand an emotional share in the screen play, so, too, they will demand absolute realism and facts. News reels, travelogues and educational films in general have taught the public what is real and what is false.

After seeing real men die in a real battle the motion picture audience will not be content with the falsely theatrical death scenes which were the stock in trade of the old school actors and directors.



FABLES ON HEALTH.

Mrs. Mann was an immaculate housekeeper, so there was little need to admonish her regarding cleanliness of washbowls.

But many people are careless and here lies a fertile field for germ passage and infection. Careful washing of bathtubs and bowls should not be neglected.

A little borax will keep a porcelain tub free from stains and discolorations while bathing, and when cleansing the tub or washbowl wring a cloth in fine suds and rub soap over this, sprinkling with borax.

Flannel dipped in parraffin makes a good rub for cleansing the enamel and a little gasoline on a woollen cloth can be used in removing dirt and at the same time leaving a polish.

Calomel Is the Only Drug Known That Acts Upon the Liver

To feel your best, day in and day out, to eat well, digest well, feel well, work well, sleep well, you must keep your liver active or the system soon becomes filled with poison, causing a multitude of trouble, as headaches, gas on stomach, constipation, kidney pains, foul breath, etc. Don't forget to start to-morrow and take two tablets of Tanol Calomel before meals or two at bedtime, then the next morning jump from your bed and drink a cup of hot water. This washes all the previous day's waste from the system, making you feel 100 per cent. better in every way. These simple Tanol Calomel Tablets can be obtained from F. C. Weber, Charlotte Street.

Advertising Rates on application.

R. M. GLOVER, Managing Director.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1924.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS.

There was a time not long ago when few of the local manufacturers thought it worth while to make an exhibit at the Industrial Exhibition—indeed, there was little to tempt them to do so and very little accommodation at their disposal.

This year's Exhibition is notable in the contrast in this respect it differs to the past.

The displays of Peterborough manufacturers form a striking feature that has attracted much attention.

The extent and variety of the city's industrial concerns are reflected by the splendid showing made by these concerns.

It is good advertising, not only for the firms themselves, but for Peterborough.

The exhibits impress visitors with the industrial activity of the city, and they serve to educate local citizens in regard to their own industries.

As a community we do not sufficiently appreciate the extent of Peterborough's manufacturing concerns, and the special exhibits at the Exhibition help to correct that state of affairs.

The displays in the manufacturers' and main buildings deserve more than a passing visit.

THE CHILDREN'S CHANCE.

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition desereve commendation, for their decision to admit children tomorrow at the nominal price of five cents.

Wednesday, the day arranged as Children's Day, when there was no admission charge, was spoiled by a downpour of rain, and the children were deprived of a chance to see many of the features prepared for their entertainment.

Naturally there was keen disappointment among the children and among their parents as well, and the opportunity afforded by the five-cent rate tomorrow will be very welcome.

Parents should show their appreciation of the generosity of the directors by helping to swell tomorrow's crowd to record proportions.

There is much for the little folks to see, in addition to the attractions in front of the grandstand and the midway features.

The dog show, the poultry exhibits, the display of black foxes and other features of this nature should not be neglected in favour of the amusement items on the programme.

With a purely nominal charge for children young Peterborough should be even more largely represented at the Exhibition tomorrow than on the opening day.

YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY.

Tomorrow, the final day of the Exhibition, has been designated as Farmers' Day, and it is expected that the visitors from outside will reach their highest mark.

At the same time the city attendance should also assume record proportions.

Every department of the Exhibition will be in full swing, of course, tomorrow, as no exhibits or displays can be removed.

The entertainment features reserved for the last day make the programme perhaps the best of the whole Exhibition, so that there is every reason to anticipate a huge attendance.

Saturday affords the citizens their last opportunity to make the 1924 Exhibition the most successful on record.

It is agreed that in the quality and number of exhibits, in the wealth of special displays, in the extent and variety of the midway, in the excellence of its vaudeville and the merit of its horse racing, this year's Exhibition has established a new standard.

That is most gratifying; but what would be still more satisfactory and pleasing would be the reaching of a high level attendance.

Exhibitions, like individuals or business firms, cannot get along without the sinews of war.

It costs a lot of money to run an exhibition on the scale the local fair has reached.

The amount paid out in prizes and for special features reaches an astonishly high total, and other expenditures are necessarily large.

That means that if the Exhibition is to keep its head above water and to expand as its management desires the gate receipts will have to keep pace with the expenditures.

Much depends upon tomorrow, therefore, and the Examiner urges the community to rally behind the Exhibition Board and make the last day's attendance a milestone in the history of the fair.

WHY YOU GET TIRED.

Fatigue is largely a state of mind. Physical exhaustion is decidedly a secondary reason. Dr. Evans, distinguished medical man, makes this claim in a speech to the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

He has some ideas that will enable many people to get more work accomplished without "minding it."

The physical or bodily phase of fatigue, says Dr. Evans, is caused by accumulation of lactic acid in the muscles.

Use of trained muscles is not followed by stiffness, because the trained muscle has better circulation of the blood through it. This brings more oxygen to the muscles, and the lactic acid is removed by oxidation. That is to say, the lactic acid combines with the oxygen and is carried away, the same as iron combines with the oxygen of air and produces rust.

You've had the experience of doing work you're not accustomed to—such as rowing a boat or chopping wood on vacation. Next day your muscles are filled with lactic acid and feel stiff. Keep up the hard work and soon your muscles are not stiff and aching next day. Your blood has gotten in the habit of circulating through the muscles, formerly dormant or not used, and the lactic acid is oxidized and eliminated.

So, if a physical task seems hard, all that's needed to make it easy is to keep at it—"develop unused muscles."

Marvelous chemical machine, the human body.

The main cause of fatigue is a state of mind, Dr. Evans claims. By "state of mind" he apparently means monotony or lack of interest.

Lack of interest gives us a tired feeling even before we start a disagreeable or uninviting task. If we grit our teeth and plunge into it, we find that the mental weariness vanishes. Interest awakens. Desire to finish—the urge to accomplish victory—spurs us on.

Unfortunately, monotony is the leading cause of fatigue. Mother gets weary of cooking food and washing dishes. It isn't so much the actual work of the thing, for more laborious tasks tire her less. It's the eternal sameness and unending repetition that worry her. The monotony is cheerfully forgotten when father remembers that she's a girl at heart—his old-time sweetheart, enjoying shows or dances as much as ever.

Monotonous work usually is in a monotonous environment.

No one is ever as tired as he thinks he is.

THE BLOOD OF OUR ANCESTORS.

We make a mistake in attaching undue importance to our material and physical disabilities. It may be that there is instability in commerce; that production is unbalanced; that high costs for labor and materials and in the way of complete deflation; that public extravagance has brought about onerous taxes; that the savings of the people are being sapped to pay for the prodigalities of governments, and that debt is mounting. All that is undoubtedly true. But we need not be pessimistic if we can be sure of one thing: That we will be true to the ancestral blood that is in our veins.

We should be proud of our inheritance in that regard. It is priceless. The very memory of what our forefathers endured to lay the foundations of the Canada of today should shame us from even the semblance of pessimism.

A century, or a century and a half ago, the greater part of the very heart of the Dominion was an unbroken wilderness. What turned the primeval forest into smiling farm homes and prosperous urban communities? The courage and tenacity and toil of our pioneers did it. Those early settlers were confronted by difficulties which would have daunted all but the bravest. But they met them without weakness. They hewed and ploughed and planted in hope, perhaps little dreaming of the Canada that was to be, and counting lightly their hardships and privations.

That is the spirit we need today. It is vital. It rises above all material considerations. It carried our red-blooded ancestors through the loneliness and trials of pioneer years, and challenges us today to meet the inevitable aftermath of a great war with corresponding optimism.

The spirit of the people is paramount. We shall have to make a fresh appraisement of our advancing civilization if it has made us flabby and afraid—if it has killed out the fine courage and will to achieve which our patient and plodding pioneers left to us. No richer legacy could have been ours; for spiritual forces always count for more in the final reckoning than do the material. If we have grown timid or cowardly; if we quit in the face of temporary adversities; if we murmur when the tide of progress has merely been checked; if we are not disposed to meet obstacles with grim determination and clenched fists—then we may be sure that the blood of our forbears has run out.

If, however, that ancestral blood is still in our veins, we may smile at those who make a poor mouth over the things which have checked our pace in the onward and upward march. We may count on the spirit of the pioneers to sustain us until the tide turns. We may do more. We may rely on that spirit to curb what rashness has come into our public life, and to call us back to the safety of prudence. It is not necessary that we should return to their simplicity of life, nor deny ourselves those comforts which are the reward of successful effort; but we should assert a little bit of their readiness to bear with disabilities without growing discouraged. We should not be afraid to take off our coats and buckle to the tasks which lie at hand.

A true appreciation of our heritage should silence every grumbler in the land. It should crush out the last trace of class consciousness and class selfishness.

In the days before yesterday every man did his part in the hard work of laying our national substructure. Co-operation came as the units grew strong. Our forefathers fought against special privileges, and stood for a virile democracy. We should not forget that. Their ideals were sound. They pulled together. They knew no eight-hour day and abhorred waste. They shrank from debt. What they could not afford they did without. And if we have got away from those safe principles the very blood in our veins should rebuke us. It should also be the impelling force in whatever of effort, daring and persistence—above all persistence—may be necessary to carry us on t oour high destiny as a nation. If we are fearful and lagging, it can only be because we have forgotten our history as a people.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Make Saturday the record day in the history of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

The visit of Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt has been one of the most notable of the many features distinguishing this year's Exhibition.

Canadian press comment almost unanimously condemns the verdict in the Chicago murder case. The millionaire murderers would have stood a slim chance on this side of the line.

The handling of the automobile problem at the Exhibition this year has been most favourably commented upon by the majority of visitors. The west end of the grounds has been kept entirely clear of motor cars.

It is estimated that tourists from the United States spent $118,000,000 in Canada last year. The tourist traffic has developed into one of the biggest Canadian industries and is well worth cultivating.

Still no definite announcement in regard to the O. T. A. plebiscite questions. Surely Premier Ferguson hasn't forgotten the vote is to be taken next month.

The Prince of Wales is securing a lot of front page publicity that in a presidential election year would usually go to the politicians.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—There was a fairly good clean-up of all Ontario offerings at steady prices. Six cars of cattle from the western provinces consigned to the H. P. Kennedy Company arrived rather too late in the week for this market, the packers being already well supplied with anything fit to kill, and stocker requirements filled for the week, the whole consignment of westerners was shipped over the border to Lancaster, Pennsylvania. This practically cleaned up the market of all this week's offerings excepting a few odds and ends.

Prices generally steady and unchanged from Wednesday's quotations, showing a little higher average for the week on good butcher cattle.

In the small meats, receipts were light and prices steady, except for lambs, which were about 25c lower at $12.75 tops.

Hogs settled on basis of $9 f.o.b., but market is weak and lower prices are predicted for next week.

Prices in the various sections are as follows:

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers $6.75 to $7.75; good store cattle $6 to $6.50; fair $5.50 to $5.75; heifers $5.50 to $6.75; heavy cows $4.50 to $4.75; bulls $3.50 to $4.25.

Choice butchers $6 to $7; medium $5.25 to $5.75; fair $5.25 to $5.50; common $3.50 to $4.50; baby beeves $3.50 to $10.50.

Choice fat cows $3.50 to $4.75.

Stockers and feeders — Choice short-keep feeders, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs., $5.50 to $6; steers, 900 to 1,000 lbs., $4.50 to $5; choice stockers, 800 to 950 lbs., $4.25 to $4.50; light western stock, $3.50 to $4; choice western $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and lambs—Lambs, choice, $11.50 to $12.75; culls 8c to 10c; medium 6½c to 7½c; heavy sheep and bucks 4½c to 6c; buck lambs, $10.50 to $11.

Calves—Choice veal calves $11 to $12; medium $6 to $8.50; heavy $5.50 to $7.50.

Hogs—Thick, smooth, f.o.b., $9; fed and watered $9.60; off cars $10; selects, off cars, $11.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Huge export sales, said to total as much as 7,000,000 bushels, hoisted the wheat market yesterday. Corn, oats and rye were also sharply advanced. All grains closed strong at virtually the day's top figures; wheat 3 7-8 to 5c net higher, December 133 3-8 to 132½ and May 138 7-8 to 139; corn 3c to 4 3-8c up; oats at 1 3-8, 1½ to 1 5-8c gain, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 17c.

It was evident that the Canadian Government crop report was largely responsible for the unusual activity on the part of foreign buyers.

AN ADDITION TO BOOK SOCIALISM

Members of Social Injure Themselves By Punishing Others.

LONDON, Sept. 11. — (Canadian Press).—That the present day tendencies among workers threaten ideals of genuine socialism is the fear expressed by Premier Macdonald in preface he has written for an addition to his book on socialism. After defending Socialism as evolutionary not revolutionary, Premier writes:

"Revolutionary and materialistic frames of mind created by war are becoming a serious menace to the socialistic spirit of the common service. Profiteering has become universal. Evil is not confined to classes generally designated as profiteers but has infected all sections."

The Premier complains that in a legitimate struggle to remedy hard and unjust conditions the workers being tempted to force. They are independent members of social union and consequently injure only themselves by punishing those against whom they have grievance to such extent they injure society to which they belong.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Load of Lumber Upset On Youth Riding on Truck.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Pinned under a heavy load of lumber when the Bath stage which he was riding, went into a ditch Thursday, Aubrey Amory, of Millhaven, 18 years old, was crushed to death. The stage was being used to transfer a large load of lumber from Ernesttown and was about a mile and a half east of Bath when the truck went off the road and into the ditch, turning completeely over. The deceased was lying on the lumber at the back part of the load, and when the truck went over he was caught by the shifting lumber and crushed to death by its weight. The driver, Henry Calver, was thrown from his seat but escaped with only a few scratches. No definite reason could be given for the accident.

TREATY WAS FAKE.

Lloyd George Says Anglo-Russian Treaty is Folly.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).— Speaking at Pennaemir, Wales, last night former Premier Lloyd George declared that the Anglo-Russian treaty was a fake and folly which had been hastily patched up at the end of the recent session of parliament because Premier MacDonald had been held up by Socialist gunmen of his own party. He declared it was an act of criminal recklessness at such a time to guarantee huge sums of money to be spent in another country by the Government whose principles were predatory.

Lloyd George in other remarks is regarded as assuming that the Liberals will join with Conservatives in defeating the Government on the Anglo-Russian treaty when it comes before the Parliament for ratification and the Government will be obliged to treat the vote as one of no confidence and will be compelled to resign

THE SIXTH SENSE.

A MAN may be ever so sensible, but if he is so dreadfully earnest all the time, his sense palls on us.

He may have plenty of experience, a liberal education and a lot of common sense, but if he lacks the sense of humor, he is often unhappy and so is everybody else around him.

We see enough, hear too much, smell the disagreeable, touch the agreeable, taste the bitter with the sweet—we enjoy all these five senses, but the sixth sense is the sense of humor.

The sense of humor defends us from the insanities and often saves us from ourselves. The sense of humor softens the rough inequalities of everyday existence. Try it.

JUDGE TAKES OATH.

County Officials Present at Ceremony in Cobourg.

COBOURG, Sept. 12.—(Special).—An interesting junction took place here yesterday afternoon at the Court House, when Judge Graham Cameron, who had arrived in town shortly before from Goderich, took the oath of office before a number of county officials and members of the legal fraternity. He was sworn in as judge of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. The ceremony took place in the judge's chambers. Judge Cameron was introduced by Judge Ward, the retiring county judge. Mr. W. F. Kerr, K.C., offered a warm welcome on behalf of the legal profession.

Judge Cameron, in reply, asked for the same co-operation from the officials and legal profession as had been accorded to Judge Ward, and expressed his pleasure at being here.

Among those present were Sheriff Nesbitt, John T. Field, court clerk; F. D. Boggs, K.C.; T. F. Hall, K.C.; Archie Cochrane, Col. Neil F. MacNachton, C.V.O.; W. H. Smith, Deputy Sheriff; Geo. McLaughlin, and J. F. McMillan, also Mr. R. S. Chelton, all of Cobourg, and W. A. F. Campbell and W. F. McMahon of Port Hope.

SCARF WRAPS.

Scarf wraps of double georgette edged with ostrich feathers are very attractive over dainty summer frocks.

SLIGHT CURVE

The tailleur with a slight curve at the waistline is much snappier than the one with merely a sock coat.

WIDE BRIM.

CORN GROWING CONTEST HELD CAMPBELLFORD

C. H. Curtis Carried Off First Prize With the High Total of 89 Points.

OSCAR LAVER 2ND.

James McLean, of the Ontario Agricultural Department Acted as Judge.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12.—Jas. McLean, who represents the branch of the Ontario Agricultural Department that is presided over by J. Lockie Wilson, returned to Campbellford last night after spending the day judging the corn in the standing field competition conducted under the auspices of the Percy Agricultural Society.

The following were the winners with the number of points scored by each out of a possible 100:

C. H. Curtis	89
Oscar Laver	88½
Alfred Merrill	87
William Hawkey	84½
George McCubbin	84
M. H. Peterson	82½
W. J. Ross	81½
Harry Aylesworth	81
Richard Honey	80
W. A. Atkinson	78½

Some of the competitors lost two points because the seed that they had planted was not the standard variety.

Mr. Curtis had a fine crop, of uniform stand, well cultivated, and with the cobs well developed. He has by winning the first prize in this competition vindicated his reputation as one of the best farmers in the township.

Mr. McLean, who in his official capacity has travelled all over the province, says that the farms in Percy township compare favorably with those in any part of Ontario. Some of the best oat crops he has seen this year were still standing in stooks in the fields as he made his rounds yesterday.

He will judge the corn in Seymour Township to-day, and as the ground he covers is extensive he does not expect to complete his work before to-morrow.

Athletic Association

The High School Athletic Association with a department for boys and another for girls, was re-organized for the coming season yesterday by the election of the following officers:

Girls' Department — M. Irwin, president; Kathleen Bygott, secretary; E. Stephens (mathematical master) treasurer; executive committee, Hazel Thomas, Peter Sarginson, Peter Abernethy, Cherrie Turner, Kythrin Irwin, Isabel Bygott.

Boys' Department—E. Thomas, president; I. Ibey, secretary; E. Stephens, treasurer, executive commitee, J. Haig, A. Henry, A. Little, B. Reynolds and E. Fox.

The immediate purpose of the association is to prepare for the annual field day the date for which has not yet been selected but which will probably be held on the Friday following the Campbellford Fair.

Won French Scholarship

Miss Gertrude Murphy who wrote at the recent Middle School examinations; won the scholarship awarded by the I.O.D.E. for proficiency in French. Miss Murphy's home is in Lindsay but for the past year she has been staying with her brother, Dr. W. A. Murphy, while she attended the High School.

Record Attendance

The attendance at the High School is the greatest in its history and there are still more students in prospect. The number coming from the country is especially encouraging but no definite figures will be given out until all are enrolled.

Clash in Dates.

Some time ago the members of the Cheese Board wrote the Ontario Department of Agriculture, asking that a session of the Agricultural Enquiry Committee, that is making a tour of the Province investigating conditions on the farm, be held here to discuss the marketing of cheese.

The reply was that if Campbellford was not included in the itinerary the committee would hold a session in a neighboring town, within easy reach of these in this place who are interested in the matters discussed.

Much disappointment has been caused among dairy and other farmers in this district by the announcement that the committee is to meet in Peterboro on the 26th inst., which happens to be the date of the Campbellford Fair.

County Official Here.

R. McVicar, Provincial highway engineer, was in Campbellford yesterday, and in company with Mayor Meyers, inspected the work being done in widening the roadway at the sharp curve on Sebastopol Street, on which the town is expending the county grant of $1,600. Everything so far appeared to meet with official approval.

The New Bridge.

When the new floor is laid on the bridge it will require 28 days for the material to set, so that no matter how fast the work of repairing is carried on, it will be a long time yet before the bridge is opened for traffic.

High School Vs. Clerks.

U.F.O. SHIPPING BOARD MEETING

Stock Handled By South Monaghan Board Valued at $35,000.

REPORT GRATIFIES.

BAILIEBORO, September 12. — The annual business meeting of the U.F.O. Shipping Board was held on Monday evening in the U.F.O. Hall, Centreville, on Monday evening.

Considering the disagreeable weather which prevailed on that evening there was a large attendance.

The principal business of the evening was the report of the secretary-treasurer of the business which was transacted through the shipping of live stock through the South Monaghan U.F.O. Shipping Board for the past year, and also to elect the new officers for the ensuing year.

The report of the secretary-treasurer went to show that the total number of stock that have been shipped through the Shipping Board during the past year was as follows: 227 cattle, 217 calves, 290 sheep, 1,079 hogs. The total value of the stock shipped amounted to about $35,000

The report was very gratifying to all of those who were interested in the shipping of live stock through this organisation, as the Board have only a small territory to work in, and also considering the strong opposition which they have.

After all expenses were paid it was found that the Board had a good balance still in the bank.

The officers for the past year were as follows:

Arthur Wood, shipper.
Jos. White, president
Wilbur Barnard, secretary-treasurer.

Directors were: S. Donaldson, E. Anderson, E. Dawson, W. Waterman

The new officers for the ensuing year are:

Fred Wood, president.
Williard Waterman, secretary-treasurer.

Directors, H. McFee, H. Dawson, Wm. McElroy, G. Bebee.

The question of buying a new set of scales for the stock yard was also discussed, and it was decided that the Board attempt to purchase a new set directly.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept 12—The regular monthly meeting of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire was held in the Public Library in Wednesday afternoon. After the regular business, plans were started to have a home cooking sale and afternoon tea.

A special feature of the afternoon was the presentation of fifteen beautiful pictures of the war already framed to the schools of the town. These were donated by the Educational Department of the I.O.D.E. As the holidays are over the meetings will be held regularly and efforts made to swell the fund for the war memorial. The Regent and other officers are anxious that this year will be as successful as the past years have been and ask for the co-operation of all the members and other ladies who wish to join.

Wedding Anniversary

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Deputy-Reeve and Mrs. Dorie, Sebastapool street, on Wednesday night, September 10th, when about twenty-five of their friends and neighbors were invited to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding. The bride and groom of thirty years ago wore orange blossoms and received the congratulatins of their guests.

The evening was spent with cards, music, singing and games.

The host and hostess received some very beautiful presents.

tA the close of the evening a very dainty lunch was served.

Mr. W. J. Armstrong and daughter Miss Lena, Frent street, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell, Queen street motored to Baltimore on Sunday and visited Mr. Bell's brother, Mr. A. Bell and Mrs. Bell.

Mr. Harry Bakes, Kent street, has had his house bricked thus improving its appearance.

Miss Allie Graham who has been the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Longmore and Mrs. James Dickson, returned this week to her home in Calgary. She will spend a few days in Toronto visiting friends.

Mr .A. W. Gibbon of Peterboro, motored to Campbellford, and is spending a week in town on business.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Free, Hastings Road received word that on September 10th., their son, Mr. Ralph Free and Mrs. Free have a little baby daughter, (Kathleen Louise).

Mrs. Margaret McCredie, Miss Nellie Scott and Master Jack McCredie of Meyersburg, who have been spending a week in Rochester, returned to their home on Thursday night.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast—Stewed prunes, cooked wheat cereal, top milk, broiled finnan haddie, breakfast rolls, well toasted rolled oats, bread, coffee, cocoa.

Luncheon—steamed spinach, graham bread sandwiches with fruit and nut filling, iced tea, orange juice.

Dinner—Fricassee of chicken, mashed potatoes, boiled onions, apple and nut salad, junket ice cream, coffee, milk.

If there is a real baby in the family who does not come to the table, he may have a tablespoon of the spinach put through a puree strainer for his two o'clock "feeding." The juice of the prunes will please him at 8 o'clock.

When you are serving iced tea you will find orange juice a delightful drink for the small folk. They won't beg for "just a taste" of the tea, but be healthy and happy with their own special beverage.

Children under six years of age may eat the white meat of chicken, the potatoes, onions finely chopped, and 2 tablespoons of the ice cream, eaten very slowly. Finely chopped apple without the nuts or dressing should be the salad.

It's the most natural thing in the world for kiddies to love sweets and in the dried fruits such as prunes, dates and figs they can satisfy this appetite.

Graham Sandwiches.

Four tablespoons chopped dates, 2 tablespoons chopped nuts, orange juice to make moist, thin slices graham bread, butter.

Pour boiling water over dates. Drain and plunge into cold water. Drain and when dry remove stones and put through food chopper.

Put nuts through food chopper and add to dates. Mix with orange juice to make moist and spread on thin slices of buttered graham bread.

Sandwiches, even plain bread and butter, are nicer for children than unsandwiched bread and butter. There is less danger of sticky and buttery little fingers.

Many grown-ups dislike cereals for breakfast, but a well cooked cereal is necessary for growing children. So if the elders must have something other than cereal, give it to them, but be sure to serve a cereal. Children under six should not be given the uncooked, ready-to-serve cereals. Older ones will like them for a change and mothers will find them a boon on busy mornings.

The children will not indulge in the fish, breakfast rolls or coffee suggested for the breakfast.

Four Inclement Days Hit Ottawa Exhibition

OTTAWA, September 12 (Canadian Press) — Rain and cold greeted the fourth day of the Central Canada Exhibition, and it was not expected very many persons would attend the Fair on Thursday.

This is the fourth consecutive day that inclement weather has prevailed, and the directors feel rather discouraged after their months of hard work trying to make this year's Exhibition a record-breaker.

PAYING.

Poland is the next European country to arranged for paying her debt to America. England was first. Poland is living within its income, no deficit, and announces she is ready to pay Uncle Sam in instalments, $500,000 to come immediately.

As times passes, it begins to look as if we'll get back more of our war loans than even the most optimistic hoped a few years ago. Poland is wise. Meeting her obligations will strengthen her credit abroad.

TALKERS.

In using a phone, keep your lips close to the mouthpiece if you want to be heard clearly. Experiments show that if the mouth is an inch away from the transmitter it is equivalent to adding 100 miles to the distance talked over the wires. Two inch, 200 miles. And so on.

This may seem like a very small matter. But it's these simple things, incorrectly done, that cause a lot of inefficiency, delay and irritation.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protect Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens; and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea captain, Jasper Leigh, to abduct him and sell him as a galley-slave. With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial.

His ship, the Swallow, is along the coast of Portugal when Leigh orders his prisoner brought before him. He offers for a price to take Oliver back to England.

Sir Oliver looked at him and smiled grimly.

"Now what a rogue are you that can keep faith with none!" he cried. "First you take money to carry me off; and then you bid me pay you to carry me back again."

"Ye wrong me, sir, I vow ye do! I can keep faith when honest men employ me, and ye should know it, Sir Oliver. But who keeps faith with rogues is a fool—and that I am not, as ye should also know. I ha' done this thing that a rogue might be revealed to you and thwarted, as well as that I might make some little profit out of this ship o' mine. I am frank with ye, Sir Oliver. I ha' had some two hundred pound in money and trinkets from your brother. Give me the like and——"

But now of a sudden Sir Oliver's listlessness was all dispelled. It fell from him like a cloak, and he sat forward, wide awake and with some show of anger even.

"How do you say?" he cried, on a sharp, high note.

The captain stared at him, his pipe neglected.

"I say that if so be as ye'll pay me the same sum which your brother paid me to carry you off——"

"My brother?" roared the knight. "Do you say my brother?"

"I said your brother."

"Master Lionel?" the other demanded still.

"What other brothers have you?" quoth Master Leigh.

There fell a pause and Sir Oliver looked straight before him, his head sunken a little between his shoulders.

"Let me understand," he said at length. "Do you say that my brother Lionel paid you money to carry me off—in short, that my presence aboard this foul hulk of yours is due to him?"

"Whom else had ye suspected? Or did ye think that I did it for my own personal diversion?"

"Answer me!" bellowed Sir Oliver, writhing in his bonds.

"I ha' answered you more than once already. Still, I tell you once again, since ye are slow to understand it, that I was paid a matter of two hundred pound by your brother, Master Lionel Tressilian, to carry you off to Barbary and there sell you for a slave. Is that plain to you?"

"As plain as it is false. You lie, you dog!"

"Softly, softly!" quoth Master Leigh good-humoredly.

"I say you lie!"

Master Leigh considered him a moment.

"Sets the wind so!" said he at length, and without another word he rose and went to a sea-chest ranged against the wooden wall of the cabin.

He opened it and took thence a leather bag. From this he produced a handful of jewels. He thrust them under Sir Oliver's nose.

"Haply," said he, "ye'll be acquainted with some of them. They was given me to make up the sum since your brother had not the whole two hundred pound in coin. Take a look at them."

Sir Oliver recognized a ring and a long pear-shaped pearl earring that had been his brother's; he recognized a medallion that he himself had given Lionel two years ago; and so one by one, he recognized every trinket placed before him.

His head drooped to his breast, and he sat thus like a man stunned.

"My God!" he groaned miserably, at last. "Who, then, is left me! Lionel, too! Lionel!"

A sob shook the great frame. Two tears slowly trickled down that haggard face and were lost in the stubble of beard upon his chin.

"I am cursed!" he said.

Never without such evidence could he have believed this thing. From the moment that he was beset outside the gates of Godolphin Court he had conceived it to be the work of Rosamund, and his listlessness was begotten of the thought that she could have suffered conviction of his guilt and her hatred of him to urge her to such lengths as these.

This conviction had been gall and wormwood to him; it had drugged his very senses, reducing him to a listless indifference to any fate that might be reserved him. Yet it had not been so bitter a draft as this present revelation. After all, in her case there were some grounds for the hatred that had come to take the place of her erstwhile love. But in Lionel's what grounds were possible? What motives could exist for such an action as this, other than a monstrous, a loathly egoism which desired perhaps to insure that the blame for the death of Peter Godolphin should not be shifted from the shoulders that were unjustly bearing it, and the accursed desire to profit by the removal of the man who had been brother, father and all else to him?

He shuddered in sheer horror. It was incredible, and yet beyond a doubt it was true. For all the love which he had showered upon Lionel, for all the sacrifices of self which he had made to shield him, this was Lionel's return. Were all the world against him he still must have believed Lionel true to him, and in that belief must have been enheartened a little. And now— His sense of loneliness of utter destitution overwhelmed him. Then slowly of his sorrow resentment was begotten, and being begotten it grew rapidly until it filled his mind and whelmed in its turn all else.

"Master Leigh," said he, "what is your price to carry me home again to England?"

"Why, Sir Oliver," said he, "I think the price I was paid to carry you off would be a fair one. The one would wipe out t'other as it were."

"You shall have twice the sum when you land me on Trefusis point again," was the instant answer.

The captain's little eyes blinked and his shaggy red eyebrows came together in a frown. Here was too speedy an acquiescence. There must be guile behind it, or he knew nought of the ways of men.

"What mischief are ye brooding?" he sneered.

"Mischief, man? To you?" Sir Oliver laughed hoarsely. "God's light, knave, d'ye think I consider you in this matter, or d'ye think I've room in my mind for such petty resentments together with that other?"

It was the truth. So absolute was the bitter sway of his anger against Lionel that he could give no thought to this rascally seaman's share in thejadventure.

"Will ye give me your word for that?"

"My word? Pshaw, man! I have given it already. I swear that you shall be paid the sum I've named the moment you set me ashore again in England. Is that enough for you? Then cut me these bonds, and let us make an of my present condition."

"Faith, I am glad to deal with so sensible a man! Ye take it in the proper spirit. Ye see that what I ha' done I ha' but done in the way of my calling, that I am but a tool, and that what blame there be belongs to them which hired me to this deed."

"Aye, ye're but a tool—a dirty tool, whetted with gold, no more. 'Tis admitted. Cut me these bonds, a God's name! I'm weary o' being trussed like a capon."

The captain drew his knife, crossed to Sir Oliver's side and slashed his bonds away without further word. Sir Oliver stood up so suddenly that he smote his head against the low ceiling of the cabin and so sat down again at once. And in that moment from without and above there came a cry which sent the skipper to the cabin door. He flung it open, and so let out the smoke and let in the sunshine. He passed out on to the poop-deck, and Sir Oliver—conceiving himself at liberty to do so—followed him.

In the waist below a little knot of shaggy seamen were crowding to the larboard bulwarks, looking out to sea; on the forecastle there was another similar assembly, all staring intently ahead and toward the land. They were off Cape Roca at the time, and when Captain Leigh saw by how much they had lessened their distance from shore since last he had conned the ship he swore ferociously at his mate, who had charge of the wheel. Ahead of them away on their larboard bow and in line with the mouth of the Tagus from which she had issued—and where not a doubt but she had been lying in wait for such stray craft as this—came a great tall masted ship, equipped with topgallants, running well nigh before the wind with every foot of canvas spread.

Close hauled as was the Swallow and with her topsails and mizzen reefed she was making not more than one knot to the Spaniard's five—for that she was a Spaniard was beyond all doubt judging by the haven whence she issued.

"Luff alee!" bawled the skipper, and he sprang to the wheel, thrusting the mate aside with a blow of his elbow that almost sent him sprawling.

"'Twas yourself set the course," the fellow protested.

"Thou lubberly fool," roared the skipper; "I bade thee keep the same distance from shore. If the land comes jutting out to meet us are we to keep straight on until we pile her up?"

He span the wheel round in his hands and turned her down the wind. Then he relinguished the helm to the mate again.

"Hold her thus," he commanded, and bellowing orders as he went, he heaved himself down the companion to see them executed.

Men sprang to the ratlines to obey him, and went swarming aloft to let out the reefs of the topsails; others ran astern to do the like by the mizzen, and soon they had her leaping and plunging through the green water with every sheet unfurled, racing straight out to sea.

From the poop Sir Oliver watched the Spaniard. He saw her veer a point or so to starboard, heading straight to intercept them, and he observed that although this maneuver brought her fully a point nearer to the wind than the Swallow, yet, equipped as she was with half as much canvas again as Captain Leigh's piratical craft, she was gaining steadily upon them none the less.

The skipper came back to the poop and stood there moodily watching that other ship's approach, cursing himself for having sailed into such a trap and cursing his mate more fervently still.

Sir Oliver meanwhile took stock of so much of the Swallow's armament as was visible and wondered what like were those on the main deck below. He dropped a question on that score to the captain, dispassionately, as though he were no more than an indifferently interested spectator and with never a thought to his position aboard.

"Should I be racing her afore the wind if I was properly equipped?" growled Leigh. "Am I the man to run before a Spaniard? As it is, I do no more than lure her well away from land."

Sir Oliver understood and was silent thereafter. He observed a bo'sun and his mates staggering in the waist under loads of cutlasses and small arms which they stacked in a rack about the mainmast. Then the gunner, a swarthy, massive fellow, stark to the waist with a faded scarf tied turban-wise about his head, leaped up the companion to the brass carronade on the larboard quarter, followed by a couple of his men.

Master Leigh called up the bo'sun bade him take the wheel and despatched the mate forward to the forecastle, where another gun was being prepared for action.

Thereafter followed a spell of racing, the Spaniard ever lessening the distance between them, and the land dropping astern until it was no more than a hazy line above the shimmering sea. Suddenly from the Spaniard appeared a little cloud of white smoke, and the boom of a gun followed, and after it came a splash a cable's length ahead of the Swallow's bows.

Linstock in hand, the braway gunner on the poop stood ready to answer them when the word should be given. From below came the gunner's mate to report himself ready for action on the main deck and to receive his orders.

Came another shot from the Spaniard, again across the bows of the Swallow.

"'Tis a clear invitation to heave to," said Sir Oliver.

The skipper snarled in his fiery beard.

"She has no longer range than most Spaniards," said he. "But I'll not waste powder yet for all that. We've none to spare."

Scarcely had he spoken when a third shot boomed. There was a splintering crash overhead followed by a sough and a thud as the maintopmast came hurtling to the deck and in its fall stretched a couple of men in death. Battle was joined, it seemed. Yet Captain Leigh did nothing in a hurry.

"Hold there!" he roared to the gunner, who swung his linstock at that moment in preparation.

She was losing way as a result of that curtailment of her mainmast, and the Spaniard came on swiftly now. At last the skipper accounted her near enough and gave the word with an oath. The Swallow fired her first and last shot in that encounter. After the deafening thunder of it and through the cloud of suffocating smoke Sir Oliver saw the high forecastle of the Spaniard rent open.

Master Leigh was cursing his gunner for having aimed too high. Then he signalled to the mate to fire the culverin of which he had charge. That second shot was to be the signal for the whole broadside from the main deck below. But the Spaniard anticipated them. Even as the skipper of the Swallow signalled the whole side of the Spaniard burst into flame and smoke.

The Swallow staggered under the blow, recovered an instant, then listed ominously to larboard.

"——!" roared Leigh. "She's bilging!" And Sir Oliver saw the Spaniard standing off again, as if satisfied with what she had done.

The mate's gun was never fired, nor was the broadside from below. Indeed, that sudden list had set the muzzles pointing to sea; within three minutes of it they were on a level with the water. The Swallow had received her death blow and was settling down.

Satisfied that she could do no further harm, the Spaniard luffed and hove to, awaiting the obvious result and intent upon picking up what slaves she could to man the galleys of his Catholic Majesty on the Mediterranean.

Luncheon—One cup fresh corn chowder, 3 toasted crackers, 1 head lettuce with 4 tablespoons combination dressing, 2 nut bread and butter sandwiches, 2 baked apples with 2 tablespoons whipped cream.

Afternoon tea—One cup tutti-frutti punch, 2 cocoanut macaroons.

Dinner—Sweetbreads and mushroom timbale, 3 tablespoons creamed peas, 3 stalks stuffed celery, pear salad, 2 hard rolls, 2 tablespoons sweet butter, blackberry rice pudding (2 heaping tablespoons).

Bedtime—One cup whole milk.

Blackberry Rice Pudding.

Four tablespoons rice, 2 cups rich milk, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 1-2 cup boiling water, 1 cup sugar, — teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup whipping cream, 2 cups blackberries.

Cook rice in milk until soft. Rub through a fine wire sieve. Soften gelatin in cold water and add boiling water. Stir over hot water until dissolved. Stir over hot water until dissolved. Stir into rice mixture. When cool add sugar, fruit crushed and cream whipped until stiff. Turn into a mold and let stand on ice until firm and chilled.

LOSE WEIGHT.

Breakfast—Three large unsweetened stewed prunes, 1 crisp piece gluten toast, hot water.

Luncheon—One large ear sweet corn, ½ tablespoon butter, 1 cup skimmed milk, 1 gluten roll.

Dinner—One-half breast fried chicken, 2 tablespoons boiled cauliflower, 1 fine sliced tomato, 2 tablespoons peach ice.

Bedtime—One cup skimmed milk.

As gluten bread is usually made in half-pound loaves, one thin slice "stands" you about 50 calories.

One well-filled, medium-sized ear of corn means 100 calories and butter to cover it means 50 more, so you see you must guard against this tempting vegetable.

If the breast of a spring chicken is cut in two parts, one piece averages around 300 calories. The frying of it increases the fat slightly, but well-cooked crisp-coated white meat is a most delicious and harmless tid-bit for the long-suffering reducer. Of course the old-fashioned cream gravy must be abstained from, but you can enjoy a "chicken dinner" with a clear conscience. If you like you might save your sweet corn for dinner and just eat a roll and drink a glass of skimmed milk for luncheon.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Breakfast—Six large sweetened stewed prunes, 3 waffles, 1 tablespoon butter, 3 tablespoons maple syrup, 1 cup cocoa.

Mid-morning lunch — One large glass chocolate fluff.

Luncheon—Four tablespoons cheese souffle, 2 ears sweet corn, 2 slices rye bread, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup fruit salad.

Afternoon tea—One cup pineapple punch, 2 bacon rolls.

Dinner—One-half breast and 1 thigh fried chicken, 2 tablespoons mashed potato, 2 tablespoons cream gravy, 1 candied sweet potato, 2 tablespoons buttered cauliflower, 1 large sliced tomato with 2 tablespoons French dressing, 4 tablespoons peach ice in meringue shell, 2 baking powder biscuits, 1 tablespoon butter.

Bedtime—One large glass whole milk.

Chocolate Fluff.

One egg, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 dessertspoon cocoa, few grains salt, 1 cup whole milk.

Beat white of egg until stiff. Beat in sugar and cocoa. Beat yolk of egg with salt and milk. Combine mixtures and serve very cold.

Total calories, 425. Protein, 74; fat, 185; carbohydrate, 166. Iron, .0019 gram.

Home For Homeless Shelters Prince Reared in Palaces

BUDAPEST, Sept. 12.—Among the dwellers in an old military barrack turned over to the homeless in this city, is Prince Abdul-Kadir, a son of the late Abdul Hamid, deposed sultan of Turkey.

The prince is about 46 years old. He occupies four rooms with his wife, two sons, his mother-in-law and his secretary. His former numerous retinue now has shrunk to a negro servant, a maid and a cook.

Abdul-Kadir is pressing his suit against the Turkish government for the recovery of his share of the Abdul Hamid wealth, which was sequestrated by the young Turks when the sultan was deposed.

The favorite amusement of Abdul Hamid's son is playing the violin, at which he has been practicing since he was six years old. Those who have heard him perform assert that he plays well.

In his younger days Abdul-Kadir obtained a diploma as a mechanical engineer. He is trying to obtain employment in his profession with a Budapest manufacturer.

Top Hats Worn In Ireland At Call of Patriotism

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—The Tailteann games and their accompanying social events have been remarkable for the revival in Ireland of the tall hat. Twenty years a black morning coat, striped trousers and a tall hat were the almost essential uniform of professional men, and no doctor or lawyer omitted to wear them. An easier style of dress gradually crept in, and for more than ten years tweeds and soft hats replaced the old dignities, and the tall hat was rarely seen except at funerals.

The more formal clothes have now returned. At social functions all the Free State officials and ministers wear them. As the Independent puts it, this is "expressing homage to this very young state in terms of clothes. In a vulgar, modern, democratic age clothes matter tremendously, and there is no getting away from it. Outsiders judge us by appearance, not by what we are, and patriotism calls for the best show possible at all such public or semi-public events."

DEADHEAD STUDENTS TO BE OUSTED.

GOETTINGIN, Sept. 12.—Officials of Goettingin University recently announced that they intend to clear the rolls of "deadheads." It was said that the tuition fees of 900 have been overdue since the beginning of the summer term.

Native Born in Australia Show High Percentage

MELBOURNE, Sept. 12. — Some interesting figures are disclosed in the latest Australian census. They show that the Commonwealth has a total population of 5,435,734, and that more than 98 per cent. are of British extraction. Of the total population 84½ per cent. were born in Australia. The remarkable homogeneity of the Australian population is shown by the fact that the foreign population consists of only a few th ousand Japanese, 15,000 Chinese, 8,000 Italians, 22,000 Germans, 6,000 Americans and 3,000 Swedes.

Prison Bars No Barrier To Musical Broadcaster

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Sept. 12.—Many people regard a prison as the last place in which to achieve fame, but the case of Harry Snodgrass, convict in the Missouri state penitentiary here, is an exception. For Harry, although serving a term behind the stone walls of the state prison, has not only achieved renown, but he has acquired nation-wide fame, as well—chiefly due to radio.

More than two years ago he was sentenced to serve three years on a charge of attempted robbery. He entered prison virtually unknown, but today his name is familiar to persons in almost every section of the country.

Harry brought a gift of his fingers with him. He is a pianist of rare ability and can play with extraordinary skill and technique, several masters have declared. Soon he was playing once a week or more at station WOS, the state radiocasting station, one of the most powerful in the country.

People began to write asking who the "wonderful" pianist was. His name became known, and now Snodgrass' renditions both of popular and classical music are given to a wide radio audience.

What Harry will do when he gains his liberty is not known, but he can have his pick of a score of good positions playing the piano in several sections of the country, according to prison officials.

DUESSELDORF STILL OVERCROWDED.

DUESSELDORF, Germany, Sept. 12.—The housing shortage in this city shows few signs of improving. The municipality has on file the names of more than 10,000 persons wanting accommodations, and during the last three months it was able to provide only 461 apartments.

Postmasters To Propose Better Mail Facilities

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 12. — Establishment of parcel post and third class mail terminals in every state, to facilitate quicker handling of these classes of mail, will be among the recommendations to the U. S. Postoffice Department proposed by the National Association of Postmasters of the United States which meets here Sept. 23 to 25.

Only a few large cities have such terminals at present, and the concentration of this type of mail in these cities is resulting in congestion which the postmasters believe can be relieved by establishing similar terminals in each state.

Other recommendations expected to be made is that the government bond its employes, adoption of legislation abolishing the compensatory time feature for employes who work on Sunday or holiday, new regulations which will permit return of mail posted with insufficient stamps to senders, and more stringent rules governing containers in which eggs may be shipped to reduce breakage in the mails. The speakers before the meeting include Postmaster General Harry S. New.

Sun Henceforth Subject To 24 Hour Scrutiny

MELBOURNE, Sept. 12.—According to present plans Australia will have one of the most up-to-date observatories in the world.

Dr. Duffield, professor of physics at the Reading University, will shortly arrive in Australia from London to take up his work as director of the observatory at Canberra, the new Australian capital. He hopes that the observatory will be a link between England and America and become one of a chain of stations which will keep watch on the sun during the whole of the twenty-four hours.

FABLES ON HEALTH.

GOING ON PICNICS.

With vacation and warm days the Mann youngsters would cry for picnics and outings, particularly when Sunday came and daddy could go along.

Picnics and Sunday outings may be considered "something to please the children," and as such they should be encouraged. But the chance to get out in the open thus given the elders is of immense hygienic value.

Modern school playgrounds and plenty of outdoor play places, but parks in most cities give the children such opportunities should not constitute an argument against the picnic, which, staged in new scenes and bringing the children into new surroundings, broadens the fields of childish imagination and stimulates the play spirit.

For just such reasons they have excellent psychological effect upon the elders, even when staged under more or less trying conditions.

Selection of open country, with green fields and trees, if of course preferable if they can be reached.

But, under any circumstances, take advantage of the warm days to get the youngsters on outings—and get the child play spirit yourselves.

PANAMA

The Panama Canal has been doing more business than the land-cut at Suez. In 1922 only 130 tons of shipping passed through the Panama Canal for every 207 tons through Suez. But the tables were reversed in 1923, when 247 tons of shipping used the Panama route for every 227 tons through Suez.

There are two reasons. First, Americans are using Panama Canal more and more for coast-to-coast shipments because it is cheaper than the extremely high cost of shipment by railroad. Second, international foreign trade is slowly shifting to the Pacific and away from the Atlantic and Indian oceans.

Steam flows into atmosphere at the rate of 650 feet per second.

METHODIST CHURCH GROWING STEADILY

Increase of 4,873 In Membership Took Place Last Year.

Methodist membership has increased from 407,264 to 414,047 during the year for which statistics are now being compiled. The total number of members received by the Canadian Methodist Church in the twelve months ending with the 1924 annual conferences was 35,285, of whom 15,925 were admitted on profession of faith. By comparison with the previous year the increases are very considerable and highly encouraging The next Methodist year book will announce a net increase of 4,966 members as against a net increase of 331 for 1922-23. The year 1923-24 sets a new high record.

Growth is Healthy.

In his analysis of the figures for the Christian Guardian, the general conference statistician, Rev. S. W. Dean, will say in part:

"Not only is there a healthy growth in many of the conferences in spite of adverse conditions which might have been expected to check development at this time, but there can be recorded a substantial increase in the aggregate over the whole church. We are happy to be able to include the notable gains on one of our mission fields abroad."

The present upward trend in Canadian Methodism is comparable to the movement which in the past year has reversed the downward tendency in British methodism with an ingathering of more than 35,000 persons by conversion, although the evangelistic methods employed bp the followers of Wesley in the two countries are dissimilar. It is anticipated that the statistics for the Sunday school and the young people's work (not yet finally checked over) will reveal a great churchward movement among the younger folk of Canada.

Difficulties Overcome.

In face of untraceable losses through local church unions and shiftings of populations to the cities and elsewhere, and also the death of 5,041 members, the net increase of nearly five thousand is regarded as specially significant of healthy spiritual conditions. Not included in any membership total are 20,083 catechumens.

Families ministered to number 240,221 and the Methodist population, according to the Federal census of 1921, is over 1,100,000.

Swift Growth in China.

For the first time the net gain of 4,966 includes 806 converts on the West China mission field, where net gain is 401, and membership now totals 3,095, as compared with 2,694 last year.

Gains made by the Japan mission are not included, as they are properly members of an independent organization, the Japan Methodist church. This is the first year that the West China figures are included in the Canadian church's annual statistics.

Increases by Conferences.

Instead of six conferences showing declines as last year, only the Montreal, Saskatchewan and Alberta conferences have net decreases. Nine other conferences record net increases, with Manitoba leading, as follows:

Toronto, 1,239; London, 317; Hamilton, 1,003; Bay of Quinte, 86; Nova Scotia, 175, New Brunswick and P. E.I., 290; Newfoundland ,163; Manitoba, 1,554, and British Columbia, 438.

SUPERSTITION.

Rich gold mines are discovered in the interior of mysterious Thibet. White discoverers, young engineers eager for wealth, are dismayed to learn that Thibetan superstition prohibits removal of gold from the earth in any form except dust. Nuggets must not be touched.

This is foolish. Its incongruity amuses Americans—who, however, have just as ridiculous economic and political superstitions, not to mention others. Precedent is largely superstition.

FLANNEL COATS

White flannel coats on very tailored lines, belted with wide red leather belts, are very much liked by flappers.

Autumn Opening

The Directoire Influence

We may give thanks to the Directoire influence for some of our most charming style features. Tailored frocks are flaunting large revers, tight sleeves and giant cuffs. They are blossoming forth as never before in frills and jabots and little vestees. Some have double-breasted closings and high collars, but this is not so universal. Coats, sometimes, introduce cape shoulder. Once in a while a demure evening gown startles its more conservative companions by displaying the high Empire waistline! All in all, the Directoire will bear watching!

Simplicity of Line

and Richness of Material Distinguish Fall Coats

There's a snap in the air, Jack Frost is beginning to assert himself—and fall Coats are very much in order. A straightline model of chestnut brown duvetyn with seal collar, cuffs and banding is sure to keep you warm in the most modish way. Other models in flamingo, suede cloth or rep have the looser shoulder effect with wrappy sleeves, and tight wrists cuffed in fur. These Coats fit snugly about the hips and are lined in bright colors or plaids, frequently of woollen.

SECOND FLOOR.

NECKLINES are novel. The V line, sometimes small, sometimes deep with a dainty vestee, is the latest decree of fashion.

My Lady's Glove

It assumes an air of greater importance in this "time of crisp and tawny leaves." It takes to itself novel trimmings and new effects. Very effective with the long sleeve of the tailored frock!

New style Gauntlet Chamoisette in all the new autumn shades are priced at $1.25, $1.50 and $1.95.

STREET FLOOR.

Chamoisette Gloves

for Fall—59c

A fine quality Chamoisette Glove in perfect keeping with the new autumn attire. Correct fitting. Colors of brown, pongee, black, grey and beaver. They come with two-button fastening. Sizes 6 to 8.

STREET FLOOR.

Don't Mind the Rain

—carry a new Umbrella or Parasol of the short stubby type so popular this fall, or the more conservative kind that has always been the vogue. Black or colors. Silk and wool give the best wearing cover, while the novelty tips and ferrules on some are most attractive. Priced from $3.00 to $9.00.

STREET FLOOR.

THE Autumn tang is in the air—keeping pace with the lately arrived modes dedicated to it—it would seem. At any rate now is the time to learn what really is new and to spend an hour or so at our Fall Openings is to do that very thing.

Autumn's Fabrics Have Come

It's a thorough delight to fashion a wardrobe one's self if the Fabrics one has to work with are charming and easy to drape. There will be many softly tailored frocks so smart for fall made at home this season, for almost never before were Fabrics so likable. Suede-finished woollens and silky broadcloths enter with striped twills, shiny satins and cashmere woollens to charm the trained or amateur sewer.

A New Hat for Fall

Whether it is a charming feather-trimmed cloche of chestnut brown felt, or a high-crowned Directoire of copper velvet, there's nothing like a new Hat to give you that smart up-to-the-minute feeling. Most delightful are the newest arrivals here.

These Topcoats

New Fall Merchandise at Economy Prices

Fascinating Hats

correctly portraying the trend of the mode

In our Millinery Showroom a wonderful array of the autumn modes await your inspection. You will be delighted with the new styles. The effort to get away from the familiar lines of the little cloche has developed much variety in shapes that are inclined to turn up. For this reason so many of the new effects show a tendency toward the tricorne brim, which, combined with the stovepipe crown, is declared to be the acme of smartness. Panne velvet, hatter's plush and unbound felt are the materials favored. Feather fantasies, ribbons, buckles and cocarde trimmings are prominently featured. They are very reasonably priced.

Sample Velvet Hats

Just a few traveller's samples bought at a discount and making a special for Saturday. All individual styles. Made of Lyon's silk velvet and suitably trimmed. Popular shades and most favored of fall modes. Made to sell at $6.50, for .....

Coats and Wraps

In Coats for sports, street and mid-winter wear, there is a charming diversity this season. Novelty fabrics lead again, with a decided preference for those of camel's hair, Zibeline and alligator effects; velours, cut pile, tweed and plaided wool mixtures in the brown tones are good. The styles shown remain essentially simple.

Straight Coats fastening with one button, having novelty pockets and sometimes inset panels of tucking or flat knife pleating are correct.

Fur trimmings are extensively used, particularly the brown furs, such as beaver, Nutria, Kit fox and various dyed skins.

Our range is complete, and the prices are moderate.

OPPOSE ISSUING CAR LICENSES FROM TORONTO

STORM OF PROTEST.

Against Government Action Causing Inconvenience and and Unnecessary Expense To 200,000 Car Owners Outside of Toronto.

WILL HANDICAP POLICE

New Scheme Will Prove a Direct Blow to Law Enforcement.

From local organizations a storm of protest has been raised against the decision of the Ontario government to make Toronto the headquarters for the issuance of motor licenses.

It is considered that inconvenience will be caused to car owners, and that the change will result in an unnecessary addition to the administrative expenses. The move will also prove an impediment to law enforcement and precipitate a constant annoyance to dealers and purchasers alike, as the centralized system will deprive the public of a ready service they are now accorded.

Resolutions passed by the Peterboro branch of the O.M.L., the Chamber of Commerce, and local automobile dealers, strongly condemn the government's action.

At the preesnt time persons are able to obtain licenses from the office of the O.M.L., in the Dominion Bank buildings, where records of local transfers and licenses issued are kept.

The excellent service maintained by the local office is greatly appreciated by the automobile dealers, purchasers, and the police department. If a person buys a car on Saturday, he can obtain a license immediately, and run his motor the next day.

With licenses issued in Toronto affidavits will have to be forwarded, and marked cheques submitted, which in itself, is an inconvenience, without considering the delay. Should the affidavit be filled in improperly, then another delay, more inconvenience and expense. The new system will prove an impediment to business as well, and it therefore handicaps the automobile dealer.

Law Enforcement.

Police are now able to investigate the local bureaus in case of a serious accident or when locating stolen cars and the service is of significance from a law enforcement point of view. With the records in Toronto and the delay necessitated before the proper information can be obtained, the offender will be more likely to escape justice, and will make the solution of a car theft, a serious motor accident or a traffi violation, when some unknown party is involved a real intricate problem. The motor car is the usual means of travel, and in the case of almost any crime committed locally the offense of the miscreants will be associated with a car in some way, and often the identification of the parties is obtained by the motor license. The centralization of the motor license records in Toronto will prove a direct blow to the administration of justice, in centres, outside the Queen City.

Increased Cost.

It is contended that the centralization of this department, will reduce the administrative cost. But, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Peterboro branch of the O.M.L. for quite logical reasons, believe that the innovation will increase the administrative expenses in regard to the issuance and the recording of motor licenses.

As a rule, the centralizing of Government departments results in a decreased cost of operating expenses but with a department with duties so multifarious as this, the desired results cannot obtain. With about 200,000 motor licenses issued within two months of the year to car owners resident outside of Toronto, the deluge of correspondence and the sudden influx of applications every spring will incur expenditures in excess of the method now in vogue.

Letter writing and postage now not used will be an additional expense not only to the government but to the individual. The awkardness of the new system is also a matter to be considered.

Throughout the year sales and exchanges will constantly require a correspondence to be maintained by officials. As it now stands an enquiry at a local office evades this expense.

A FLOWER PARADE."

School Children of the City Will Take Part in Event.

All school children of the city are being urged to take part in the "Flower Parade" which will be an outstanding feature of the Flower Show which the Horticultural Society is arranging for the 18th and 19th of this month, in the Armouries building.

This Flower Parade is being sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, which is making every effort to have all the school children of Peterboro co-operate in its success. The Parade will consist of children dressed to represent some flower, fruit or vegetable, and three prizes will be given by the Kiwanis Club for the three best and most appropriate costumes. The prizes will be presented on the second night of the show by Mayor Turner.

The Horticultural Society is anxious to inculcate a love of flower lore and culture in the minds of the children and would like the co-operation of parents and school teachers in promoting an interest in the Parade.

COBOURG, Sept. 12.—The Baltimore Women's Institute has set a worthy example to other organizations of a similar kind by deciding at their last meeting to organize a public library. At first the project was only intended to be restricted to members of the Women's Institute, but as plans developed it took on a wider scope, and will be a community enterprise.

Mrs. A. Richards has been appointed librarian, and it is hoped that the library will be opened and ready for giving out books in less than a fortnight.

Mr. Herbert Lander, Camborne led in prayer.

Vice-presidents were appointed for the different townships as follows:

North Haldimand—W. A. Macklin, Fenella.

South Haldimand—C. A. Bradley, Grafton.

North Hamilton—Wm. Buttars, Cobourg, R. R. 6.

Alnwick—Rev. J. N. Lovelace, Roseneath.

The appointment of a vice-president for South Monaghan was left over.

A sub-executive was appointed consisting of the officers and Mr. Geo. Holdsnorth who will have authority to deal with any imperative matters that may suddeny arise.

It was stated that East Northumberland and West Northumberland would be marked by separate organizations.

Rev. R. F. Stillman gave a good report for the Publicity Committee which met a few days before.

After a lengthy discussion an expression of opinion was asked for as to the question of holding public meetings. The meeting voted that there should be held, and that opposition speakers be invited to be present and discuss the temperance issue. It was decided to try to secure the services of Mrs. Smythe, who is at the head of the Provincial Women's Prohibition Union to address a meeting of ladies.

The president, Rev. W. A. Bremner, reported an expressed unanimous desire on the part of the churches in Cobourg for holding union prayer meetings, and suggested that the circle be widened during the progress of the campaign. The first of the meetings will be held here on September 17.

COUNCIL-MANAGER PLAN GROWS IN FAVOR AS CITY GOVERNMENT

Over Three Hundred Cities Have Adopted the Plan With Success.

11 IN CANADA.

Report of Address at Convention of Municipalities Outlines System.

Among the various systems of government which are in force at the present time in the cities and towns of Canada and the United States, none is more interesting and has had a greater hold on public opinion than the "Council-Manager" plan. Indeed, no development in municipal political life during the past fifteen years is more constructively significant than the growth of this plan of government. To-day there are 321 towns and cities operating under, or pledged to the Council-manager plan. Of these, 310 are located in the United States and 11 in Canada. The Canadian cities operating under the plan are as follows:—In the Province of Quebec—Westmount, Outremont, Grand'Mere, Shawinigan Falls and La Tuque; in Ontario—Chatham and Niagara Falls; in New Brunswick—Woodstock; in Manitoba—Brandon and St. James; in Nova Scotia—Wolfville. The largest and most important city pledged to this modern form of government is Cleveland, Ohio, with a population of 796,841. At the present time, there are over five millions of people either governed, or about to be governed, under the Council-manager plan.

It is interesting to note here how the manager movement started.

Origin of the Manager Plan.

In 1907, the Shenandoah River in flood time caused a washout at the city of Staunton, Va. The damage was fixed by the local contractors at $4,000.00. One of the members of the City Council requested that the contract for repairs be deferred until he could consult his friend, the division engineer of the railroad. The engineer came, saw, and estimated $700.00 as the amount of the damage. As a matter of fact, the repairs actually cost $650.00. Staunton affairs might have gone on in the same way after this incident as before, but they did not. An accident had placed the matter in a new light before the business men of the town. The result was that on January 13, 1908, the Council of Staunton passed an ordinance of great import. It provided for a "General Manager" equipped with power to take entire charge and control of all the executive work of the city in its various departments, and entire charge and control of the heads of departments and employees of the city. The general manager, under that plan, assumed all executive duties, except those reserved to the finance, ordinance, school and auditing committees. The young division engineer, previously referred to, was appointed by the council for a term of one year at a salary of $2,000.00. He was Charles Ashburner, first city manager in America, now serving in the same capacity at Stockton, and drawing a salary of $20,000.00 per annum.

In the fall of 1910, Lockport, in the State of New York, wishing to improve its system of government, prepared a new charter, providing for a single legislative body, called board of directors or commission, composed of members elected directly by the people, and a chief executive officer (called manager) appointed by the commission and not elected by the people. Lockport did not succeed in getting its bill passed by the state legislature, but the Lockport plan was talked about all over the country.

In January, 1913, the want columns of the engineering magazines contained an advertisement—the first of its kind in America. It was a call for a city manager from Sumter, S.C., which had succeeded in having the legislature adopt its new charter embodying the Lockport idea. A civil engineer was appointed as manager. Sumter was, therefore, the first city to adopt by charter the city-manager system. The year 1913 added eleven cities to those pledged to the council-manager plan, the most important city being Dayton, Ohio.

As in the case of Staunton, the city of Dayton adopted the plan after an appalling catastrophe. One morning of March, when everything was quiet in the Miami Valley, a rumbling noise suddenly arose. It was a mud-laden sea rushing down the valley and destroying everything in its way. The waters rose above the crumbling levies surrounding the city and rushed to the heart of the helpless town, causing devastation. Property, spared by the flood, was dsetroyed by the fire which broke out. There was no law, no government, no supreme power. All that remained was the courage of the citizens. Military rule was put in force, and order was gradually re-established. But traditions, old ideals, the old form of government, with its inefficient administration, headed by spoils politicians, were put aside. A citizens' committee was formed, with power to draft a new charter. After thoroughly investigating all the prevailing and proposed types of municipal government, the charter commission concluded that the small town of Sumter had the best, and they adopted it. The position of manager was offered to Colonel Geothals of Panama Canal fame. On his refusal to accept, Mr. Henry M. Waite, chief-engineer of the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, was appointed. The administration of Dayton, under the management of Mr. Waite became famous, and contributed in a very large measure to the rapid growth of the "Council-manager plan."

Such was the origin of the plan. We shall now consider its main features and underlying principles.

Main Features and Principles of the Council-Manager Plan.

The process of efficient municipal government involves two considerations. First, a capable legislative body should determine the policies to be adopted, and should be available as an advisory board. Secondly, there should be a competent executive organization to efficiently meet these two requirements the council-manager form of control has been developed.

The council-manager plan provides for a single elective governing board of popular representatives usually called a "Council" or "Commission." No other elective officers. This board employs a chief administrative officer, called "city-manager," and holds him responsible for enforcing the law and conducting the city's affairs in accord with the policies of the council. The council receives nominal salaries, or none, and the members give only their spare time to municipal work, and thus are left free to continue their private careers without interruption.

The Mayor is the chairman of the board and serves as official or ceremonial head of the city. He has no veto or separate administrative powers.

The functions of the council are to hire and supervise the city manager, who holds office at their pleasure; also to vote appropriations, to pass ordinances and by-laws, and to contribute to the city government the amateur and representative element.

In the council-manager plan, the number of councilmen usually varies with the size of the city, from five or seven to any larger number agreen upon.

The ideal method is to elect all the councilmen at large. However, the abolition of city wards is not a necessary feature of the city-manager plan; but in revising their charters, the majority of the larger cities have eliminated the ward system. The objection to wards is that they tend to perpetuate sectionalism, and often elect representatives that would not be tolerated on a general ticket. In their desire to get favors for their wards, aldermen frequently trade votes with other aldermen, with the net result that the city indulges in much unnecessary expenditure.

The council-manager plan is essentially the application of the basic plan of organisation of a private business enterprise to the affairs of a city. That our cities with the mayor-council form of government are not organised is evident to the casual observer. Here are two charts. One shows the organization of the city's affairs under the mayor-council plan; the other shows the organization of the city-manager system, with its centralization of powers. In this plan, in order for any act to be executed, it must first be passed upon by the legislative body as a whole, then condensed and made to pass through one point, the controlled executive, to the proper department heads. The other chart shows the older form of government, with its mingling of legislative and executive powers and its lack of definite responsibility to the supposed executive head, the Mayor, which in turn makes it impossible for the voters to hold him responsible for the acts and policies of the city government.

This chart aptly asks the question: Could you run your business on this plan?

The City Manager.

The city manager is, first and always, the servant of the council, therefore of the people, for it is the people who elect the members of the council. He has not the power, however, to receive his orders directly from the people, but only through the elected representatives. Should the council misinterpret the wishes of the people, or commit any errors of policy, the members have to assume the blame and not the manager, who has nothing to do with the promulgation of the board's policies. The manager is there to receive orders. Nevertheless, he may recommend to the council for adoption such measures as he may deem necessary or expedient. If these are not adopted he must submit.

The manager is solely an executive officer and has no power to dictate a policy. He does not devise responsibility with the council but is subordinate to it.

The manager is not necessarily or usually a local resident. It is better to choose as manager, one who has already acquired experience in the management of other cities. This tends to encourage a profession of highly trained man. It is natural that the city council should want to see the position filled by a local man, but this tendency to resort to local talent is positive menace to the continued success of city-manager government. This does not mean that local brains are inferior or that local talent, if conspicuously superior, should be unrecognized; but it does mean that every local man has disqualifications which handicap him from the start and may undermine the success of his administration. The less people a municipal officer knows, the better it is for the service. As a rule, the great curse of municipal government arises from the fact that the officials know too many people, and are under too many obligations. It will take a competent manager but a very short time to get all the knowledge of local conditions that will be of any use to him. His personal qualifications are above all essential. The manager should be a man with broad executive experience. It is not necessary that he be an expert in public works, in finance, in hygiene, or in any other phase of municipal administration; but he must have executive training, a reasonable knowledge of business principles, imagination, tact, ability to distinguish essentials from non-essentials, and be able to delegate duties without losing control. He must also have nerve to make decisions, and a certain judicial quality which will enable him to give a square deal to his subordinates.

As the city-manager is the one to whom the affairs of the city are committed, and as he is responsible for carrying out the policies of the council, he is therefore given large powers. The manager's duties, prescribed in the council-manager charters, usually include the following:

1. In general, the manager is charged with the enforcement of the laws and the city ordinances and carrying on of the business of the city.

2. In holding the city manager responsible for results, it is logical to clothe him with sufficient power to get the work properly done. He is, therefore, given authority to appoint and dismiss all heads of departments, and all subordinate officers and employees of the city, all appointments to be on merit and fitness alone.

3. He attends all meetings of council. He may take part in the discussions and make recommendations, but he has no vote.

4. As the management of the city's finances is a most important factor in city government, the manager is required to prepare and present to the council an annual budget, including an estimate of receipts and suggested appropriations.

5. He has the general powers of investigation and is the general agent of the council.

6. He is charged with the duties of maintaining the city's rights in the operation of public service franchises.

7. It is his duty to study all phases of city government and to make recommendations to the council of more efficient and economical methods of transacting the city's business.

Arguments Used Against the Council-Manager Plan.

The city manager form of government has been attacked from a number of angles, the principle being:—First, that it is not democratic; second, that it is not applicable to a large city; third, that it is impossible to secure the men to fill city manager positions.

1.—Is the Plan Democratic?

At the beginning of the practice of the council-manager government the charge was made that the plan could not succeed and should not be adopted because it was undemocratic. However, it has been the experience of every city that has undertaken this plan that that charge ch plan that that charge was on a fasle basis, and the facts are, to-day, that this plan has shown to the citizenship in their respective cities that centralized responsibility and authority and control, while bringing about business administration, has not lessened in the slightest degree the democrative principles of municipal government. In other words, under this plan, the public servant, from the council on down to the lowest wage earner in the municipal employ, is brought closer to the public and the public closer to the progress and policies and the work of the government.

The council-manager plan, while giving a single-headed administration, has abolished the one-man power seen in the old mayor-and-council plan. The manager has no independence, and the city does not suffer from his personal whims or prejudices, since he is subject to instant correction, or even discharge, by the council. Likewise, in the council, each member's fancies or hobbies are safely submerged and averaged in the combined judgment of the whole council, since no member exerts any authority in the municipal government save as one voting member of the council.

The charge is also made that it is undemocratic to make the most important single official—the manager—appointive instead of "directly responsible to the people by election." Democracy, however, consists in controlling public officers, not necessarily in electing them and that way is the most democratic which gives the people the surest control. The most effective way for the people to control the governmental organization is to elect capable members of the council who will see what the chief executive, the manager, is doing, with power to fire him if he is unsatisfactory. Compared with that method, the mayor-and-council plan is relatively undemocratic. The fact is that, in the old form of government, the chief executive, the mayor, is practically an autocrat with a two or four year term, and, excepting such spasmodic control as is possible at the biennial or quadrennial elections, he is not under the control of the people at all. Between elections, he can be inefficient, arbitrary, a petty tyrant, quite beyond reach of the people. From the standpoint of securing real executive ability and true democracy, the manager plan has shown a marked improvement over other systems of municipal government. Ex-President Woodrow Wilson has said: "I regard the council-manager plan of municipal government as a marked advance over any plan hitherto tried in this country, from the standpoint of both efficiency and democract."

2.—Is the Plan Applicable to a Large City?

Many students of municipal affairs concede that the council-manager plan has a fine record in smaller cities of, say, less than 100,000 population, but question its workings in the cities of larger size. Why so? Do our larger cities need executive ability any less than our smaller cities? The manager is not assuming, as a matter of fact, an executive responsibility any larger than we now expect a mayor to assume. Who would state that the city of Montreal, because it is a larger city, needs an able mayor less than some smaller city? It is obvious that the larger the city the greater degree of executive ability needed. As the principles involved in the goverment of large cities are practically identical with those involved in the management of smaller municipalities, there is no reason why the larger cities would not secure better executive ability through the manager plan just as readily as the smaller cities have done. Experience has proven that the manager plan has worked best in large cities. The reason is that such politics, or such differences over public questions as exist, are less personal in the larger cities than in the smaller ones. The manager of the small city, if he offends somebody, meets him every day. While in the large cities, differences on questions of administration are of a more or less impersonal nature. Moreover, by the calling in of specialists to be put in charge of each department, the manager of a large city can build up a complete and specialized organization such as the smaller city cannot hope to have. It would seem, therefore, that the larger the city the more applicable is the manager plan, with its centralized authority, co-operation, control and responsibility.

3.—Can Men be Found?

The objection that it is impossible to get men to fill the positions of city managers has not a leg to stand on So far, they have developed as rapidly as the demand. When we see large corporations like the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Canadian National Railways, our various banks, public utility corporations, business institutions and industrial concerns, many times greater than our municipal administrations, being effectively handled by a general-manager, our common sense tells us that it is possible to get men with executive ability to serve as city managers.

Achievements of the Cit-yManager Plan.

All things considered, the city-manager plan of government contains all that was good in the older commission or mayor-and-council plans and does away with their weak points; the mingling of legislative and administrative functions in the same men, the absence of a central executive to whom the various heads of departments should be subordinated, the impracticability of securing trained or expert administrative officers by the process of popular election.

The achievements of the council-manager plan are remarkable. Among others, we may enumerate the following:

1. It has abolished the evil of patronage; the city no longer is a refuge for the old and incompetent.

2. By holding one person responsible for the administration of the various municipal departments, it has created an efficiency which was lacking in the numerous aldermanic committees of the older systems, with their ever-changing personnel, their incompetent laymen, their executives without technical training, their unscrupulous politicians on the look-out for the furthering of their own interests instead of the welfare, happiness and prosperity of the ratepayers at large.

3. It has opened the way for the development of professional executives, by affording to capable men the opportunity of holding office during good behaviour.

4. It has brought to the cities a very much higher degree of efficiency, both as to legislation and administration. Men of sound business experience under this plan feel free to accept, without detriment to their private interests, the position of alderman or commissioner.

5. In municipal campaigns, it has tended to shift discussions from persons to issues.

6. It has separated the legislative from the executive functions of city government.

7. Although executive functions have been centralized, "one-man" power has not resulted with this plan, for the control of the council over the tenure of the manager has removed this danger.

Conclusion.

The city manager plan is not the result of an accident. It has been based on investigation, on a certain deliberateness, on an attempt to discover sound principles of municipal government. It is safely past the experimental stazit and it can be said that the city-manager plan has arrived.

The success of the plan has been abundantly proved. Its expanding application to a lengthening list of cities is developing municipal policies as perhaps no other single factor. To-day, every four out of every five new charters follow the city-manager plan.

Out of the 324 cities which have tried this plan only three cities have abandoned it by vote of the people during the fifteen years it has been in use, which is evidence that it is a satisfactory solution of the old reiterated municipal problem: Securing efficient public service at a price the citizens can pay.

Political scientists, without exception, consider it as our most efficient form of government, and the college political science courses teach it as accepted doctrine.

Citizens of hundreds of cities, growing weary of poor municipal service and annual deficits, are comparing their condition with that of their neighboring city-manager cities, where the citizens receive satisfactory service on a "pay-as-you-go" basis. They see in the council-manager plan the solution for their problem. It has therefore become the new standard in the movement for better city government.

Like other governmental agencies, the council-manager plan is open to change and improvement; but, as a profound student of municipal government has said: "It stands to-day as the big contribution to political science of the past quarter of a century."

JUDGING FEATURE OF THE FALL FAIR

Group of Twenty-Four Girls Took Part In Contest This Morning.

The judging competition that was a feature of the Fair activities yesterday saw a group of twenty-four girls taking part in the feminine section, which occupied itself with the judging of good dressing, bread, house dresses, and school lunches.

Mr. F. C. McRae, agricultural representative at Norwood, was assisted by Miss Margaret Brown, of St. Thomas, who has been coaching the girls for this event for the past few days. Miss Brown has had considerable experience in this work, and at a similar competition held at this year's Toronto Fair, secured first prize with her team of twelve girls, competing against 174 girls representing 58 townships in the province.

The basic idea behind these competitions is to give the girls of rural sections an opportunity to judge such things as are part of their everyday farm life. Bread, school lunches, and house dresses are a part of their ordinary curriculum, and to this was added a judgment on good dressing, which took the form of a visit to Barnes' Limited, store, where four models paraded before the young ladies, each wearing a costume that was supposed to be appropriate for church wear on a Sunday morning in the country ot this time of year.

The costumes varied and had sundry details of good and bad taste introduced into their makeup to allow of observation and criticism by the girls. One pretty navy suit, with long coat and fur choker and trig black hat, seemd to be the Number One choice of all the girls, but their tastes varied considerably over the placing of the other three models. Of one style, which included a bright yellow scarf and a purple-trimmed hat, one girl recorded in her opinion that this was "too much fashion for the country," another thought that "the yellow scarf and the purple bow sash horrible, but the veil is not improper,' 'while still another considered the yellow unsuitable to the complexion of the wearer. The white stockings and gloves worn with two of the costumes didn't suit several who preferred either grey or black gloves and dark stockings. "to go with the dress," while one girl considered the use of a green hat with a blue dress as absolutely wrong, evidently having never heard or cared about Oscar Wilde's famous colour scheme. A silk dress under a fur coat was deplored by one as being impossible, while asother girl thought the lines of the up-to-date suit shown "were too straight." A rather ambiguous compliment to one costume was the remark that "it doesn't look more expensive than it really is," which might not always be just the beau ideal for an outfit.

The girls considered the good dressing contest from several angles, judging the costume as to its suitability to the person, to the occasion, and on first general impression received. Fifty per cent. each was given for correct placing and for the written reasons appended to the score sheet.

House dresses, of which four were on exhibition at the Fair Grounds' tent, where the other judging was done, were ludged as to appearance, in colour, style, etc., and as to the material in practicability for washing, and workmanship. Bread and school lunches were also judged.

The contest was open to the city and county of Peterborough, and the townships of Cavan and Emily.

In the girls' section, the majority were from Peterborough district, with several from Keene and Indian River, and one from Lakefield.

The prize-winners in the girls' section in this competition, which required some close judging to decide the awards, were as follows:

Free trip to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, offered by President R. Denne, to Miss Pearl Petrie, who secured the highest score.

Prize-winners in the Good Dressing contest are: (1) Florence Burgess, (2) Mary Lewis, (3) Mae Petrie, (4) Lila Burgess.

For judgment of House Dresses: (1) V. Freeman, (2) Florence Burgess, (3) Pearl Petrie, (4) Annabel Carlow.

For judgment of Bread: (1) Jean Knowles, (2) Mary Collins, (3) Dorothy Chapman, (4) Eva Taylor.

For judgment of School Lunches: (1) Eva Taylor, (2) Pearl Petrie, (3) Ivy Petrie, (4) Beatrice McGregor.

Declaration of Delegate at the Geneva Convention.

GENEVA, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Europe must disarm or go bankrupt, was the declaration of an European delegate at the League session in enumerating the reasons why nations are striving to prevent future wars by restoring the system of compulsory arbitration which would be backed by a suitable system of penalties. Britain's announcement yesterday of readiness to accept compulsory arbitration on proviso which would not be brought into court because of some act of her navy performed in maintaining peace continues the supreme topic of discussion.

FAIR DIRECTORS KIWANIS GUESTS AT A LUNCHEON

President Denne Given Ovation and Lauded For His Success.

CLUB HONORED.

Mayor J. J. Turner Says Vision of Directors Carried Them Through.

Peterborough Kiwanis Club this afternoon entertained the directors of the Industrial Exhibition at luncheon in the St. James' refreshment tent at the Exhibition Grounds. President Jack Marshall was in the chair

Vice-president Charles Cook reported that Peterborough Kiwanis Club took second place in the efficiency contest at Hamilton, and President Marshall was elected Deputy-Governor of this district.

President Jack Marshall remarked that the entertainment of the Exhibition Board directors has become an annual event, and Kiwanis will retain their identity with the Board year by year

Mayor J. J. Turner delivered an inspiring message to the directors, commenting on the vision which had inspired them to the progress they have made. "The president and directors," he said, "are men of large vision, and the Exhibition has grown under their regime from nothing to a plant of $60,000 or $70,000."

Drawing attention to the willing service given in behalf of their organisation by the ladies of St James' Church, the speaker drew a parallel between that and the work of the Exhibition Board. Besides the vision, energy, and perseverance are needed. The Exhibition is a community service in which all citizens of the city and district benefit.

Kiwanis Will Help.

J Wells Fraser, president of the Chamber of Commerce, member of the Kiwanis Club, and a director of the Exhibition, said that all these organisations are working together in the service of the community. He read out the names of the directors of the Exhibition Board, and the names of Roland Denne, Tom McIndoo, Reg. Turner, Fred Hall, Charlie Cummer, and Tom Brown were greeted with cheers and applause, and when G. N. Gordon was reached in the list of honorary officers, Mayor Turner started "For he's a jolly good fellow" in his honour.

"Pull together," urged Mr. Fraser in closing, 'and there is nothing we cannot acomplish."

Roland Denne.

Three cheers, a tiger, and the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow" greeted the popular president of the Exhibition Board, who declared the appreciation of the entertainment of the directors. "We have spent another $5,000 this year to bring the Exhibtion orward," he said. The grounds were used for community purposes as a ball field and camping site. The buildings are growing, but are still inadequate, and the president expressed the opinion that the merchants of the city should erect a building to house their exhibits, leaving the main building for vegetables and flowers.

A dinin-room that could be turned into a dance hall at night is another necessity

The only way to achieve the results desired is through co-operation, Mr. Denne said. There is no reason why Peterborouh Fair should not take second place in the Province instead of fourth . London and Ottawa Fairs have not the exhibits that this Fair has and business has been poor there.

In closing, President Denne said that the Board of Directors is comprised of farmers, laborers and bankers; every class is represented and the wishes of the majority rule. All are working together for the good of all the community.

Vice-President Tom McIndoo expressed the opinion that Peterboro Exhibition has no right to stay in fourth place. Exhibitors this year express the opinion, he said, that inside three years this Fair will be favored by exhibitors above both Ottawa and London.

G. N. Gordon urged the community nature of the Exhibition, saying it is something in which all classes of the community have a stake. Support for the Board should be unanimous, and at least a thousand members should be added to the Board.

Bert McLean of Lindsay denied the report that he is here as a scout for the Lindsay Fair, and said the Lindsay Board has only the kindliest feeling for the Peterboro Exhibition. The two Fairs are interdependent, and the success of Peterboro Exhibition means the success of that at Lindsay.

Dr. J. J. Craig appealed for support for the Kiwanis Bantam team which plays Toronto at Riverside Park to-morrow, saying moral support is as much needed as financial support.

At the close of the happy gathering a telegram was read from Lindsay Exhibition Board, conveying the best wishes of the Scugog town to Peterboro Industrial, and expressing the hope that this will be the most successful ever held.

Bert Caldwell, the famous Toronto baritone, who leads the singing at the grand stand, gave several selections that were much appreciated.

CABINET COUNCIL DISCUSSES ISSUE

May Be Next Week Before Liquor Questions Are Available.

TOROSTO, Sept. 12—(Canadian Press).—The questions to be included in the liquor plebiscite ballot to be voted upon October 23 were not framed at a conference between wet and dry interests and the Premier to-day, nor were the delegates informed by the Premier as to what they would include. The result of the conference, however, is expected to be the subject of further discussion at a special meeting of the Cabinet Council called for this afternoon by Premier Ferguson at the conclusion of this morning's conference. The Premier said that he did not know on what date the questions would be announced, but it is general supposition at Queen's Park that it will be early next week before they are outlined. Neither the representatives of the Moderation League, the Prohibition Union, the Premier or the Attorney-General would divulge in any way what took place at the conference to-day other than that the framing of the questions was not a part of the discussion.

We were merely engaged in the discussion of the general policy to be followed, said the Premier at the conclusion of the conference, in order to assure us adequate information on what the public wants. We now have both sides of the questions. There is considerable criticism of the Premier by members of his own party for his refusal during the session of the last House to allow discussion of the questions to go on the ballot, but now calls into conference the leaders of the two factions. Those who took part in the conference were: John Macdonald, Rev. Talbot Moore and Geo. H. Lees, of Hamilton, representing the prohibition forces, and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., F. L. Monahan, and Cyril D. Boyle, representing the Moderate League. Premier Ferguson and Attorney-General Nickle were the only members of the Cabinet present when the conference was called.

LIQUOR PLEBISCITE.

Questions To Go On Ballot Paper Being Framed To-day.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.— The text of the long waited for liquor plebiscite question is being decided at Queen's Park to-day. Behind tightly closed doors in the Premier's office, representatives of the Prohibition Union and the Moderation League are meeting with members of the Cabinet to discuss the wording of the questions to go on the ballot October 23rd, in accordance with the invitations sent out Wednesday by Hon. W. F. Nickle at the instigation of Premier Ferguson.

When the Premier arrived at the Parliament Buildings to-day he announced that the conference would be held in strict privacy.

"We could not enter into a free discussion with members of the press present," he explained. He refrained from saying whether or not a statement would be forthcoming later in the day. Those who took part in the conference, John MacDonald, Rev. T. Albert Moore and Geo. S. Lees, of Hamilton, representing the prohibition forces, and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., F. L. Monahan and Cyril D. Boyce, representing the Moderation League, Premier Ferguson and Attorney General Nickle were the only members of the Cabinet present when the conference was called.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

WEENY AND THE TWINS KEEP STORE

Weeny ate about a dollar and ninety cents' worth.

While Charley Monkey went to the ball game, Weeny and the Twins minded his lemonade-ice cream-peanut-popcorn stand for him.

They were kept very busy.

First, Andy Antelope came and bought two packages of chewing gum. Then Bobby Ostrich came and bought a sandwich (which he ate at one bite). Next Tommy Cockatoo bought an ice cream cone, and after that so many people came it kept all three of them very busy.

Weeny kept one eye on the peanut bowl, to be sure that some of them were left.

After a while customers stopped coming, and the elephant and the Twins had time to sit down.

"Now then," said Weeny, wiping his face with his big hanky, "Charley Monkey told us to eat all we wanted and to stay as long as we liked. So I'm going to begin by eating all the peanuts in the peanut bowl and end by drinking three gallons of orangeade and then going to sleep. Help yourselves, Twins, and don't say a word for an hour and sixty-five minutes, please. I'm going to be busy."

So he started in and all you could hear was a crunch, crunch, crunching as Weeny, the elephant, ate his peanuts. Or maybe you couldn't hear him, I forget, but, anyway, he ate them.

And Nancy and Nick each had ever so many things, quite enough to make them sick, I am sure. Ice cream cones and pickles (yes, Charley sold pickles, too), and pop, and sandwiches and candy, and coca cola and crackerjack and everything. About a hundred and ten cents' worth.

And I guess Weeny ate about a dollar and ninety cents' worth.

After Weeny had his nap and another gallon of ginger ale, Charley Monkey came home.

"Whoopee!" he cried. "I see business has been good—very, very good. You've made so much money for me, Weeny, that I can change your hundred-dollar bill now."

"Why I haven't any hundred-dollar bill," said Weeny. "I never said I had."

"Yes, you did," said Charley. "You said 'could I change a hundred-dollar bill'?"

"Well, I didn't say I had one," laughed Weeny. 'Did I? I ask you?"

"Then, I hope you didn't eat anything!" cried Charlie crossly.

"Yes, we did," said Weeny. "We ate almost everything that was left. You said to eat what we liked and to stay as long as we liked."

"But I thought——"

"I can't help what you thought," said Weeny, winking at the Twins. I think he was a bad elephant and should have been sent to bed without his supper.

"Oh, we're sorry!" said Nancy and Nick. "We didn't know you were going to charge anything. We're ever so sorry."

Charlie counted his money and then counted everything that was gone.

"You've eaten up three dollars worth of stuff, he declared "You owe me three dollars."

"And we worked all afternoon, so you owe us three dollars, too," laughed Weeny.

"Why, so I do!" said Charley, good naturedly "Then we're even."

"Those were awfully good peanuts," said Weeny.

FLOWER SHOW AT THE EXHIBITION

One of the most attractive sections of the Fair, as always, is the tent where the flowers are on view. This year, previous space has been enlarged to almost double its former capacity, and it is a fine big marquee that houses the collection of plants and blossoms representing this year's quota of horticultural exhibits. Judging of the flowers has already been made, and red, blue and white cards project from the many-colored blooms. A familiar contributor of many past years whose flowers are missed this season, is Mrs. F. T. Hounsell, illness preventing this ardent flower-lover from making her usual excellent showing.

Professional and amateur gardeners alike contribute to the flower show at the fair. Interesting and unusual blooms are in the collections. In the named collection series, first prize went to George Downer, and second to Joseph Grierson. Here are the cream and pink of fussy double hollyhocks, the deep purple of monkshood, the rosy pink of the prim yarrow, the white spikes of the American centurea, the dry rustle of the everlasting or strawflower, the physostagia, a tall stalk with protruding pink-mauve blossoms, the lovely blue of larkspur, or delphinium, Salpiglossis, with its unpleasant name and its morning glory blooms, in reddish purple, and old little "butterfly" phlox, with their pretty white and yellow faces.

A. Watts of Warsaw, shows a collection of coxcombs, odd, fan-like bases merging into top heavy blossoms of rich, red and yellowish green.

For the best arranged basket of flowers, first and second prizes went respectively to George Downer and Mrs. Bruce Law, the first prize basket being an artistic creation with base and handle wound in pink crepe paper, mauve pink asters with delicate gypsophila.

First prize for the best arranged bouquet of wild flowers went to Mr. A. Macnab, whose tall, dignified collection was brightened by red berries, and first prize for the best collection of cut salpiglossis, was captured by A. E. Prest. Mrs. Bert Lockington, R. R. No. 9, was the winner of the special prize for the best floral basket.

Old-fashioned, pretty stocks in bowls, and prim scabiosa, the "old maids' pin cushion," nod to each other near the out-door roses, whose first prize went to Mr. Harry Carter, and there is a first prize ticket on Joseph Grierson's collection of gladioli, the tall tinted flowers whose petals give the appearance of crystallized colored light. Here is the Princess Elizabeth, a pure yellow pink, the Sasho, in ashes of roses shade, Sunrise just like its name, and one of the primulini species, with curved-in, moth petals.

Next door are flat bowls of pansies, the "thought" flowers, the blazing red of salvia, and a large vase of phlox.

Across the way are velvety snapdragons, with red prize to Mrs. Waterman of Fraserville; huge zinnias, in the dull minor shades of pale orange and terra cotta that these stiff decorative blooms affect, with a first prize to George Downer, and there is a black baking pan full of yellowness, packed with marigolds of every sort, from the wide-open faces of the common garden variety, to the tight-closed balls of their African cousins. J. A. Carroll of Fraserville, received first prize for this collection.

Joseph Grierson's dahlias are one of the unique attractions of the flower show. They are gorgeous things, arranged effectively on lace paper mats, some of them seven and eight inches in diameter, in the foreground a cactus dahlia in black red, its spiked petals curling in centipede fashion, farther back the calmness of a widespread bloom of deep rose madder, behind it the clear yellow of another lovely flower.

Jordan Brothers show a wonderful collection of vari-colored foliages begonias, Rex, and flowering, in pots, and fine lacy, cool green ferns. Their gladioli and those of J. H. Callander make a beautiful display on a central table, Mr. Callander's collection holding some exceptionally lovely varieties. The old red wine of the Purple Glory hobnobs here with the clear periwinkle shade of the Eadenia, and Peace, with its red heart, nods a friendly greeting to its smooth white neighbor, Defiance.

First prize for ten distinct varieties of named gladioli went to A. E. Prest. In the gladioli section, Mr. Callander, with the largest collection of all, did not show for competition.

Gladioli, as was the case at the Toronto Exhibition this year, appear to be the most prominent of all the bowers, while asters were not as noticeable as at last year's show. A special prize for the best collection of the last named blossoms went to George Downer.

Mr. James of the Little Lake cemetery company, although not competing for a prize, put in a very handsome bed of foliages this year, while Jordan Brothers secured first place for their equally good-looking central bed.

On a small table, all by themselves are three beautiful floral designs by amateurs, the first prize-winner (Mrs Bert Lockington, R. R. No. 9) having a striking "Gates Ajar," in asters and white gladioli, the second Mr. Harry Carter) an exquisite anchor of white asters and shell-pink gladioli, and the third (George Downer), a pillow of white and deep purple asters.

First prize for a basekt of roses went to Jordan Brothers, who also captured first prize in the professional class, for an odd design, a tiny motor car made of asters and roses. W. H. Young received second award for his lovely cross of roses and asters, interwoven with delicate forgetmenots.

An exhibit that attracts, as always, a great deal of attention and interested comment, is that of J. H. Callander's cactus. Odd, unearthly-looking things are these blooms of the desert places, some of them huge balls, others like tiny starfish, still more like elongated cucumbers.

There is the "water-barrel of the desert," large, round, capable-looking, in the "fish-hook" variety of cactus; the tall, "prickly pear," and the giant cactus, the "living rock," and the "dumpling," round, smooth and soft, a kindly variety differing slightly from its harder-faced sisters.

TURNBULL RUG WON BY MRS. TREMAINE

Her Estimate For Official Attendance Yesterday Was 5,789.

Mr. George Tremaine, of 80 Victoria Avenue, was the successful winner of another beautiful congoleum rug at the Turnbull Booth, at the Peterboro Exhibition yesterdap, when her estimate of the number of paid attendances Thursday was the closest to the official count. The official number of people at the Fair yesterday was 5,807, while Mrs. Tremain's estimate was 5,789.

The Turnbull booth is the centre of interest in the estimating contests, and, in addition to the congoleum rugs, size 7 feet 6 inches by 9 feet, which are given away each day, there will be given away free, on Saturday night, a mattress for the nearest estimate for the total attendance for the four days.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE.

Work of the Public Schools of the City at the Fall Fair.

In the big Flower Show marquee at the Exhibition is housed an attractive exhibit of the work of the Household Science Department of the Public Schools of the city, showing the interest taken in sewing and art work and manual training by the girls and boys of the junior and senior second and third forms.

There are on view dozens of things for doll's wear, miniature dresses and peticoats, done with tiny, neat, infinitesimal stitches and evidencing the most careful attention from their small fashioners, pillows and dainty little cases, embroidered collar and cuff sets, embroidered cushion covers and linen pieces, and the raffia baskets which are a popular portion of the course.

Water-color pictures in still life, of purple grapes and orange pumpkins, decorate the wall, flanked by silhouettes in unrelieved black, and drawings of men and boys going "fishing" and "skating."

In the Manual Training section are models carefully executed in wood, of hall stands, table lamps and jardiniere stands, with the numerous small objects that intrigue the fancy of a boy engaged with a knife and a piece of wood, including a black cat with a ferociously humped back and a life-like presentation of Mr. Jiggs, his wooden frame emblazoned chastely with black paint, a speckled vest encasing his rotund front.

Wills Won on Points -- Maple Leafs Defeat Cobourg

'CHUCK' BRADLEY FANNED TWENTY IN THE FIRST GAME WITH COBOURG

Maple Leafs' Pitcher Also Had Perfect Average in Five Times at Bat.

GAVE TWO HITS.

Charlie Curtis' Juveniles Ran Up Nineteeen Hits at King Edward Park.

Maple Leafs won a 14 to 1 verdict over Cobourg in the first game of the second O.B.A.A. Juvenile round at King Edward School Grounds yesterday afternoon. While "Chuck" Bradley was whiffing twenty of the visitors and holding them to a pair of hits, his team-mates were clouting the ball for a total of twenty-nine bases, the local heaver leading the way with a hit every time up. He was closely followed by Ab Delahaye, who wafted out two singles, a three-bagger and a homer. Scully took a couple of nice fielding chances at the hot corner, and Gillespie made a fine catch of Mann's fly in the sixth.

The Coburg champs could do nothing against Bradley's pitching, but on the defence they displayed a lot of classy fielding. As the game proceeded, however, the Leafs' showers of hits wore the visitors down, and the contest turned into a rout.

The second game will be played at Cobourg to-morrow afternoon.

WILLS CARRIED FIGHT THROUGH TWELVE ROUNDS

Argentine Wild Man Wobbled Through 12 Rounds, Taking Hard Punishment.

FIRPO WAS EASY.

Negro Heavyweight Broke Through Firpo's Guard at Will With Punches To The Body.

JERSEY CITY, N.Y., Sept. 12. — Luis Angel Firgo, the wild man from the Argentine, wobbled through 12 rounds with Harry Wills, the negro heavyweight champion here to-night, and finished a badly battered second. The battle did not develop much in the line of opposition for Jack Dempsey. The Pampas Bull took terrific punishment from Wills, who got under Firpo's guard at will, and with a sledge hammer right pounded away at Firpo's body, and sent lefts to the head that would have carried the referee's decision if a verdict could have been given. Firpo was willing and game, and he carried the fight to the colored batter only to find his opponent elusive and smiling. Starting his right above his head Wills used the numerous openings offered the clumsy Argentine to send well-timed and heavy blows to the ribs, and frequently Wills caught Firpo with powerful lefts to the face.

Half way through the mill the negro began to demonstrate the skill of the boxer and Firpo's frantic efforts to use his much heralded right in an effort to stretch the negro on the canvas brought howls of laughter from the big crowd.

Firpo's failure to land effectively against Wills did not improve his chances of victory in another bout with Dempsey, and Wills(while he showed to advantage against the mauling tactics of the Argentine, did not materialize as a successful candidate for the champion's crown.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. Player fails to take his turn at bat during an inning in which eight runs were made and 12 men went to bat. The mistake is not discovered until the next inning. What can be done about it?—D. B.

2. Can the catcher block off the runner at the plate before the ball has arrived and continue to keep him away from the plate until he gains possession of the ball and touches him out?—F. N. M.

3. Has the base runner the right to advance on a foul fly ball that is caught?—G. B.

4. Six innings of a game have been completed when the umpire forfeits the game to the visitors because the home team refuses to take the field after a certain decision. What is done with the records of this game—F. H. Y.

ANSWERS

1. If through negligence a certain player fails to take his place at bat during an inning and the mistake is not properly discovered, no action can be taken. The inning stands as played and the next time around the player simply takes his regular turn.

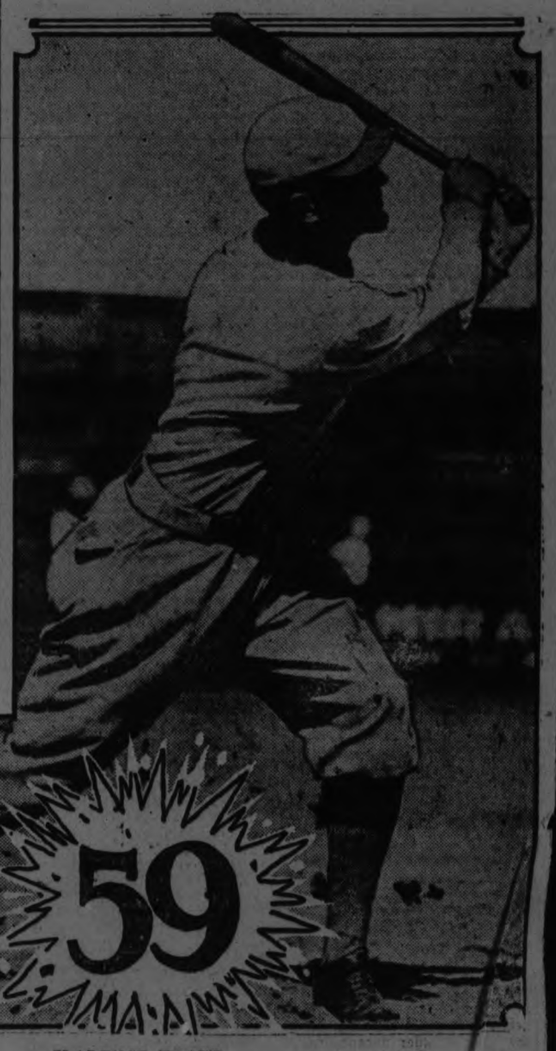
2. Catcher cannot block off the runner unless he has the ball in his possession ready to make the touch. Otherwise runner is entitled to score because of catcher's interference.

3. Certainly, if he holds his base until the ball is caught. It makes no difference whether it is foul or fair.

4. In a game which has gone over five innings and is then forfeited, the records go into the averages as made.

AFTER RUTH'S RECORD

Kraft, of Fort Worth, Only Player in Baseball With Any Chance To Top Babe's Home Run Mark.



CLARENCE KRAFT

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 12.—Babe Ruth's home run record of 59, set in 1921, which critics said would stand for all time, may be shattered this year.

And by Clarence "Big Boy" Kraft, first baseman of the Forth Worth Panthers, and home run king of the Texas League.

Going into the game of Sept. 9, Kraft had a total of 54 four-baggers to his credit for the season. On Aug. 25 he shattered the minor league record of 49, set last year by Moses Solomon. The previous record was 45, set by Perry Warden in 1895.

Kraft, starting from Aug. 25, had 21 games left in which to hit 10 more homers to break Ruth's record. For the last two years he has always hit 10 the last 20 days of the season. He is at the top of his form right now and his chances of breaking the record are better than even.

Fort Worth civic clubs are raising $10,000 to be presented to Kraft if he breaks Ruth's record of 59. The fans will not stand for him to be purposely passed and their howl counts some. Especially since Fort Worth has cinched the pennant.

Kraft's feat should not be looked upon lightly, for as a minor league performance it is equally as great as Ruth's. Most of the parks are as large as those in the American League. Kraft is a right handed batter and gets his drives over the left or centerfield walls.

The Fort Worth slugger is not a big leaguer and probably never will be. He is only an ordinary first sacker, but at bat he is the punch of the club. Kraft is a veteran. He admits 36 years and he is the same slugger who was playing with Evansville back in 1909. He came to Forth Worth in 1918.

Kraft has led the league in several departments—in home runs, in runs batted in, in total bases and in strikeouts.

Yes, sir, "Big Boy" Kraft is shooting at 60 or more homers this year and his chances are better than even.

'MAJOR HAL' DRIVEN BY EDDIE JONES WON 2.15 CLASS RACE IN FOUR HEATS AT FAIR

OUTSIDERS HERE.

"Delegette," of Sudbury, Took the 2.50 in Straight Heats.

"Delegette," a Sudbury mare owned by Mr. St. Denis and driven by Lemburg, won the 2.50 class in three straight heats in a field of nine. She won handily, while Major Hal, owned by Stanley Blewett, triumphed in the 2:15 class. Eddie Jones has experienced a good season, having driven Major Hal to success on both sides of the border this year. Silkline and Fon Todd showed a burst of speed but were not as steady as the winner. In the third heat, with Silkline leading, Major Hal stepped into a wheel, making it necessary for silkline to drop out. The judges allowed her last place.

In the fourth heat of the 2.15 class with Fon Todd leading at the three quarters mark, Major Hal slipped into the pole and beat him on the stretch by a neck. Fon Todd lost his oyn heat. He was given the pole, and if he had been kept on the inside the Major might not have got by.

Silkline, a trim sorel gelding from New Liskeard, could get away nicely but lost time changing gears. He lost ground repeatedly in breaking from a pace to a trot, and vice versa. Frank Montgomery's Bessie Brooks was right on edge yesterday. She stood third, with two seconds to her credit, chasing Fon Todd to the limit to win in the third heat.

In the 2:50 class, Dick Elmhirst's Just Jack made a good showing getting secondplace. Herman W., a big sorrel gelding, was slow in getting away. He stood fourth, and although he trailed way in the rear in the first heat, with an even start it is doubtful to say what the might horse might do.

PRESS VERDICT FAVORED WILLS

Negro Heavyweight Had Advantage in Every Round of Firpo Fight.

NEW JERSEY, Sept. 12.—Harry Wills, the negro heavyweight boxer, was accorded a decisive newspaper decision over Louis Angel Firpo in the twelve-round main bout at Boyle's Acres here last night.

Wills led from the start. His blows carried more steam than the Argentine's, and although under the state law it was officially a no-decision fight, the newspaper men were virtually unanimous in crediting Wills with every round. In the fourth round the "Black Panther of New Orleans" floored Firpo for a count of four. Repeatedly he stepped in and landed blows to the "Wild Bull's" head and body, and backed away smiling broadly. His ring generalship kept him safe from Firpo's right, although it landed occasionally but without much damage. Firpo appeared to be in distress in some of the earlier rounds, and clinched so often he was stopped and warned by the referee for holding.

The attendance was roughly estimated at 75,000.

Scientific Jottings.

The man had just dropped from the eaves of a three-story dwelling, landing solidly, albeit rather awkwardly, on his skull.

"Are you injured, my good man?" inquired Mr. O'Goofty.

Quick as a flash the poor wretch murmured, "I do not wish to deceive you, sir, I am.

Now here's where the kick comes in.

Clearing his throat with an ordinary kitchen mop and fixing the fallen stranger with a humorous eye, Mr. O'Goofty said: "It serves you right, you eaves dropper."

den attack of indigestion that made it unwise to permit him to continue pitching.

Johnson likes his ice cream. Indulgence in about a pint of it about a half hour before game time caused all the trouble.

Prior to the start of the game I noticed one of the clubhouse boys passing the door of our dressing room with a tall glass full of ice cream and covered with luxurious shredded pineapple.

Being rather fond of ice cream myself, I remarked to the boy that he needn't go any further.

"This is for Walter Johnson," remarked the youngster. "He told me to hurry back."

That wonderful looking pineapple sundae an hour later caused plenty of trouble for Johnson and for a time threatened to throw a jolt into Washington's pennant chances.

The Nationals won the contest, 2 to 1, but a break of the game, an unassisted double play on a line drive to the first baseman, saved the day, when it looked as if Chicago might win.

Walter Johnson insists that he has learned a lesson, that never again will he indulge so short a time before play.

The lesson Johnson says he has learned could be used to advantage by 90 per cent of big league athletes. It is a habit of players to eat and drink prior to game time, with ice cream, soft drinks and "hot dogs" as the favorite forms of dissipation.

OSHAWA BATTERY STAY FOR WINTER

Dainty and Tyson Rumor Has Blown Over and Pair Will Stick With Oshawa.

The Oshawa Telegram says: A number of rumors have been on the street that Oshawa's star battery, 'Duke' Dainty and Al. Tyson, were leabing Oshawa and some even told the story that they had already left town for Western Ontario points.

The boys themselves have set these wild rumors at rest by declaring their intention of spending the winter here and being ready for baseball next year. They have both steady positions and are full of confidence as to the ability of the local team to come through with a victory in the Central League playoffs.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says: "The recent upheaval in the Central Ontario League will about mean that the League is through as a league. Last year the League consisted of eight teams and this year of four, and with Kingston thrown out of the League this year it is not at all likely that it will be back next year. It may mean that the League will return to home-brews, and this will be for the best interests of all concerned, as most of the towns are not in a position to afford the class of ball they have been putting up."

JUDGMENT GIVEN.

G. J. R. Battisby Sold Merry-Go-Round To Cramahe Agricultural Society.

COBOURG, September 11. (Special.) — Judge Ward has given his judgment in the action brought by J. R. Battisby, plaintiff, which was tried at the June Sittings of the Division Court, at Cobourg, against the Cramahe Township Agricultural Society, over the sale of the merry-go-round to the society. The judgment is for the planintiff for $200 and costs. The judgment is as follows:

The plaintiff under an agreement dated the 20th day of October, 1917, agreed to sell to the defendant society, and defendant agreed to purchase from the plaintiff, one merry-go-round for the sum of $300 payable upon the terms stated in the said agreement.

The chief provisions of the agreement were as follows:

The parties of the second part (the defendants) and their successors in office hereby agree to run the said merry-go-round at their annual exhibition in Castleton each year, at any other times the parties of the second part so desire; and to pay ½ of the net earnings from the same immediately after the running of the same until such time as the said $300 has been paid in full, with interest at 6 per cent., with the exception of the first year, during which term of one year there is to be no interest.

The machine was duly delivered and the defendant society used it at their annual exhibitions at Castleton in the years 1917, 1919, 1920, and 1922. In the year 1918 rain prevented its use, and in 1921 the engine attached to the machine became disabled, and it could not be used. After the exhibition of 1922 the defendant society decided to not run the machine any more, and placed it in the corner of the exhibition grounds where it was exposed to the weather, and the reason given for this action, on its part, was that the society had lost money by running the macine as shown by the statement filed herein, marked Exhibit No. 8 and Exhibit No. 7.

It appears from the evidence that the directors of the defendant society communicated with the plaintiff some time after the machine ceased to be used, and an interview between the parties hereto took place. At this interview the plaintiff was requested to try and sell the machine for the directors, they stating that they would be willing to bear loss to the extent of $100. The plaintiff agreed to do what he could to effect a sale; and he did try to do so but failed to secure a purchaser.

It seems to me that the directors of the defendant society made a serous mistake when they ceased to run the machine in question at the annual exhibition at Castleton, as they thereby committed a breach of the above recited agreement; and they were further to blame in leaving the machine exposed to the weather instead of placing it in the exhibition building, and notifying the plaintiff to come and see them and endeavor to secure an agreement with him.

Many months of exposure to the weather must have very much injured such a machine. Counsel for the defendant society has argued that the action as brought is not a proper one, the action should have been brought for damages. I cannot agree with this contention. The damage suffered by the plaintiff appears to me in not being paid for this machine, and this he has sued for. Immediately the defendant society ceased to carry out the agreement to run the machine it became liable, and I so find; and I think I am bound by the decision in Sharples Separator Co. vs. Markham 24 Ontario Weekly Notes which seems to be almost exactly similar to the case at bar.

I am inclined to believe from the evidence of the amount of repairs found necessary each year that there is great room for the belief and the conclusion that I have come to that the defendant society directors, being men of no experience in such matters, and the plaintiff being a man of considerable experience, the directors were perhaps led astray as to the real value of the machine.

In any event I think that considering the unfortunate results, the plaintiff should make some concessions and bear a part of the loss.

I consider that the ends of justice will be served by awarding the plaintiff the sum of two hundred dollars, and I find that that sum is due and owing by the defendant society to the plaintiff.

There will be judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant society for two hundred dollars, with costs.

H. A. WARD, Judge.

VENUS FAVORS SCOTCH

Planets Have Decreed Prince of Wales Will Marry Fair Daughter of Buccleuch—So Still Your Fluttering Hearts, Girls!

By GENE COHN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—You might as well know the worst, girls.

The Prince may be for you, but the stars are against you.

It might have been different had Venus been wandering somewhere between Oshkosh and Schenectady, U. S. A., on that particular night. But it so happens that when the doctor smiled at George Witten, otherwise known as King George, and said, "It's a boy!" the fickle planet that watches over romance was glowing softly down on a certain part of Scotland.

Miss Belle Bart, prominent young astrologist, shown drawing up horoscopic chart of Prince.

And that settles it!

You may dance with the Prince and catch a flirtatious note in his eye, but when the heir to Britain's throne slips the gold band ring on the wedding finger, the party of the second part will be a Scotch maiden—probably one of those pretty Buccleuch gals.

And this will happen about 1928—four long years—when the planets will be talking with a broad Scotch burr, but the Prince will hear these sweet nothings despite the Harry Lauder accent and will tumble far worse than ever he did from a horse.

All this is prognosticated by Miss Belle Bart, director of the American Academy of Astrology, who has been watching the heavens closely in the interest of the glorified American girl who thinks she can cop off the visiting peer.

Miss Bart has charted the skies to read the future of the Prince of Wales. Some things, she says, may not now be told because they have too personal and important a bearing.

But of major importance, both to the Prince and to future history, is the prognostication that the Prince of Wales may ascend the throne of England in 1925.

Miss Bart does not predict the death of the present King, but says the Prince will be plunged into some sort of trouble early next spring, and then will begin a turn of events that may enable him to assume the British throne if he so desires.

The exact horoscopic vernacular is this:

"Astrological indications do not hold hope for any American girl as consort for the Prince of Wales.

"His horoscope, due to the position of Venus, does not indicate marriage for four years. Since Venus, which is the planet of love, was in the sign governing Scotland at the time of his birth, the indications are that in 1928 he will marry a lady of Scotch origin.

"A very interesting planetary position should make itself felt in the spring of 1925, when Mars, the planet of activity, will form an opposition to Saturn, planet of losses and depressions.

"The progressed moon also will be in conjunction with Mars, indicating a liability to physical danger; and in opposition to Saturn indicating probable difficulties through older men in the family. But the moon and Mars hold a friendly aspect to Jupiter in 1925 and thus place the Prince in the position of accepting rulership.

Planetary chart showing position of influencing heavenly bodies at the birth of the Prince of Wales.

"The planetary conditions indicate a decided change in the present English regime and the Prince's horoscope indicates that he will come to the fore in political affairs of Europe provided he guards himself against the physical dangers Mars places in his path."

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

RAWLINSON'S NEWEST ROLE TEEMS WITH RAPID ACTION.

When two young people decide they'll elope, and the girl's father and her richest suitor decide against the proposition, the finals are apt to be fast and furious throughout.

Herbert Rawlinson and Carmelita Geraghty are the couple, and Otto Hoffman, the father, and Bert Roach the disgruntled suitor in the Rawlinson feature which opened yesterday at the Royal Theatre, "High Speed." This is a typical Rawlinson role, but better than most of his recent ones, and offers action aplenty.

"High Speed" was directed by Herbert Blache from Frederick Jackson's story. Its hero is a young amateur athletic star and its heroine the daughter of the town's financial king. They decide they'll get married.

Strangely enough, the girl's father decides differently. So does the richest suitor. He hasn't any brains, but he has enough money to supply an interchangeable commodity for his lack of gray matter.

Out the window and down the ladder go the hero and heroine, while father is bathing. Then it's an automobile race in which neither pursuer nor pursued wins, because "the law" whizzes by both of the machines and leads them into jail. The heroine gets in a little fast work there by borrowing some of the brainless wonder's money for the purpose of getting her father out of the jail, and using it for her accomplice in elopement instead.

Two or three fast fights for Rawlinson and several good action scenes mingle with the comedy stuff. Besides the players mentioned, Percy Challenger, Jules Cowles, I. Buckley Russell and Pat Harmon, have supporting roles which they play with marked intelligence.

AT THE CAPITOL.

NEW COOGAN FILM HAILED AS HIS BEST

"Little Robinson Crusoe" Written For Star By Willard Mack.

What has turned out to be Jackie Coogan's most entertaining picture will be seen at the Capitol Theatre to-day and Saturday. Its title is "Little Robinson Crusoe," written especially for the little star by Willard Mack, who has let his imagination run rampant in working out a plausible and suitable story for Jackie.

The story has to do with Jackie, who plays Mickey Hogan, orphaned son of a San Francisco police hero. He sets out from San Francisco on a tramp steamer bound for Australia to visit his aunt. When they reach the tropics, however, a typhoon wrecks and sinks the ship, taking down all on board with the exception of Mickey and a black cat, who drift away on an improvised raft and strike the shores of a tropical isle.

Then come cannibals and Satan, in all his demoniac glory, after he behold the doings of little Robinson on the tropical man-eating island, will hide his face in shame. For Jackie starts the ball rolling and keeps everyone busier than a vagrant pup with a pedigreed herd of fleas parking on him.

Imagine, embraced in the setting of one picture—San Francisco's police force, the U. S. Marine's, shipwrecks, cannibals, monkeys, black cats, and you may expect most anything—especially when such a mischievous son of Erin as Mickey Hogan is let loose among cannibals.

The splendid supporting cast includes Tom Santschi, Gloria Grey, Will Walling, Bert Sprotte, Noble Johnson, Tote Ducrow and C. H. Wilson. "Little Robinson Crusoe" was personally supervised by Jack Coogan, Sr.

AT THE REGENT.

PERFORMERS HURT IN THRILLING FIGHT. SCENE FOR PICTURE.

Frank Mayo and Tom Santschi Stage Terrific Battle; Both Badly Battered.

Tom Santschi, playing the heavy role in the William Fox picture 'The Plunderer,' now playing at the Regent Theatre for 3 days, is an extremely big man. He weighs nearly 200 pounds and is built in proportion. Frank Mayo, playing the lead, is not quite so large, but he is big enough. In an extraordinary fight scene which eventually brings the twisted threads of the story together, Santschi is thrown clear over an office railing and his head crashes through a glass door.

During the filming if this fight, it may be taken for granted, there was no rehearsal and moreover, no retakes. It was too real right from the beginning.

The fight was more realistic for the reason that at no stage did it become one sided. In the early scenes, Santschi has decidedly the best of it. But as it progresses, the battle becomes a rough and tumble instead of merely a fist fight. They clinch and Mayo stars at infighting. His repeated short jabs are effective. Time and again the men are on the floor, each apparently unable to strike another blow. Then they rise and go at it again.

The camera has caught the blows, proving beyond doubt that they were not drawn. It was cruel punishment for both men, but they stood it and when the last blow was struck, both of them toppled into chairs and called it a day.

While neither was seriously hurt, both men were completely exhausted. The fight had lasted twelve minutes without a halt. This is equal to ten rounds of ring fighting with one minute rests.

AT THE GRAND.

CAT AND CANARY AT THE GRAND NEXT MONDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY

Of hardly secondary interest to the great enthusiasm aroused by next week's production of "The Cat and the Canary" by the Theatrical Enterprises Ltd., Company of players at the Grand is the fact that Miss Jessica Paige, will be seen in the famous role of Annabelle West, the haunted heroine of this spooky drama and that Mr. Byron Hawkins will appear in the role of Paul Jones, the hero who is no hero at all.

These were the roles which catapulted Sylvia Field and Henry Hull into stardom, when "The Cat and the Canary" broke all existing theatrical records during its two year tenancy of the National Theatre, New York.

It is safe to say that "The Cat and the Canary" will be the most talked-about play ever produced in stock in this city, and it is equally easy to predict that Miss Paige and Mr. Hawkins in the roles mentioned above, will not only delight their host of admirers but will make the characters of Annabelle West and Paul Jones the parts in which they will be remembered the longest.

Rehearsals of "The Cat and the Canary" are going along with a snap and a vim that betoken an unusual polish. This being its first presentation in stock, Director Norman Wendell is sparing absolutely no effort to make the play an outstanding achievement.

JACK CANUCK SET A FAST PACE

Greatest Race of the Season at Exhibition Grounds on Saturday.

Saturday's racing at the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition will be the fastest event seen here in many moons.

Jack Canuck, the lively pacer that struck a 2:12 gait at Toronto Exhibition, will set the pace for a local favorite, Major Hal, and a dark horse that arrived this morning.

With the other entries in the Free for all the race should be the thrill of the season.

From the weighing of 11,000 brains, an average weight of 1,361 grains for man and 1,220 grains for woman was found.

BRITAIN'S RIGHT OF RESERVATION IS RECOGNIZED

Sub-Committee of League Assembly Upholds Condition Parmoor Specified.

ON PEACE SERVICE.

May Lead To Weakening of World Court Status By Other Reservations.

GENEVA, Sept. 13. — (Canadian Press).—Great Britain's right to sign the compulsory arbitration clause of the world court of justice with reservations was upheld yesterday by the sub-committee of the League of Nations assembly, which will report its findings to the full juridical commission of the assembly. This decision means that not only Great Britain, but any other State which subscribed to the obligatory arbitration clause, has a perfect right to make whatever reservations it chooses. The jurists frankly admitted last night that this decision in principle at least will open the way to a general weakening of this world court statute.

Great Britain made it clear yesterday that her reservations would affect only the fourth category of juridical matters open to compulsory arbitration by the court. This category refers to arbitration of all points of international law, and the British representatives indicated that they would confine their reservations to questions of maritime law which may be raised by some power in consequence of some action by the British fleet while performing a peace service for the League of Nations.

Her Own Interpretation.

In other words, Great Britain does not intend to have her interpretation of sea law submitted to obligatory arbitration. Although Friday's decision marks a distinct advance in the work of the commissions, the jurists laid special emphasis on the fact that it might lead to reservations in other categories of juridical disputes, including the interpretation of treaties. Lord Parmoor of Great Britain was assailed by the journalists of many countries last night with questions concerning the effect of the British reservations on British relations with the United States in case of any future differences over the interpretation of sea law. He got around all the questions by saying that however embarrassing it might be, the fact remained that the United States was not a member of the League of Nations. This being so, he added, any possible dispute between Great Britain and the United States arising out of captures of vessels at sea would be settled through the usual legal and diplomatic channels.

Any compact with Great Britain entered into, said Lord Parmoor, was with the members of the League of Nations and did not affect outsiders, but Great Britain, he declared, in bringing her naval force against any aggressors, naturally could not be asked to be judged by those whom she was serving in the interests of peace.

Naturally, Lord Parmoor went on, Great Britain should not be asked to submit to compulsory arbitration any incident arising with either a member or non-member of the League of Nations.

Sweden Comes In.

Friday's developments seemed to convince the delegates generally that the League assembly was moving toward some agreement concerning sanctions. Even Sweden, which is violently opposed to the pact of guarantees, joined the ranks of many other states which have expressed their readiness to contribute something to outlaw war. M. Branting, the Swedish representative, asserted that Sweden would be glad to bring forward financial and economic sanctions in a common cause to increase world security and to reduce the impotence any aggressor state.

The countries of Latin-America took a prominent part in the discussions. The representatives of Brazil and Uruguay declared that all Latin-America favored the idea of compulsory arbitration and was ready to contribute to sanctions.

Denmark created something of a flurry when Peter Munch, former Minister of Defence, recommended that the best way to secure disarmament would be for the victorious Powers in the late war to cut down their armaments to the level of those of the vanquished Powers. If the victorious nations reduced their present strength to one-fifth, M. Munch declared, it would only be equitable, and even then Germany would be at a disadvantage.

PREMIER MACDONALD DISCLOSES GIFT OF STOCK FROM SIR ALEXANDER GRANT

Replies To Criticisms of His Ownership of Shares In Big Biscuit Company.

ONLY ENDOWMENT.

Accepted By Premier For As Long As He Kept Car Grant Gave Him.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Following prominence given in certain newspapers to the fact that 30,000 one-pound shares in the Edinburgh firm of McVitie and Price, of which Sir Alexander Grant is the managing director, has been allotted to Premier Ramsay MacDonald, the Premier made the following statement yesterday:

"When we met shortly after I became Prime Minister, Sir Alexander declared that his contribution to my comfort would be a Daimler car. I explained that I would be quite content to hire one, as when I left office I would probably be a poorer man.

Loth to Accept.

"'Oh, but I will endow it,' rejoined Sir Alexander. I was still unwilling because I did not fancy myself as the owner of a car, and it was against my simple habits. It was a long time before I was persuaded to agree, and there are letters in existence which reveal the minds of both of us. In the end, however, I agreed to the arrangement that a sum of money would be invested in my name, and the income therefrom I was to enjoy during my lifetime so long as I kept the car. At my death it was to revert to Sir Alexander Grant or his heirs. I am sick at heart to have to talk like this, but I must protect my dear old friend in the enjoyment of the honor which the King has so worthily bestowed on him, and with which this act of personal kindness to myself had as much to do as the man in the moon."

Premier MacDonald further pointed out that Sir Alexander Grant had obtained his baronetcy for public services, including the gift of the national library to Scotland.

Opponents Censure.

The Premier's opponents have been making a fuss at what appeared to be his enlistment in the ranks of the capitalists, but it was suggested that he purchased the shares for a trust in which he was personally interested financially.

The Premier has also offended the Trade Unionists by the publication of a new edition of his book on Socialism. In the preface he denounces public doles for the unemployed and asserts that strikes and limitation of output are no part of Socialism.

Premier is Barred From The Lossiemouth Links

When Ramsay Macdonald, British prime minister, wants to play golf he goes to the unfashionable links at Spey Bay. He was excluded several years ago from the exclusive Lossiemouth course because of pacifist sentiments. Having been barred from his own home links does not seem to bother him much though and he seems to be in good form.

COUNTY BRIDGE AT LAKEFIELD FINE ECONOMIC ACHIEVEMENT

Cement Structure 230 Feet Long and 28 Feet Wide Cost $23,370.

OFFICIAL OPENING.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., Spoke of Paved Highway Between Peterboro and "Cementville."

Peterboro County Council furnished a notable example of economy in public work without sacrifice of utilitarian beauty in the formal opening of the new concrete bridge at Lakefield yesterday.

Incidentally Lakefield with its big cement plant still incomplete and broadening out to a property of huge proportions, found in the new county bridge additional justification of its claim to be known as the cement town of Ontario. A large crowd of the village residents turned out at 11 a.m. for the official ceremony, and visitors from Peterboro frankly expressed surprise at the county's achievement. It closely rivals the Hunter Street bridge in Peterboro and should endure for generations as a monument to the enterprise of the County Council, the persistency and perseverance of Reeve J. C. Strickland, the efficiency of John J. Macnab, B.Sc., of Trenton, the contractor, and to the engineering ability and sound advice of A. W. Connor & Co., of Toronto, the county's engineers.

Cost $23,700.

Two hundred and thirty feet long, twenty-eight feet two inches wide, and with an elevation of thirty-four feet from the river bed to the floor, containing twenty-four tons of reinforcing steel and six hundred and sixty-two cubic yards of solid concrete, complete with a floor carried on open spanderal arches, wing walls, with six concrete pillars and concrete lamp poles, the net cost to the county of the entire structure will be $23,370, inclusive of engineers' fees, amounting to $1,113.

The contract price with J. J. Macnab was $20,933, and all that the contractor will receive is $20,933. There were no extras and all parties were satisfied, the County Council because of the efficiency and economy of the work, the contractor because it was profitable.

DANES ADMIRE SCOUTS.

American Scouts Are Delighted With Their Visit.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—American Boy Scouts still hold first place in the hearts of the Danish public. Newspapers have all lauded their fine bearing, excellent equipment and their tremendous power for cheering and uttering weird and penetrating noises.

The American scouts are delighted with their visit and particularly pleased by the proximity of the place where they take their morning swim and play water polo. They are appreciative also of the attitude of the Danish scouts in refusing to take part in contests where knowledge of the local geography is a help.

CLARKSON FINDS MISSING CHEQUE IN SMITH CASE

Stub Marked Payable To Hon. Peter Smith Was Exhibit At Hearing.

CHEQUE TO BEARER.

Found In Safety Deposit Box of Late Manager of Home Bank.

TORONTO, Sept. 13. — T. Clarkson liquidator of the Home Bank, has discovered the "missing cheque" for $15,000 the stub for which —marked as payable to Hon. Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer, was an exhibit before the public accounts committee of the Ontario Legislature last spring. Until now the cheque has been missing.

The long sought document was found in the safety deposit box of the late J. Cooper Mason general manager of the bank. Strangely in that it is drawn to "bearer" and dated December 13th. It was this cheque which Mr. Clarkson stated before the committee on March 31st had been "abstracted" from the Home Bank documents, and which until now has not been available.

The first time in the Public Accounts committee's investigation of Ontario bond transactions that the name of Hon. Peter Smith was brought into evidence was when Mr. Clarkson produced the stub, stating that he had been unable to find the cheque itself.

HOME BANK LOANS WERE UNSECURED

Toronto Branch Never Made Report of Debts Overdue.

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—There was no very sensational developments in the Home Bank trial on Friday. Evidence was taken concerning business done by the Toronto branch of the bank in which it was brought out that many loans had been made with little or no security. Many of these loans originated in the head office but were carried on the books of the branch. It was also stated in evidence that the branch never made a report to the head office regarding over due debts.

G. L. Chapman who was assistant manager of the Toronto branch was the chief witness. He gave a long list of loans in which the amount loaned far exceeded the security provided. The interest sheets showed the amount of loans on which no interest was charged ran to $49,932 and that the total interest hearing advances in the Toronto branch amounted to $11,000,000. He also gave a list of companies which had overdrafts at the bank in which some of the main amounts were: Arnprior Cabinet $71,906 over draft; Athletic Suit Company, $57,44; British Dominion Holding and Investment Company overdraft $100,000 and the Canadian Shoe Company $35,273 over draft. Miss Gladys Love who had been employed in the Toronto office said that the amount of interest charged to profit and loss account for the year ending May 31, 1923, totalled $373,39. A number of loans to H. J. Daly were covered by notes with interest added.

WINDSHIELD CUT DRIVER'S THROAT

Car Struck Pole and Turned Over—One Dead.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 13.—Allen Macdonald, aged 27, of Detroit, is dead; Ottis Smith, 24, of Detroit, is severely wounded, and four persons were painfully bruised and shaken as a result of a motor accident here at 9.30 a.m. Friday. Smith, the driver, failed to notice a turn in the road and lunged the machine into the ditch where it struck a telephone pole and turned over. Macdonald's throat was cut by the windshield, and his skull fractured. He bled to death in five minutes. Smith is suffering from severe shock and cannot be moved. The inquest on Macdonald's body was adjourned until Monday evening.

CHINESE SOLDIERS ON THE WAY TO SHANGHAI

Tramp, Tramp, Tramp—the Chinese soldiers are marching on to Shanghai to protect their city, where the fighting grows heavier and large numbers of machine guns have been put into service. Airplanes are circling over the city and the harbor is full of American, British, Japanese and French warships ready to protect foreign interests there.

DOG SHOW AT THE EXHIBITION PROVES A GRATIFYING SUCCESS

First Effort Attracts 260 Dogs, Some of Them Provincial Prize Winners.

CROWD ON FRIDAY.

Stands Were Filled at Afternoon and Evening Performances.

The mild weather of yesterday afternoon saw a big crowd at the Exhibition, and the rain that fell at supper-time did no appreciable damage to the evening attendance, which was splendid. The various exhibits and the attractions on the midway were patronized by large crowds, and the grandstand had a full quota for the afternoon and evening performances. In the afternoon, special attractions were two good races, judging for the best gentleman rider, and a drawing contest in the heavy class on a weight of 6,000 pounds.

The two races were well contested. Each called for a purse of $250. In the 2:20 race, Stan. Blewett's Major Hal took first money, $125; Lady Manor, owned by E. Elmhurst, of Lang, got second place, winning $62.50, while the third and fourth awards of $37.50 and $25 went respectively to Rose Weever and Lena Marie, both horses owned by Robert Montgomery of New Liskeard. Speer Alcot, owned by J. McTavish of Haileybury, also ran. The time of this race was 2:18, and the results of heats was as follows: Major Hal, 1-1-1; Lady Manor, 2-2-2; Rose Weever, 5-3-3, and Lena Marie, 3-4-4.

In the 2:30 race, time 2:24, Conconium, owned by W. Briggs, of Toronto, ran first; Billie G, owned by G. Watson of Toronto, second; Ruby Patch, owned by W. Briggs of Toronto, third, and Mack R, owned by A. McQuaig of Havelock, fourth. Van Todd, owned by C. Chapman of Toronto, also ran. The results of the heats: Conconium, 1-1-1; Gillie G, 2-2-2; Ruby Patch, 4-4-3, and Mack R, 3-5-4.

Timers for both races were George Lipsett and Frank Montgomery. J. A. Sinclair acted as starter, Charles Schoolcy as clerk, and judges were Charles Quinlan and J. M. Brooks.

Drawing Contest.

W. R. Roseborough was in charge of the drawing contest, in which four teams took part, drawing a weight of 6,000 pounds. W. Stinson of Peterborough took first place, drawing the load 114 feet and 10 inches; S. McManus, of Smith, came second, drawing 109 feet and 8 inches, and J. McManus, of Smith, third, drawing 66 feet and 10 inches.

The class for gentlemen riders, open to members of the Peterborough Riding Club, which donated a shield for the first award, had four entries. First prize went to Stanley Bishop, second to C. G. Graham, third to T. N. D. Kelly.

Main Building Attractions.

Special attractions in the main building yesterday were the style shows. Messrs. Richard Hall and Son have an interesting series of Fall wearing apparel for women, including costumes and suits of the latest, up-to-date modes, during the afternoon and evening, and Messrs. Brimmell and Irwin have a novel style show, with a young man displaying the very newest ideas in masculine attire for Fall wear.

Dog Show Success.

The dog show, an innovation at this year's fair, opened yesterday. Although the voluntary helper at the gate who called vigorously that "there are dogs here from all over Canada, from England, Italy and the United States," may have stretched it just a little, still there was a noble display of dogs, and enough interest shown on the opening occasion to warrant the assertion that this is one of the most popular of the big fair's many fine attractions. An aggregate of two hundred and sixty dogs, the major portion of the number voicing their displeasure at the occasion, large and small, ranging from the well-known fox terrier to the novel Russian wolfhound, are gathered in the big tent that houses the canine display. They

SOCIALIST KILLS FASCIST DEPUTY

Italian Youth Avenged Murder of Matteotti, the Socialist Deputy.

ROME, Sept. 13— Italy suffered another political crime— the second of this summer—in the assassination on Friday of Armondo Casalini, a Fascist deputy by a young carpenter named Giovanni Corvi who when interrogated by the police, declared he committed the deed to "avenge my brother in idealism, Matteotti"

Coming at a time when the country is particularly nervous over the political situation, the assassination has produced a grave impression. The newspapers lost no time in appealing to the population to remain calm, lest the country be plunged into further bloodshed. The council of ministers took immediate measures to maintain order and prevent reprisals

The shooting of Deputy Casalini took place about ten o'clock on Friday morning while he was riding in a street car from his home in a suburb, accompanied by his fourteen year old daughter. The assassin leaped upon the rear platform of the car, then stepping into the car, pulled an automatic revolver from his pocket and fired three times at close range. Two of the shots lodged in the deputy's head. He crumpled in his seat, while Corvi, brandishing his revolver jumped to the ground. He was pursued by some of the passengers and captured.

LOEBS PUT SONS AT HARD WORK TO ATONE FOR DICKIE

Slayer of Robert Franks Last of Family To Live In Idleness.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., Sept. 13.—Dickie Loeb, slayer of Robert Franks, will be the last of the Loebs to lead a life of idleness.

Never again, his parents have determined, shall the family include a member of "the idle rich." It became known that they already have placed their youngest son, Thomas, twelve, at work on their 1,500-acre estate here.

Too much idle time, they believe, put Dickie, their favorite, behind the bars of Joliet, and the schedule of work laid out for Thomas is as harsh as that enforced upon the son of the poorest farmer.

Thomas, under the new plan, must rise at dawn and report at the model dairy for work before breakfast. After this meal he is to work on the farm with other hands. His older brother, Ernest has been given the managership of the farm.

CROWD PREVENTED WIDOW'S EVICTION

Clydebank Rent Strike Culminates In Routing of Sheriff's Officers.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Clydebank rent strike has led to exciting scenes. Friday morning the arrival of the sheriff's officers escorted by police to eject a widow and her family in St. Granville Street for non-payment of rent was heralded by the ringing of handbells, and the blowing of whistles — a prearranged signal, denoting that an eviction was occurring.

A crowd of 500 collected. The officers carried out some furniture but sympathisers swarmed into the house and hampered the work, compelling the officers to desist. The widow meanwhile suffered a seizure and a doctor was called. The crowd, becoming threatening, the officers drove off in a motor car in a shower of stones and clods of earth.

The crowd afterwards carried the furniture back into the house, and subsequently several Labor members of the Town Council addressed the crowd. A local committee has been formed to organize a campaign of passive resistance. In the event of house-owners declining to join the rent tribunal a general rent strike throughout the district may be declared.

NO BEER BY KEG.

Manitoba Restriction Permits Sale Only in Bottles.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 13.—Official proclamation has been made by the Manitoba Government of a recent order in council prohibiting the sale of beer by the keg or barrel, and restraining purchases under permits to 48 pints each week. Beer henceforth may be sold in bottles only.

Peterborough is noted as a city of beauty and attractiveness. The Flower Show will prove it.

PREMIER MEETS WETS AND DRYS IN CONFERENCE

Plebiscite On October 23 Seeks Public Opinion On Present O.T.A.

MEETING PRIVATE.

Ballot Also Includes Question As To Sale By Government Control.

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—The question of the form of ballot to be used in the plebiscite on October 23 was discussed Friday in Premier Ferguson's office in the parliament buildings here at a conference in which there were present the Premier and Attorney General W. F. Nickle, representing the Government, and representatives of the prohibition union and the moderation league. The conference was private and the press was not admitted.

After the conference Premier Ferguson issued the following statement:

"The first consideration of a Government in its legislation and the administration thereof must always be the moral and materal progress and welfare of the people it serves. The greatest force in the securing of law observance and the suppression of crime and elimination of distress is public opinion. The purpose of the Plebiscite is to secure from the people such an expression of opinion as will enable the Government to adopt such measures as will have behind them the fullest possible public approval and support.

Do You Favor O.T.A.?

"The Ontario Temperance Act as amended and strengthened from time to time during the past eight years is now the governing principle in the handling of our liquor problem. It is obvious therefore that the first enquiry must be directed to ascertain if the people desire to continue the principle of this law. One of the questions will therefore be: 'ARE YOU IN FAVOR OF THE CONTINUANCE OF THE ONTARIO TEMPERANCE ACT?' If the majority answer in the affirmative there can be no doubt as to the course to be followed.

Government Control.

"If on the other hand the majority answer in the negative it means that some new method of controlling the sale as a beverage of spirituous liquor must be adopted. The Government therefore seeks a further expression of opinion by asking a second question: "ARE YOU IN FAVOR OF THE SALE AS A BEVERAGE OF BEER AND SPIRITUOUS LIQUOR IN SEALED PACKAGES UNDER GOVERNMENT CONTROL"?

"Government control" In view of the Government does not mean a system of sale such as is in operation in Quebec and British Columbia. It means that the Government will make all sales and that the people will be given opportunity as expressed by their votes at the polls of purchasing beer and liquors under strict regulations."

RENAULT MARRIED.

French Canadian Boxer Weds After One Day's Courtship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. — Jack Renault, French Canadian heavyweight, and title contender, and Thelma Hudson, of the New York stage, were quietly married in Atlantic City after one day's courtship, it was learned yesterday.

PASTEURIZATION AGAIN

Pasteurization ensures the safety of milk and is the best system yet discovered for the handling of a large volume of milk at a reasonable cost.

Some have argued that the heating of the milk changes the quality of it, especially as to the albumen. This change, if it were a fact, would be wholly comparable to the soft boiling of an egg, which is generaly conceded as making the egg more digestible than the raw.

"Clean, safe milk can always be relied upon as being the food without a fault for both young and old."

OUR MILK IS CLARIFIED AND PASTEURIZED

DOG SHOW

came from as near by as Port Hope and Campbellford and Keene, and as far away as Detroit and Winnipeg. There were dogs from Toronto and Hamilton, from Huntsville and Quebec, from Cobourg and Kingston and Galt and London, from Grimsby and Brantford, from Lindsay and from Belleville, and there were plenty of them from the city itself, the Peterborough dogs making a fine showing in competition with strange canines, and including in their number the fine-bred Barney Google, owned by W. J. Welch, of Douro Street.

Many of the dogs slept peacefully, unmindful of the clamor of their nervous companions. Straining at the leash, creating an uproar in its immediate neighborhood and refusing to be quiet, was a tall, aristocratic Russian wolfhound, a beauty with a fine, long nose, and expressionless, agate eyes. Lassie Invincible, a pedigreed bronze and white collie, peered around its corner at the wire cage that enclosed a tiny brown Pomeranian pup, the smallest dog in the show. Duke, the fine big Scotch collie, owned by Louis Anthony, lay at its master's feet. Duke knows well how to get free from a collar and has no respect for a leash. As soon as his master disappeared for a moment yesterday, he made a quick getaway and curled up in the car, ready for home.

The Boston terriers made a fine showing. One long sideline of wooden cubicles was filled with these bright little dogs, with their querulous yap and pricked ears. The Little Princess and her companions had a luxurious corner, with red velvet hangings and corner festoons of pink apple blossoms.

Cheerful wire-haired terriers, alert and cranky-looking, were flanked by dainty little Pekingese, Mah Jongg and his daughter, Sow Sow See, were in one fly cage, and farther along were numerous brown and black Pomeranian toy dogs, capricious small things that watched their audiences with eager black eyes. One small lady tried unavailingly to dig a hole in the bottom of her cage.

Hounds, with their lonesome, baying call; Dalmatians, the black and white coach dogs; bull terriers, with white bodies and pink-trimmed eyes; black and brown retrievers; big, ferocious English bulldogs, with spiked fangs over slavering jaws; Alsatian shepherd dogs, with fine, intelligent eyes and wolf faces; collies, with their high-bred look; American foxhounds; setters; temperamental Russian wolfhounds; they all looked out at their admirers with sleepy or cross eyes, as the case might be. A huge cream bulldog with overlapping folds of flesh regarded a white neighboring dog with what might be a friendly look, or otherwise, it was hard to say, and a brown spaniel gazed out at the world and its people with a very lonesome expression.

Several giant black Newfoundlands, with big, mild eyes, rested quietly in their places, and a single Great Dane, stone grey, with liver-colored patches, slept undisturbed by the yapping of the Boston terriers over the way. One of these, with the enticing name of Peaches, was also having a peaceful nap in a noisy corner.

LINDSAY-PETERBORO PROVINCIAL ROAD

W. H. Bradburn Confident That Government Will Carry Out Proposal Without Delay.

According to W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., a Lindsay-Peterboro provincial highway will become a reality in the near future.

Last February, Mr. Bradburn accompanied the County Council of the County of Peterboro, when attending the Good Roads Convention in Toronto in urging upon the Minister of Highways the necessity for the connecting link between the two urban centres.

The provincial member has been pressing for the highway and in speaking to the Examiner yesterday remarked that it would only be a short time before the construction would be authorized.

Security under conditions once considered impossible

HERE is a new way in personal hygiene. A way that assures peace-of-mind, charm and exquisiteness under circumstances impossible with all conditions.

Dances, bridge, the theatre—the demands of business and social duties—meet them now, confidently unhandicapped. Wear, too, your filmiest frocks, your daintiest gowns!

Makeshift sanitary pads, say health authorities, are responsible for 80% of the lack of charm, loss of immaculacy expected of a woman.

Now millions have turned to a new way. Doctors advise it. 8 in 10 women in the better classes have adopted it.

This new way, KOTEX, is a wartime discovery, that absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture. 5 times as absorbent as cotton. Once you use KOTEX no other method will ever satisfy. And millions will tell you this.

* * *

KOTEX is sold in all department and drug stores; two sizes—Regular and Super (extra thickness). Each box contains twelve immaculate, snowy white folds, ready-for-immediate-use, simply by asking for KOTEX

All leading hospitals today use Kotex

A RURAL FAIR CAMPBELLFORD

Pupils of Seymour Township Held Their Annual Outing Yesterday—The Prize Winners.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13.—The rural school pupils of Seymour Township had their annual outing yesterday when the School Fair was held here on the grounds of the Agricultural Society; the affair being well patronized by the parents and friends of the children and by other friends who are interested in the cause of education. The pupils of the Campbellford Public and the students of the High School had a half holiday to attend the Fair but took no part in the programme. This was the first school Fair of the year and the first held in Northumberland County under the direction of District Representative W. H. Smith of Brighton who took over his present position last spring. Mr. Smith is experienced in his work and is to be congratulated on the success of his first appearance here in his capacity of Fair director.

Well Trained Pupils

There was not a male teacher in evidence yesterday and the girls among the pupils outnumbered the boys by at least 10 to one. It was evident from the showing made yesterday that the young people in the rural schools are living under no educational disadvantage that they are receiving a training that is calculated to fit them for the duties of life. The girls are taught all the arts of housekeeping and maidens of 10 years or less exhibited master pieces of the culinary art that would reflect credit on the best professional bakers in town.

"It used to be," remarked a mother as she looked at the display in the domestic science department," next to impossible to get the girls into the kitchen or to take an interest in cooking but since the school Fairs have started it is just as hard to keep them away from the stove."

The boys, too, are trained to take an interest in the vocation of their fathers by raising grains and vegetables from seed furnished by the Department of Agriculture. Of all the assistance and encouragement extended to the farmers by the Ontario Government, perhaps nothing has been so fruitful of satisfactory results, as the School Fair. Of all the service rendered the public none is of more real value than their work among the schools. Every year seems to mark an increase in the interest taken in these annual events by pupils and parents alike.

The School Parade

The banner event of every school Fair is the parade of the different schools.

Six sections were represented in the turnout yesterday as follows:

S.S. No. 3—22 pupils; Miss Dorothy Huycke, teacher.

No. 1—30 pupils; Miss M. Upton, teacher.

Trent River School—35 pupils; Miss Lila English, teacher.

No. 16 (Rylstone School) — 16 pupils; Mrs. Flossie Scott, teacher.

No. 5 (English Line School — 33 pupils; Miss Lillian Locke, teacher.

No. 4—14 pupils; Miss Freda Wilson, teacher.

S.S. No. 5 Wins.

The judges of the parade were Kenneth Crews of Trenton, who was here to assist Mr. Smith, and who has just been appointed assistant director of the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture; Mrs. George S. Van Volkenburg, and Mrs. James Walters, the two latter being selected to act as judges at the Fair by the West Seymour Women's Institute. These ladies, assisted by Mrs. May McArthur, secretary of the Institute, also judged the domestic science, the fruit and floral exhibits in the hall.

All of the pupils went through their evolutions with military precision, and each school, lining up in front of the grand stand, sang patriotic airs and gave their class yell.

There were some novel features in the fitting out of the pupils. One girl from Trent River school was dressed to represent Canada, and nine others wore sashes, each inscribed with the name of one of the provinces. Garb of the other pupils from this school carried a vegetable flower to show the national products of their native land.

Miss Upton had 24 of her pupils carrying large cards with Roman numerals from one to 12, and at one point in the parade these pupils were so arranged as to represent two clocks.

The English Line school made the most novel display of them all by illustrating some story with which the children were familiar. "Old Mother Hubbard," made her fruitless trips to the cupboard; "The Cow Jumped over the Moon," "Little Miss Muffett" was chased by a spider, "Simple Simon" went to the Fair, meeting the pieman on the way, and "Little Bo Beep's" lost sheep came home minus their tails. The different animal and other parts were cleverly acted by the pupils.

The judges awarded first prize to this school; No. 3 was second, No. 10 (Trent River third, and No. 1 fourth. The pupils of this school won the prize for physical culture earlier in the day.

The singing of the Rylstone pupils won much favorable comment.

Prizes for Riding.

Tedd Peake was first, Donald Stephens second, Mr. Hutchens third and Stewart Stillman, fourth in the riding contest, all of the little fellows showing creditable skill in handling their mounts.

Horsemanship must be a characteristic of the Peake family, as Tedd's little sister Jean carried off the prize as the best girl rider.

In the Hall.

There was a large number of entries in the poultry and other classes that were shown inside. There were two sheaves of silo corn 13 feet in length, but the first prize went to Donald Rutherford but showed a shorter sheaf but the cobs were more fully developed, and it is the cobs that leaven the lumps when the corn is put into the silo. Kenneth Oddie got second, and Donald Peake third.

Prize Hay Racks

Mechanical oats are taught in the rural schools, when some of the boys grow up to farm for themselves they will have no trouble in knocking together a hayrack equal to that turned out by a regular carpenter. There were three perfect models of that farm equipment shown yesterday, George Heatley, getting first, Gerald Barnum second and Bud Anhster, third.

Writing is not a lost art among the children of Seymour schools. Specimens shown yesterday would do credit to the graduates of a business college.

Other School Fairs

There are eight more Fairs to be held in the County as follows: Hilton Sept. 16, Warkworth Sept. 19; Dundonald, Sept. 18, Roseneath, Sept. 23, Baltimore Sept. 25, Coldsprings, Sept. 26, Grafton, Sept. 30, Wooler, Oct 3.

FIGHTING IN RAIN

Rival Chinese Forces Battle For the Possession of Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—The opposing armies prepare for a big battle on many fronts. Rival forces of the warring Chinese military governors, battling for possession of Shanghai, disregarded their traditional rules against fighting in the rain, to-day, when firing was resumed at Hwangtu, fifteen miles west of here, while they were being soaked by a new storm.

GENERALS WON.

Defeated Bethany In Final Game Yesterday.

The Canadian General Electric team were given a hard chase in their game with Bethany last night when the Bethany boys held the Electric sluggers to 11 runs while they collected 4 off the Peterboro twirler. The C.G.E. had a much harder battle than they expected and the many fans who turned out to see the home talent perform were well satisfied with the showing they made. The Peterboro crew will now meet Deloro in the third round of the O.B.A.A. Final score was 11 to 4 for the C.G.E.

COUNTY BRIDGE

acumen of the members of the County Council, declared G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the first speaker, who touched upon the future of Lakefield, predicting that the village was bordering on an era of prosperity, never before experienced in its history. Surrounded by concrete structures of various kinds, Lakefield with its large cement industry is assured of growth and prominence in this concrete age, said the Deputy Speaker in conclusion, after commending the contractor and the engineer on the excellence of the work.

Paved Highway Mentioned.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., also optimistic of the village's future, was of opinion that the bridge in the years to come would serve a greater Lakefield and provide a connecting link between the city and the village that in time would be brought much closer together. To this end he pointed out that nothing could be more effective in bringing the desired results than a paved highway between the two centres.

Alluding to the Hunter Street bridge, Mr. Bradburn said he was astounded at the small expenditure on the Lakefield structure. The county got off light in comparison to the city, but on the Lakefield bridge the men had worked.

In the absence of the Warden, who was unavoidably detained, E. M.. Elliott, county treasurer, acting as chairman, called upon E. A. Peck, ex.-M.P.P. county solicitor to officially declare the bridge open. In introducing the speaker, the chairman stated that a more fitting personage could not be chosen than the county solicitor, who had watched every step and development of the county for many years.

Being familiar with the proposals and discussion of the council for years back Mr Peck expressed his pleasure to be on the scene to finally witness the project brought to a successful conclusion. He commended the officials and stated the bridge bore testimony to the enterprise of the county.

Lakefield Gratefield

Reeve J. C. Strickland was given three rousing cheers as he came to speak, expressing the appreciation of the people he represented for his efforts in advancing the requirements of the village Taking up Mr Bradburn's suggestion of a paved highway from Lakefield to Peterboro, the speaker drew pictures, reflecting conditions as they will be, when the growth of the two centres would develop to such an extent that the two would form one large city, Peterboro, the business section and Lakefield, the residential centere.

Pressed Button

At the conclusion of the speeches Mr. E. A. Peck declared the Lakefield Bridge open for pedestrian traffic following which the conventional part of the ceremony was closed by three lusty cheers for the King.

The end was not yet, for the day's activities ran well into the afternoon Following the formal opening a banquet was held at the Lawless Hotel, attended by members of the County Council, County and Government officials and guests. Mr. Gordon, in order to keep another engagement had to leave immediately following the ceremony at the bridge.

The Banquet

About thirty sat down to the lunch eon. The speeches were the feature. Drifting at times from the Lakefield Bridge, the main issue, the round of speeches sparkled with wit and eloquence and the speakers touched upon the Redistribution question, the advisability of voting for a wet platform on October 23 and other Government measures.

Dealing with road problems W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., said that farmers living on the side roads are entitled to good roads and that the Government is determined to see that the farmers on the sidelines who are paying for Provincial Highways will get improved connections to the main highways.

Speaking of the Agricultural Committee that will hold a meeting at the Court House in Peterboro on September 22, the provincial member urged all present to attend and place before the committee their ideas as representatives of the rural community, with a view to bettering the conditions in Ontario for the agriculturist.

The committee is composed of Liberals, Conservatives and Progressives and after making their tour of Ontario, having listened to all arguments advanced, both pro and con, it is the intention of the committee to place their finding before the Hon. John S. Martin, so that he may place before the House some legislation that will tend to improve agricultural conditions.

Reeve J. C. Strickland, after an elaborate summary of his municipal career by Toastmaster E. M. Elliott was greeted by a chorus "For he is a Jolly Good Fellow", upon taking the platform.

In beginning, he declared that he believed it was a good move when Lakefield and Douro were made a part of the riding of West Peterboro. It was a good proposition for Lakefield, remarked the speaker.

Turning to Mr. Bradburn's idea of a paved highway from Peterboro to Lakefield, the speaker expressed his intention to hold the Provincial member to his concession and stated that Lakefield would press for the highway to the finish.

The speaker touched upon the action of the Government in submitting to the people the plebiscite on October 23 and said that no Government should say whether a man should take a drink or not. It was an infringement of a personal liberty and this county boasts of its freedom. Knowing the requirements of the tourists, the speaker pointed out that all the tourist wants is liberty. To-day this is not a free country.

Mr. Strickland predicted that within three years, if the people removed the restrictions on alcoholic beverages, that the national debt would be liquidated.

"You mean "liquordated," interjected Dr. Smith.

Two newcomers in the County Council, Reeve Hawthorne, of Dummer and Reeve Archie Wilson, of Harvey, were next called upon.

In a brief speech, Mr. Hawthorne expressed his approval of the provincial member's proposal to better the side roads and stated that Dummer amongst others would welcome the proposed improvement.

Turning to the Lakefield bridge in answer to a voice, in reference to the County's responsibility in wiring the new structure, Reeve Wilson said that the lights that come on when the sun rises in the morning and go off with its setting would be sufficient illumination.

The speaker remarked that municipalities often waste money by postponing from time to time the construction or improvement of bridges, but that in the Lakefield bridge, the County of Peterborough had a permanent structure that would serve future generations and bring to an end chronic repairs.

County Treasurer E. M. Elliott before calling upon the contractor, gave a short history of the original Lakefield bridge, which he stated was built in 1890 at a cost of $9,700.00 and that since 1904, repairs to the bridge totalled $3,357.00.

Mr. McNab, B.Sc., stated that so far as he was concerned the contract had been a very successful one.

He appreciated the whole hearted co-operation of the citizens of Lakefield where no antagonism had been shown. It is usual for contractors to meet opposition from some quarters, but in Lakefield Mr. Macnab stated there had been none. His sojourn in Lakefield had been most pleasant. In conclusion, he thanked the members of the County Council and officials for their assistance and co-operation.

In accordance with the optimistic predictions in reference to Lakefield's future, one of the first vehicles to pass over the new bridge, after it was officially declared open to traffic, was a large truck, representing the industry that promises to bring prosperity and fame to the "Village of Concrete." Its presence at that stage was significant, it carried a load of cement bags—the first load of cement to pass over the new Lakefield bridge. May it be the first of hundreds, yes thousands to pass over the bridge in the years to come.

There were present at the banquet, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., Morley Smithson, G. Leonard, Dr. Smith, H. B. Rye, A. Wilson, John MacNab, B.Sc., A. W. Connor, Toronto, T. Lillico, P. Moore, E. Corkery, J. Hawthorne, J. Scott, D. Brown, E. A. Peck, ex-M.P.P., County Solicitor, J. C. Strickland, E. M. Elliott, Percy Lancaster, Wm. Anderson, F. Breckenridge, T. Curtis, Bert Middleton and William Brown.

WHEN THE BABIES ARE CUTTING TEETH THE MOTHER SHOULD USE

During baby's teething time, especially in the hot summer months, the bowels become loose and diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, etc. manifest themselves; the gums become swollen, and cankers form in the mouth.

This is the time when the mother should use "Dr. Fowler's," and, perhaps, save the baby's life.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1924.

CONGRATULATIONS.

President R. Denne and the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition deserve the congratulations of the community upon the success scored by this year's fair.

It has been the banner Exhibition in the excellence of its programme, the splendid variety and quality of its live stock exhibits, the extent of special displays, the size and cleanliness of its midway features and in the growth indicated in almost every department.

The crowds were handled in excellent fashion, and in every respect the Exhibition of 1924 will be remembered as the best on record.

For next year even bigger things are being planned.

A merchants' building is a possibility, and its construction would leave the present main building available for other exhibits.

Other additions to the present plant are being talked of, and when the time for the 1925 Exhibition rolls round citizens can expect to find even better accommodation and a bigger fair than ever.

In the meanwhile the President and Directors are to be felicitated upon what they have accomplished by their months of planning and working this year.

Vast strides have been made in making the Peterborough Industrial one of the outstanding fairs in the Province—and that is a showing upon which they are entitled to general thanks and credit.

MOTOR LICENSES.

A strong case is being made out in opposition to the proposal of the Ontario Government to have all motor licenses issued from Toronto, local bodies, including the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Motor League and the Chamber of Commerce, having added their voice to the general chorus of protest.

The centralization system is condemned as causing unnecessary expense and inconvenience to the thousands of motorists living outside of Toronto, and as a handicap to the police.

Undoubtedly the method now in force by which licenses are issued at various centres by the Ontario Motor League [illegible] affords excellent service.

[illegible] navy, whose motorists to obtain their licenses was sent to the bottom of the se[illegible] an almost total absence of here by her officers on June 21, [illegible]annot possibly be spared for 1919, has been raised and will be [illegible] Province has to secure his consigned to an equally ignominious end on the scrap-iron heap.

A firm of London engineers hand[illegible] thousand licenses to be completed the salvage of the vesse[illegible] motorists living outside of —the destroyer V70—after a year[illegible]ult to picture the congestion work and many unsuccessful a[illegible] the licenses had to be issued tempts to float her.

The V70 was a big ship of [illegible] 80 class which had sunk in 20 fa[illegible]n scheme, it is claimed by its [illegible]oms of water in the centre o[illegible]more economical. How. The engineers ha[illegible] to be seen.

[illegible]nd a doubt, prove a nuisance to every [illegible]ing outside of Toronto, and the opposition [illegible]wners is so strong that Hon. Mr. Henry would [illegible]ll to drop the scheme.

STILL WAITING.

Ontario will have to wait a few days longer before knowing just what form the plebiscite on the Ontario Temperance Act will take.

The conference yesterday with representatives of the Prohibitionists and the Moderation League was held in camera, and nothing has been given out to the public as to the proceedings.

However, the Government should now be in full [illegible]session of the wishes of both sides and in a posi[illegible]to frame a ballot that will ensure an accurate ex[illegible]on of public opinion.

[illegible]e Premier is being criticized by some of his [illegible]rs for consulting the wets and drys as to their

CONF[illegible]here is little fault to be found with that action, LIFE[illegible]ever, for it is in the general interest that the ballot be such as to cover the situation so clearly as to leave no room for misunderstanding when the returns are in.

So long as every voter knows just what a "yes" or "no" vote will mean there should be no difficulty in obtaining an honest and unmistakable expression of the wishes of the people—and that is the sole object of the plebiscite.

The real fight will not commence until the question or questions to be submitted are announced, so that the whole Province is anxiously awaiting the Premier's statement.

Would it not be possible for Mr. Ferguson to "step on the gas."

THE CHICAGO VERDICT.

But the que[illegible]till remains: What will be the effect of these [illegible]ces upon possible imitators? asks the Montreal St[illegible] discussing the Chicago verdict.

This is surely t[illegible] whole question in judging the wisdom of a court se[illegible]ence. Sentences are not meant primarily to punish, but to d[illegible]er. These young men —to whatever degree they may have been abnormal —undoubtedly did rely in their own minds upon the fact that their parents were rich. They thought it possible—nay, easy—for wealth to purchase immunity, even for a most hideous murder.

Are we quite sure that there are no other young men on this dollar-crazed Continent under the same terrible illusion—if illusion it be? If there be any such, will they be wholesomely disillusioned when they learn that the rich young murderers of Bobby Franks, though confessing their guilt, have been saved from the electric chair? Or will they feel that the insolent, if silly, smiles of these confident young men, seated at their ease in the prisoners' dock, were abundantly justified?

Judge Caverly tried, as he closed, to paint life imprisonment as a terrific sentence. But, again, it is entirely a question to its deterring effect. What will the waiting and watching Loebs and Leopalds think? They have seen the most ingenious use of hired advocacy [illegible]s rescue the [illegible]essed murderers from the chair. No poor boys could have had such a defence. Will they not believe that money has but won its first victory for its youthful worshippers? And will they not now expect money to open the prison doors to the favored pair? The judge can advise against parole all he likes; but "money is a good soldier and will on."

The ghastly misgiving with which many hearts will sink today will be whether Judge Caverly, in sparing these lads in their late 'teens from the executioner, has not sentenced many another Bobby Franks to death.

THE COMMON PEOPLE.

In the presidential campaign which is now gaining momentum in the neighboring republic, the Hon. Andrew Gump, champion of the common people, will expound his homely philosophy from the rear-end of a drab-colored caboose, says the Hamilton Spectator. The Gump methods may be laughably unique, but in making his appeal to the "plain folk" Andy is certain to encounter a lot of opposition. The common people, in an election campaign, come into their own and are vested with an importance that, for some reason which has never been satisfactorily explained, dissolves about the same moment the polls are closed. President Coolidge will not go on tour in a caboose, but already his campaign managers are stressing the humbleness of his birth and upbringing and circulating thousands of pictures of his modest home in Northampton, Mass. One writer, describing it, says: "It's just one-half of a small frame 'double house' on a quiet side street. He doesn't even own it. Each month he signs a cheque for $34 to pay the rental. It's a more modest house and a more modest rental than is paid by thousands of mechanics, clerks and tradespeople." By way of contrast, the ancestral home of John W. Davis, Democratic candidate, will be pointed to and the palatial residence of that fiery crusader, Robert M. LaFollette, who, despite his radical preachments, struts considerable dog in private life. That the opponents of President Coolidge will have antidotes compounded for the mixture that is being spoon-fed to the common people goes without saying. And with all three candidates making frantic overtures for the support of the masses, from which each has sprung—(see any of the campaign literature) —an enjoyable time is going to be had by all. The common people are the most important class in any community and in any country. It isn't a nice spectacle to watch them being exploited. Looking all the candidates over, our old friend, Andy, seems to be the most sincere of the 1924 presidential crop. Followers of his fortunes know that he is for the common people first, last and all the time.

THE CHINESE PUZZLE.

Chang-Tso-Lin, the redoubtable and romantic "war lord" of Manchuria, seems to have taken cards in the little game that has been progressing in the neighborhood of Shanghai. He alleges that General Wu-Pei-Fu, the military master of the Peking Government, is advancing against him by way of Shanhaikwan, the point where the Peking Railway pierces the Great Wall near the sea. The Peking Government, on the other hand, charges Chang with stirring up the trouble between General Lu-Yung-Hsiang and General Chi-Hsieh-Yuan in the Shanghai district, with a view of drawing the Peking forces into that quarrel and so making the conquest of the capital by the Manchurian raiders much easier.

General Wu is not being drawn. His Government may be launching mandates stripping the "rebels" of their honors; but General Wu is keeping the bulk of his forces on the Peking-Hankow Railway where they can be quickly shifted to the north if Chang comes down through the gaps in the Great Wall. Whoever may have started this war, the real struggle—should it come—will be between Chang and Wu. All other "unpleasantnesses" are merely local. Shanghai has been very vocal over the fighting across its golf links; but that is because it disturbs business and menaces safety at home.

"President" Sun-Yat-Sen is said to have sent troops to the support of the Chang side in the Shanghai controversy. This is not because Dr. Sun, the idealist, and General Chang, the ex-bandit, have anything in common—except a common enemy. Should Chang-Tso-Lin succeed this time in his drive for Peking, the last man he would think of putting in the Presidential chair—unless he had a rope around his neck—would be the dreamer from Canton who really wants to make of China a modern Republic.

* * * *

Chang-Tso-Lin has been expected to strike for Peking ever since his disastrous defeat a couple of years ago by General Wu. He was not beaten on that occasion by the superiority of Wu's army, but by the very Chinese incident that an army of a Chang ally coming up behind to support him was bought over by the Peking treasury and actually attacked Chang from the rear instead of helping him. Chang immediately accepted the inevitable and retreated. Subsequently he invited the leaders of his treacherous ally to come up to Manchuria and talk it over. Amazingly enough, they went; but Chang left his side of the conversation to a firing squad. They will never betray another ally.

It will be seen that this sort of an "unhappy ending" did not finally convince Chang that he was too weak to drive Wu out of Peking. He only decided that the next time he would look more carefully after his financial defences. In some way or other, he was able to get a great deal of money to spend. His enemies whispered "Japanese gold"; but in view of recent developments, this seems improbable. With this money, he has built up the most powerful army in China. And it has been common rumor for over a year that he would strike again in the near future. The time for his revenge may have come.

The fighting near Shanghai should help Chang because, while his ally could not possibly transport his army to a northern battlefield across territory controlled by Peking, General Wu's ally could have poured his whole force up the Tientsin Railway to the help of his patron. But now he will be fully occupied fighting Chang's friends along the Yangtse. This is the main basis for the charge of the Peking party that Chang is at the root of all the trouble.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The dog show has proved a splendid addition to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. In numbers and quality the canines were a surprise to most visitors.

With this year's Exhibition passing into history tonight, the directors have already begun planning for next year's fair. There is no limit to the enthusiasm of President Denne and his associates.

Five Peterborough ball teams were due to play Ontario Baseball Amateur Association games today. In spite of the Central Ontario League fiasco, Peterborough is still very much on the baseball map.

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—A gratifying feature of this week's cattle receipts has been the higher average in quality and finish, particularly in the heavy steers class. The proportion of well finished cattle to the total receipts was greater than for many months past. The bulk of these were taken for export trade, though a few were picked out for the local butcher trade at prices slightly above the export quotations, one or two lots going to the packers at $8.10. Export prices were not quotably higher than in recent markets, but quality of the cattle considered, the buyers were getting better values for their money. The export demand was very active in Monday's market, Rogers & Maybee taking about 1,000 fresh cattle, prices ranging from $6.50 to $8 for the heavy steers. A few store cattle for Glasgow, and cows and bulls for Antwerp were bought at steady prices in each class. Including cattle bought and carried over from the previous week. About 1,700 were shipped to seaboard by Rogers & Maybee. Export requirements for next week are not expected to be quite so heavy, but there will be a good market for good quality steers and heifers.

In the butcher section there was a good demand for the choicer qualities all through the week, prices showing a 20c to 25c advance over the previous week. Choice butcher steers and heifers, handy weights, held firm at $6 to $6.50, and extra choice at $6.75 to $7.

Butcher cows were in good demand at slightly better prices.

Bulls in poor demand in a slow market.

Calves generally steady to strong with light receipts.

Lambs were strong around $12.75 to $13, easing off slightly in the week-end market.

Hogs weakened, going off 50c during the week, closing on the basis of $9 f.o.b., but with prospects lower for next week.

Market statistics for the month of August show cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards of 32,050, as against 30,362 for the same month last year. Cattle receipts for the year to date show 229,336, as against 244,569 for the corresponding period last year.

Sheep receipts show a considerable falling off from last year, the figures being for August 18,968, as against 24,899 last year. For the year to date 71,045, as against 82,-924 for the corresponding period of 1923.

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers, $6.75 to $8; good store cattle, $6 to $6.50; fair, $5.50 to $5.75; heifers $5.50 to $6.75; heavy cows, $4.50 to $4.75; bulls, $3.50 to $4.25.

Choice butchers, $6 to $7; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; fair, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $3.50 to $4.50; baby beeves, $8.50 to $10.50.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.75.

Stockers and feeders—Choice short-keep feeders, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs., $5.50 to $6; steers, 900 to 1,000 lbs., $4.50 to $5; choice stockers, 800 to 950 lbs., $4.25 to $4.50; light western stock, $3.50 to $4; choice western, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and lambs—Lambs, choice, $11.50 to $12.75; culls, 8c to 10c; medium, 6½c to 7½c; heavy sheep and bucks, 4½c to 6c; buck lambs, $10.50 to $11; choice light sheep, $6.50 to $7.50.

Calves—Choice veal calves, $11 to $12; medium, $6 to $8.50; heavy $5.50 to $7.50.

Hogs—Thick, smooth, f.o.b., $9; fed and watered, $9.60; off cars, $10; selects, off cars, $11.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press). — Trade in cash grain was quieter yesterday. Millers marked up flour prices ten cents per barrel for spring grades, but there was no change in winter wheat grades. Millfeed situation was without change. Demand for rolled oats showed a slight improvement. A firm feeling prevailed in baled hay. A good steady business is passing in eggs. Butter market is quiet and unchanged. A dull and easier feeling prevails in the cheese market.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Persistent buying on the part of houses with seaboard connections brought about a new advance in wheat values yesterday. The market closed firm at 1-4 to 1 5-8c net gain, December 133 3-4 to 133 7-8, and May 140 1-4 to 140 3-8. Cornr 1-4c to 1 7-8c down; oats 5-8c to 7-8c up, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 37c.

Indications pointed to a liberal export business in wheat, although of less amount than was the case Thursday. The fact that Liverpool quotations were decidedly higher helped also to strengthen values here, and so likewise did stormy weather over the prairie provinces of Canada, a serious hindrance to threshing and a likely cause of additional crop damages. Reports of material falling off in the volume of the domestic winter wheat movement tended further to stimulate buying.

Reports of a much smaller world's crop than a year ago and especially a general lowering of European estimates of yield were an accepted explanation of a big share of the broadening interest shown in the wheat market.

Excels in Strength and Performance

In its admiration of the good Maxwell's ability to outperform anything at anywhere near the price, the public should remember—

1st.—That no other car on the market, regardless of price, excels Maxwell strength and staunchness in proportion to weight and power.

2nd.—That at all vital points, metals and construction are the same as in cars that cost three to four times as much.

3rd.—That in its manufacture, no measures are too costly to protect the owner fully, in person and in pocket.

Those are the precise reasons why the good Maxwell—now under the supervision of Chrysler engineers—stands up and delivers its splendid service at such amazingly low cost.

CURRENT LOANS WERE ADMITTED

To-day's Evidence in the Home Bank Enquiry—Must Produce Books.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—Sweeping aside the technical objections of the defense, Judge Coatsworth in the Home Bank case ruled that the prosecution was entitled to put in a return showing the current loans made by the Home Bank, Toronto branch. We must get to the bottom of this matter, was the declaration of the judge in disregarding technical objections of Gordon N. Shaver, counsel for Ocean G. Smith, the accused former chief accountant of the bank. When the Crown took the matter of current loans. Mr. Shaver at once objected to these returns being filed following up his argument of yesterday by protesting against the crown "going behind the books of the head office, "and taking up branch returns with which his client had nothing to do". These statements came through to the head office and are produced from there," said Hi sHonor. "If the Crown proposes to connect the accused man with these returns then I must admit them. The book in the Toronto branch cannot be produced against Smith unless it is shown that Smith saw the book or knew what was in it. Since the book cannot be produced the Crown seeks through this witness to put in a summary of the book." The basis of the case is this" said the Judge. "There were certain transactions of this bank that were said to have been wrong and the Crown seeks to connect the accused man with allowing them to go through and putting his signature to them. If that be the fact the Crown is entitled to put in evidence of this. Mr. Shaver went on to argue that Smith's duty was keeping the books. "The Crown says he is a party to the wrong deals" countered the judge. Mr. Shaver urged that his client's responsibilities were limited. "I think this evidence ought to go in," said the Judge. "You are dealing with books, I am dealing with transactions. We must get to the bottom of the matter. It may be that we will have to go into the business of the branches in order to get at the facts but of course it must be shown that the accused is connected with these matters."

Mr. Shaver querried whether all books were to be allowed in under the ruling ."No I am not going to bind this court or the crown or you to anything like that. I am making an order on these statements. We must feel our way as we go along." This morning's session had hardly begun when there came a clash between Crown Counsel McCarthy and Gordon Shaver for the defense. It was over the attempt of the Crown to put in copies of the Call Loan list of the Toronto office, identified by Gordon Chapman. At once the defence objected "originals must be produced", said Mr. Shaver. "Unless seven days' notice is given before the trial that copies are to be used. It was then decided to put in what originals were available and Mr. McCarthy said he would not put in the others unless he had originals. By the time court resumed to-day the pile of exhibits numbered 38 and showed signs of steadily increasing. Mr. McCarthy spent some time with Chapman in going over the list of call loans and drawing the information out that in many cases the loans far exceeded the security given for them. In the $3,100 loan to H. C. Osborne. No security had been given. In J. P. Murray's case a loan of $3,262 was secured to the amount of $2,400.

PRINCE DROPS IN ON SAILORS

Shook Hands With Seamen In Reading Room—Dodged Street Crowds.

VISITS NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, September 13.—The Prince of Wales, accompanied only by Captain Lascelles and Major O. N. Solbert, visited New York yesterday, rode in the subway,and went up to the top of the Woolworth tower to look over the city. He narrowly escaped being recognized in the subway, and twice he had to use his wits to escape, being surrounded by a large crowd. Two girls had an argument in a Brooklyn train as to whether he was the 'Prince' or not, but before they could reach an agreement the prince and his two aides had left the car.

Crowd at Woolworth's.

When the prince and his party came down from the 58th floor of the Woolworth Tower, a large crowd was waiting at the main door. They escaped by using a side entrance.

Later in the afternoon as the Royal motor car drew up at the entrance to a famous London pipe maker's shop on Fifth avenue it was surrounded by people who instantly recognized the heir to the British throne. The prince told the chauffeur to drive on immediately and escape.

Visited Sailors.

Farther up Fifth avenue the prince watched his chance to dive into a shop where he bought some ties and books. He dropped into the New York port society's rooms for sailors and shook hands with a number of seamen who were in the reading room Later the party drove to see the shipping on the North River, returning to the Burden home on Long Island about six o'clock. The prince dined last night at the home of Henry Rogers Winthrop in Woodbury.

Not at Fight.

It is officially denied that the Prince was at the Wills-Firpo fight. Captain Lascelles gave his word that Boyle's thirty acres did not contain His Royal Highness hidden with the thousands. Captain Lascelles refused to say where the Prince was. The prince avoided all but one of his personal bodyguard and lunched privately at a small house on the Island.

ALIEN LAW HITS SHIP COMPANIES

Trans-Pacific Boats Carry Very Few Passengers.

TOKIO, Sept. 13.—Effects of the Japanese exclusion clause of the new American immigration act are already felt adversely by Japaneses steamship companies operating trans-Pacific services, which are now carrying only a small fraction of their former steerage passenger lists. Steerage accomodations of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Toyo Kisen Kaisha and Osaka Shosen Kaisha trans-Pacific liners formerly were almost altogether taken up by Japanese immigrants or Japanese residents of America. The new law has practically ended travel of this class. The N.Y.K.'s Kaga Maru, on a recent voyage from Seattle, carried only one steerage passenger.

In 1923 the three Japanese companies carried 14,733 steerage passengers across the Pacific, this service yielding an important item of income. The loss of the larger part of this income is causing the companies to urge the government to pay them larger subsidies, declaring that without more aid they cannnot continue their trans-Pacific services.

THE FLOWER SHOW.

Article From The West Refers To Activities Of Former Omemee Boy.

From all over the Province one reads in the daily newspapers that Flower Shows have met with increased success. It is many a long day since this city could boast of a Flower Show. The Horticultural Society believes that this city is capable of staging as attractive a flower show as any place in the Province. The Committees have been actively engaged for some time in ensuring attractions for the most fastidious.

The co-operation of all who have been requested to assist in making the Show a success is appreciated by the Society. Without a single exception every florist in the city is putting in a display of either flowers or plants. Who says public spiritedness cannot be found in Peterboro?

There will no doubt be keen competition in Class No. 3. Best arrangement of dinner table with flowers completely set up. The following firms have already signified their intention of staging dining tables—D. Belleghem and Sons, Comstock Bros., The Cressman Co. Ltd., and Richard Hall & Sons. This display will be educational in itself, and the Committee in charge are appointing special judges for this exhibit.

RACEY IS IMPROVING.

Victim of Hunting Accident in Lindsay Hospital.

LINDSAY, September 12. — Inquiries at the Ross Memorial Hospital this morning elicited the information that Mr. Leslie Racey, the Toronto man who was one of the victims of the shooting tragedy at Janetville on Thursday, was resting comfortably. Although his right hand was badly torn by the shot the physicians will be able to save the member.

Miss Hilda Hines, the 19 year old girl, who was instantly killed, was engaged to be married to Mr. Cyril Racey of Toronto, brother of the injured man. The young couple were to be married at Christmas. Miss Hines has been in poor health and had been enjoying some holidays, having been employed by the Bell Telephone Company, at Toronto.

Mr. Leslie Hines, the wounded man, was a truck driver for the York Knitting Mill, Toronto.

Miss Hines' body lay in the boat on the shore of the lake from the time of the accident (2.00 p.m.) until 9.30 p.m. This was due to the fact that the County Coroner, Dr. McArthur, resides in Toronto, and he was late in arriving at the scene. In fact Mr. Racey's relatives as well as the relatives of the dead girl, had arrived from Toronto, before the Coroner was able to reach Janetville station.

The body of the late Miss Hines was taken to Blackstock, where a post mortem will be held.

URGED TO BALLOT.

Three and a Half Million Women Urged To Vote.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—(United Press).—Three and a half million women in the General Federation of Women's Clubs are urged to vote this fall by Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman of Chicago and Estes Park, Colo., the new President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who came to New York today for the first time since her election in Los Angeles.

"With less than 50 per cent. of the registered voters going to the polls at the last presidential election the Federation sees a problem in good citizenship that needs answering," says Mrs. Sherman.

"The American family has a stake in such a situation and the matter of voting is a duty and not a job. The man or woman who does not vote certainly has no right to criticize government management.

BRITISH POLICE-WOMEN.

They Are Forced To Follow the Latest Fashions.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—Five new patrol women have been named by the Birmingham Parks Committee, which suggested to the women that they dress themselves in the latest fashion and look as little like policewomen as possible.

The result of the instructions is that all Birmingham is trying to spot the new women "cops," and fashionably-dressed women strolling in the parks are frequently accosted by persons who have made wagers that they are policewomen and want to establish their right to the money.

HOLLINGER STRIKE.

Most Important Reported By Big Mine In Years.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.— The most important strike made in years is reported from the Hollinger mine in a news despatch to the Journal. On the Schumacker section at the 800 foot level a vein has been followed for 52 feet in ore averaging $800 to the ton the newspeper states.

FAVOR NAVAL DEFENCE.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—A Labor motion in the House of Representatives yesterday to rerduce the special defence fund of £1,000,000 by £1 as an expression of opinion that the two new Australian cruisers now planned should be built in Australia was defeated by a vote of 26 to 17.

CANADIANS RETURNING.

Many Empty Houses in Woodstock Are Now Filled.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 12.—The return of many citizens of Woodstock who went to the United States within the past year is indicated by the report of the city assessor on the number of vacant houses in the city. When he made his rounds in the early part of the summer, he reported that the number of vacant homes was the largest he had found in the city for years. To-day he completed a second round of the same houses and reported that the majority of them had again been filled up, the reason being that many families which had been in the United States and Windsor in the early part of the summer had returned to the city.

25,000 FARMERS UNITE.

They Will Pray To The Gods For Rain.

KIOTO, Japan, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—More than 25,000 farmers participated in a prayer ceremony held recently in Funai County, Kioto prefecture, to pray to the ancient Shinto dieties to send rain. Drought has been threatening the western and southern part of Japan with serious rice crop shortages this year.

The drought is causing quarrels among farming communities in various parts of southern Japan, where the water supply is inadequate. The Governor of Kumamoto prefecture has been asked to act as referee between two villages which are quarreling over the right of one higher up the stream that runs through both, to dam the stream to get water for its parched crops.

SALVAGING OF GERMAN SHIPS

ook Over a Year To Bring Destroyer To Top of Water.

USED NEW METHOD.

SCAPAFLOW, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—The first ship of Germany's wartime navy, which was sent to the bottom of the sea here by her officers on June 21, 1919, has been raised and will be consigned to an equally ignominious end on the scrap-iron heap.

A firm of London engineers has completed the salvage of the vessel—the destroyer V70—after a year's work and many unsuccessful attempts to float her.

The V70 was a big ship of the 80 class which had sunk in 20 fathoms of water in the centre of the Flow. The engineers had exhaust-the shore where workmen will start cutting through the heavy steel hull and dismantle the fittings. At present the engineers are unable to estimate the ship's value, but after they had pierced the heavy seaweed coating they found the metal to be in a better state than was expected. They claim that the salvage work, though costly, will show a good profit, but it will not make a very large contribution to aiding the reparations payments.

Several of the other ships which were scuttled in the Flow will be raised in a similar manner, but it will take between three and four years to complete the work.

THE TEMPERANCE ACT.

Issues Discussed By Hon. W. E. Raney at Hamilton Meeting.

HAMILTON, September 12 (Canadian Press). — The real arguments for the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act were "class against the working-class;" and continuing:

"The British Labour Party urged the capital levy in order to relieve the workers from the burden of payment for the war, yet the workers of Germany are to be compelled to bear the burden for years, after kicking out the Kaiser and the crew that incured the debt.

"The Dawes report, like the Versailles Treaty, makes for another war, whereas the definite policy laid down by the Labour confegence was to lay the foundation of peace and amity of nations. The time has come for the British Labour movepolicy and insist on a return to its original policy."

The International Transport Workers' Federation, the National Amalgamated Furnishing Trade Association have adopted resolutions of protest even more strenuously phrased.

MOSLEMS PRAY FOR RIFFIANS

BOMBAY, India, Setp. 13.—(Canadian Press)—The Central Khilafat committee has issued an appeal to Indian Moslems to pray for the success of the Riffian tribesmen in their operations against the Spaniards in Morocco. The committee has resolved to organize financial assistance for the Riffians.

DRAPERIES FORM WINDOW FRAMES

This Method Gives Natural Setting on the Outside.

Draperies may be either wonderful adornments or amazing dust catchers.

Therefore, great discretion is needed in hanging them.

Windows and wide open doorways are about the only places suitable for draperies, and even the doorways are gradually being eliminated for this use. Instead of wide open doorways, it is best to have sliding doors, or narrower doorways. For it is here that heavy hangings collect dust and make cleaning so much more difficult.

Window hangings are the main attractions toward enhancing the beauty of the outside scene. They make the window an imposing and picturesque frame, just as it should be.

But the trouble with many windows is that they are overdraped which is worse than being underdraped. There is too much frame, too much color, too much of hangings to distract attention from anything else inside and outside the room.

Nothing Gorgeous.

Simplicity, as in everything else, is the keynote in hangings. A simple hanging at either end of a window, or group of windows, from the window top to a few inches from the floor or a little below the window frame, is effective.

Drawn together at each side, the hangings concentrate the colors in their design and show up even better than when they are spread across.

Instead of shades, window hangings are used. They are colorful frames in the daytime, and at night when drawn together they make for privacy as well as effect an atmospheric background for the bedrooms.

From the outside, window hangings help toward the appearance of the entire house. They should conform in design and color, even though they are not in the same room, if the rooms happen to be on the same floor and along the same outside wall.

Unity Necessary.

But in case of rooms upstairs and down, the hangings may differ. The living room hangings, for instance, may conform with the decorative design of that room. And the hangings for the bedrooms upstairs, although they are on the same outside wall, may be altogether different, just so that they are in unison along the whole upper floor, and that they conform with the color and design of the bedrooms.

Curtains on windows should be of the simplest obtainable. They should merely act as shimmering, hazy effects for the picture of nature outside. They are there mostly to take the harshness out of an open window space. They are not attractions in themselves, but aids to more beautiful attractions outside. Kawartha Park for the season.

DOES LONG HAIR MEAN STRENGTH?

Seven Spinster Sisters Are More Than a Match For Bobbed Crew.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 13.—Does a girl's strength, like Samson's, rest in her hair?

Have the bobbed-haired flappers shorn themselves of some mysterious source of vitality?

Are there girls yet living who are proud enough of woman's crowning glory to cherish it in the face of a clip-clip clicking of shears that is sounding around the world; proud enough of it to go out and battle for it?

They'll tell the world they're beginning to believe that, up at Louisiana State Normal College at Natchitoches.

For there they have a rowing them has hair thick and shining and long and flowing, falling far down below her waist in a cascading mass of shimmering beauty when it is let down.

Now Louisiana State Normal College is close to the famous Red River and is surrounded by beautiful lakes. Rowing is one of the favorite amusements and exercises of the girls who study there. And scores of college crews spring up among the hundreds of students.

They don't row in the shells of the varsities. They row in specially-built light six-oar racing skiffs, and the faculty encourages the rowing.

Out on lake and river went for practice the crew of the Seven Spinster Sisters, six to row and one as coxswain.

The presently the races started. And "Normal's Freaks" cleaned up everything in sight.

With steady powerful strokes those girls, their long hair whipped to silken banners in the breeze, outrowed crew after crew of their bobbed-haired sisters. And they had the reserve for the spurt at the end that brought them in winners.

FOR WORLD PEACE.

French Idea Seems to be Working Out at the Geneva Conference.

GENEVA, Sept. 13. — (Canadian Press).—France's idea that general world security can be attained only if each member of the League of Nations will contribute what they can in the way of sanction against an aggressor state seems to be working out well at Geneva. The countries, led by Great Britain, are coming forward one after another and expressing willingness to give what they have to the cause of peace; Great Britain, her fleet, France, and other nations possessing large land and air forces, the weight of their military strength, and the small countries which are weak in armaments the full measure of their financial and economic assistance.

MID-SEASON SALES OFFER ADVANTAGES

Hundreds of Women Dress In Fashion on Ten Dollars a Week.

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 13.—(United Press).—When the wedding trousseau has become ragged and the little bride of the struggling young salaried man has to settle down to a $10-a-week-dress allowance, love of "fine feathers" often flies out the window. She feels that she can't be fashionable on $10 a week, so she contents herself with buying new cretonnes for the parlor windows.

As time goes on she is liable to complain to her friends that before marriage she was a wonderful "dresser," but that hubby's salary is so small that she can't have the better class clothes, so she doesn't want the hackneys. That "I-used-to-wear-diamonds, but-look-at-me-now" line is a favorite one among women who haven't the courage to put up a good fight. It makes one out of patience. In the end this type of woman either has her husband so tied by the neck that he can't get away, or he gets away. Thank goodness ,these women are in the minority.

Manages to Look Smart.

The worth-while woman manages to look smart, regardless of her dress allowance. There are hundreds of women dressing—and dressing in fashion—on $10 a week.

How do they do it? They are regular experts at digging the advertisements of bargain out of the daily newspapers. They buy expensive dresses during the mid-season sales. When they are reduced so low as to come within their means. They seek the "as is" counters, and they can tell real bargains from poor "buys." They "window shop," and find out just what the latest fashions are, so that they will know how to add new touches to the frock which will give it the effect of being one of the latest models. They keep away from eccentric colors as far as their main garments go, but add these late color touches in their accessories. Just now fushia tones are decorating all the shop windows. A sensible woman won't buy a fushia-colored frock, but she might carry a fushia-colored handkerchief with her navy blue frock, to give it newness. She might like a fushia underslip for a georgette frock.

She Buys at Sales.

Any woman can be beautifully dressed if she buys her clothes during mid-season sales. She buys her summer frocks in July and August and has the remainder of the summer to wear them. She thus has a start on the following summer. She buys her winter clothes the same way. She can get a $75 gown for $25 at these sales. Consequently, her clothes never look cheap. "What's the use of buying a frock after it's out of style?" you may ask.

By buying a frock in mid-season one still has half the season left in which to wear it, and by using one's grey matter one can buy a fabric that is always in style and a model which can be altered to fit the following season's vogue. Dresses don't change much from season to season these days. The woman who bought a beautiful, reduced frock at the end of last winter, to hold over until this coming winter, can very easily shorten the skirt and add a tight-fitting satin underslip and she will have the latest of tunic frocks. She can take off the belt if there is one, and conceal the fullness at the waistline by tiny inverted pintucks at the hips and she has another new style note. Many new frocks use five-inch pintucks to give slight slenderness from waist to hip-line.

Women with $10-a-week allowances cannot afford to buy their clothes at the beginning of the seasons, when $25 or $35 frocks are mere "Fords," and become so common that they are worn by every Tom, Dick and Harry. It is also foolish to buy one good dress and plan on wearing it forever. Why pay $75 for one dress in October, when one can get three such dresses two months later, after the Christmas holidays? By buying during season's sales one always has frocks which will carry one on until the next sales.

The woman who prides herself on home-made clothes is often "penny wise and pound foolish." She can't begin to compete with the garments which have been turned out by the hands of artists. She can't make a good-looking cloth or silk gown for less than $15, and, in most cases, it will look no more than $15. By paying $10 more she can buy a dress which originally cost $75 or more—if she buys during reduction sales. One doesn't mean to infer that sewing isn't a great asset to the woman of limited means, but every woman should have at least one or two ready-made frocks for best-wear. It will give her more confidence in herself.

Electric Garters Given Away Free- Produce Prices.

If you had a headache or a deaf ear when you woke up this morning, a walk down to the Market Square might have relieved you of either. A philanthropic gentleman with a bushy head of hair was inducing formerly deaf persons to listen to the tick of his watch, after an application of his magic liniment, and portly individual, mounted on what looked like a prairie wagon, was curing the migraine which afflicted several of his patrons. Free electric garters was the offering of another vendor.

The open market and the basket section thronged with buyers this morning. Produce of the garden and the farm overflowed onto the curbs, and upstairs, butter and eggs were plentiful, with fowl rather scarce. Butter ranged in price from 37 to 40 cents a pound, eggs were 34 and 35 cents a dozen, chickens 28 and 30 cents a pound.

Potatoes on the open market were $1 a bag; beets, 45 cents a basket; carrots, 35 cents a peck; white onions, 15 cents a quart. Tomatoes in 6 and 11-quart baskets were priced at 25 and 50 cents; squash were 15 and 20 cents a piece; green and red peppers 40 cents a dozen. Big orange pumpkins were 25 to 40 cents apiece. Golden Bantam and Golden Triumph corn was selling at 2 dozen ears for a quarter. Vegetable marrows were 10 and 15 cents each. String beans were 10 cents a quart.

Peaches were selling at $1.25 a basket, in the select brand; plums were 50 and 60 and 70 cents, or 10 cents a quart; crabapples were 40 cents a basket, and Bartlett pears 55 cents for an 11-quart basket. Pickling pears were 20 cents a small basket. Apples were plentiful. Duchess apples and the big good-looking Alexandra were 30 cents a peck, or 35 cents, if delivered. Black currants were 15 cents a box.

Honey was 16 cents a pound, with sections at 13 and 15 cents. A couple of loads of hardwood were $10 each; there were a couple of Rouen ducks at $1.50 apiece, and a little boy had collie pups, cross-breed, with Airedale feet and a black collie body, at $2.

Bags of grain have a special corner, and there are sheaves of wheat and oats and barley. Big baskets of tomatoes hold the round red vegetables, and there are green gherkins and bearded celery.

A good display of apples is on one of the side tables, with pears and plums and crabapples.

VEGETABLE SHOW.

Monstrous Specimens of Potatoes and Turnips.

The vegetables at the Fair are ranged in their usual neat fashion in their own small tent, with grains and roots decorating the ground at the sides, a central table with overhead strings of large red and white onions, and enormous corn stalks towering to the roof at the far end. Pots of curly green kale and kohl rabi decorate the tables at intervals, and there are half a dozen gaily decorated sheaves of wheat on exhibition.

There are quantities of fine-looking, mealy potatoes on view this year, some of them monstrous specimens, while the turnips of various varieties make a good showing. There are fine specimens of onions, beets, carrots and big white parsnips, peppers, green and red, long cucumbers, scrubbed-looking vegetable marrows, round striped citrons, celery and cauliflower and squash. Ball head and Savoy cabbages make a green variation.

SALVAGING OF GERMAN SHIPS

ook Over a Year To Bring Destroyer To Top of Water.

USED NEW METHOD.

SCAPAFLOW, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—The first ship of ermany's wartime navy, which as sent to the bottom of the sea ere by her officers on June 21, 1919, has been raised and will be consigned to an equally ignominious end on the scrap-iron heap.

A firm of London engineers has completed the salvage of the vessel —the destroyer V70—after a year's work and many unsuccessful attempts to float her.

The V70 was a big ship of the 80 class which had sunk in 20 fathoms of water in the centre of the Flow. The engineers had exhausted the best known methods of ship salvaging before using the system of underslinging heavy cables and raising the ship by means of the floating dock. This latter method was used about six weeks ago when the vessel was raised eleven feet before the iron chains which were then used broke, thus allowing the prize to settle once again to the bottom. Wire cables were then substituted which supported the enormous weight long enough to permit the dock to be placed under the ship.

The dock was then towed near the shore where workmen will start cutting through the heavy steel hull and dismantle the fittings. At present the engineers are unable to estimate the ship's value, but after they had pierced the heavy seaweed coating they found the metal to be in a better state than was expected. They claim that the salvage work, though costly, will show a good profit, but it will not make a very large contribution to aiding the reparations payments.

Several of the other ships which were scuttled in the Flow will be raised in a similar manner, but it will take between three and four years to complete the work.

THE TEMPERANCE ACT.

Issues Discussed By Hon. W. E. Raney at Hamilton Meeting.

HAMILTON, September 12 (Canadian Press). — The real arguments for the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act are beer and profits, and one other argument that I have not yet mentioned, the powerful argument of the boycott which is being used by the liquor trade here in Ontario at this moment, as perhaps never before in the history of the Province and used in a business way, not only against the avowed friends the Ontario Temperance Act, but even against their relations, said the Hon. W. T. Raney toward the conclusion of his address before the Kiwanis Club here last night.

U. S. INVENTION HELPS JAPANESE

Tremors of Volcanoes Can Now Be Forecasted. Before Hand.

JAPS PLEASED.

TOKIO, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—Japan, more severely mauled by earthquakes than any other land, plans to turn to in earnest to study the tremors, means of forecasting them, and methods for mitigating their disastrous effects.

Plans and estimates for a system of seismological research stations, to be placed in nine separate districts particularly affected by earthquakes, will be laid before the Imperial diet when it convenes next December.

Dr. Imamura, head of the seismological department of the University of Tokio, believes that earthquakes can be foretold with accuracy sufficient to permit precautions that will lessen their ill-effects. This will be possible through the equipment of these nine stations with the most modern seismological instruments. Every known method will be used to study formations and movements of the earth which may precipitate a disastrous tremor.

The feature of this equipment will be an American apparatus for recording movements of the earth crust, designed by Dr. A. A. Michelson, head of the department of physics of the University of Chicago. This consists of two iron pipes each 502 feet long and 6 inches in diameter, laid across each other, imbedded in concrete and iron casing, and filled with oil and water. The instrument, according to Dr. Imamura, is so designed that the movement of the lines formed by the meeting of the oil and water in the pipes can be observed by means of an arrangement of prisms. The theory is that when the lines have shifted to certain positions the early approach of an earthquake is to be expected. Dr. Imamura says, however, that the exact time of the visitation cannot be foretold. An eight-acre field will be needed for the installation of each station.

MUSKALUNGE FISHING AT FRENCH RIVER CAMP.

In the fall when the 'lunge become voracious and the life of a young fish is worth practically nothing, the fisherman comes into his own. Fighters to the last gasp, the 'lunge is the one fish that one prays, will rise to the plug or minnow and when he does — well, try and yawn. A hot shore dinner in the heart of the 'lunge territory, French River, a rest and then a recounting of the day's sport around the open fire, is something one never forgets.

The beauty of the woods in autumn, the snappy morning atmosphere when one's blood runs faster, good fishing, warm bungalows electrically lighted and a clubhouse with a huge fireplace, music, dancing—all these may be had at French River Bungalow Camp, which will remain open this year until October 15th, following the request of patrons of the camp. The camp is only 215 miles north of Toronto, and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly supply all information, make your reservations, etc. An hour's communion with a hungry 'lunge is worth a life-time listening to the other fellow tell about it. Think it over.

HEN STARTS A FIRE

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Sept. 13. (United Press).— Chicago was close to being destroyed when a cow kicked over a lantern. The nearby village of Burke was close to a like fate when a hen kickd over a candle.

George Smith lighted a sulphur candle in his hen-house to kill the lice. He believed all the chickens were out. But, one hen had been over looked. When the biddy got a whiff of the sulphur fumes she start ed raging around in an effort to escape. She overturned the candle. As the poultry house was in the center of a nest of old wooden structures, the fire was for a time, most threatening.

FRENCH DETECTIVE LANDS HIS VICTIM

Followed Man Half Way Around the World With Success.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—This is the story of a Paris detective who traveled half way around the world for his quarry, and finally, in the dense jungle of Annam, threw aside his disguise and arrested his man. who is now doing three years in jail.

As related here an antiquary named Malraux was under the observance of the Paris police, suspected of being responsible for some recent thefts from French museums. It was thought he had designs on collections of antiques in one of the French provinces, and as a matter of routine a detective was assigned to trail Malraux and a companion, wherever they might go.

The pair went to a seaport and there took passage on a steamer for Saigon, French Indo-China, and the detective went along on the same vessel. He did not even have time to buy a change of clothing, but made friends among the crew and borrowed what he needed.

At Saigon Malraux and his friend posed as rich travelers, anxious to see the country, while the detective sleuthed around in the background. He had, however, made known his mission to the local French authorities, and when Malraux asked for guides to the remote districts of Annam, the detective was among the natives assigned, but cleverly disguised. The party scoured the region of Angkor, rich in holy relics and fine specimens of old Chinese art, and Malraux and his companion bought freely. Also they did not hesitate, conditions being favorable, to burglarize Annamite temples for particularly fine specimens.

The border of Siam was not far away, and the collectors, having decided to leave the country by that route, called up the native guides and dismissed them. Then the Paris detective had his day. The humble disguise was cast aside, the French policeman stepped out, and Malraux and his friend were placed under arrest.

The case was tried at Phompenh, Cochin-China, and Malraux had no defence. It came out, during the trial, that his antiques were destined for a New York antiquary, and were worth 1,000,000 francs.

FLAPPERS SHRINK.

Sometimes They Are Afraid of Travelling Alone.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—Although it is the boast of "modern Eve" that she is quite able to look after herself, the days have yet to come when she will be able to do without aid and care when traveling about the country.

The latest report of the Travellers' Aid Society which exists to help girls and women, shows that their work has grown greater than ever, and statistics for the past year state that 3,307 women and girls have been met at London stations and docks, 234 have been assisted abroad and 577 "stray cases" have been put on the right road.

A long journey alone, especially for the first time, still causes misgivings to English girls, and the idea of crossing London without escort appals some of them.

DOES LONG HAIR MEAN STRENGTH?

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 13. —Does a girl's strength, like Samson's, rest in her hair?

Have the bobbed-haired flappers shorn themselves of some mysterious source of vitality?

Are there girls yet living who are proud enough of woman's crowning glory to cherish it in the face of a clip-clip clicking of shears that is sounding around the world; proud enough of it to go out and battle for it?

They'll tell the world they're beginning to believe that, up at Louisiana State Normal College at Natchitoches.

For there they have a rowing crew of seven beautiful girls, daughters of Louisiana's proudest families, who wear their hair long as their beautiful mothers and grandmothers and great-grandmothers did before them.

And it's the college championship crew, having won every contest in sight from all the crews of bobbed-haired girls who have rowed against them.

The "Seven Spinster Sisters" they call themselves laughingly. "Normal's Freaks" the bobbed-haired sisterhood of the college calls them. And from the point of view of a bobbed-haired world, they do not look freakish. Every one of them has hair thick and shining and long and flowing, falling far down below her waist in a cascading mass of shimmering beauty when it is let down.

Now Louisiana State Normal College is close to the famous Red River and is surrounded by beautiful lakes. Rowing is one of the favorite amusements and exercises of the girls who study there. And scores of college crews spring up among the hundreds of students.

They don't row in the shells of the varsities. They row in specially-built light six-oar racing skiffs, and the faculty encourages the rowing.

Out on lake and river went for practice the crew of the Seven Spinster Sisters, six to row and one as coxswain.

The presently the races started. And "Normal's Freaks" cleaned up everything in sight.

With steady powerful strokes those girls, their long hair whipped to silken banners in the breeze, outrowed crew after crew of their bobbed-haired sisters. And they had the reserve for the spurt at the end that brought them in, winners.

They won't give their names to the papers. It's against Louisiana tradition, just as long hair for women is approved by Louisiana tradition. Their college mates support them in their stand.

But their picture has been taken, and here they are in all the glory of their flowing hair and their championship.

The Threshing BEE

MANY a Canadian has witnessed the whole-hearted co-operation of a Western threshing bee. Neighbourly unity accomplishes in a day what one man could not accomplish by himself alone, and he in his turn helps others accomplish what they would be powerless to do as individuals.

Mutual Life Insurance is like that—an exchange of neighbourly support. It is not a matter of profit for shareholders—it is mutual service for all. Profits there are, of course. The Mutual Life of Canada is well managed. But the profits are divided among the policyholders to reduce the cost of insurance.

Let us send you literature on Mutual insurance. Write us. Or call our agent and he will explain details of our various Endowment, Monthly Income, Ordinary Life and Limited Payment Policies.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rogamund Godolphin, but the match is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killierew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protect Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens, and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea-captain, Jasper Leigh to abduct him and sell him as a galley slave. With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial. Out at sea, Leigh tells Oliver of Lionel's part in the affair and offers, for a price, to take him back to England. Oliver accepts, and Leigh is about to turn back when a great Spanish ship bears down upon them, her guns in action. The Swallow, unarmed, is sunk.

CHAPTER IX

THE CAPTIVE

Sakr-el-Bahr, the hawk of the sea, the scourge of the Mediterranean and the terror of Christian Spain, lay prone on the heights of Cape Spartel.

Above him, on the crest of the cliff, ran the dark green line of the orange groves of Araish—the reputed Garden of the Hesperides of the ancients, where the golden apples grew. A mile or so to eastward were dotted the huts and tents of a Bedouin encampment on the fertile emerald pasture land that spread away as far as the eye could range toward Ceuta. Nearer, astride of a grey rock, an almost naked goatherd, a lithe brown stripling with a cord of camel-hair about his shaven head, intermittently made melancholy and unmelodious sounds upon a reed pipe. From somewhere in the blue vault of heaven overhead came the joyous trilling of a lark from below the silken rustling of the tideless sea.

Sakr-el-Bahr lay prone upon a cloak of woven camel-hair amid luxuriating fern and samphire on the very edge of the shelf of cliff to which he had climbed. On either side of him squatted a negro from the Sus, both naked of all save white loin cloths, their muscular bodies glistening like ebony in the dazzling sunshine of mid-May. They wielded crude fans fashioned from the yellowing leaves of date palms, and their duty was to wave these gently to and fro above their lord's head, to give him air and drive off the flies.

Sakr-el-Bahr was in the very prime of life, a man of a great length of body, with a deep Herculean torso and limbs that advertised a giant strength. His hawk-nosed face ending in a black, forked beard, was of a swarthiness accentuated to exaggeration by the snowy white turban wound about his brow. His eyes, by contrast, were singularly light. He wore over his white shirt a long green tunic of very light silk, woven along its edges with arabesques in gold; a pair of loose calico breeches reached to his knees; his brown muscular calves were naked and his feet were shod in a pair of Moorish shoes of crimson leather, with upcurling and very pointed toes. He had no weapons other than the heavy bladed knife with a jewelled hilt that was thrust into his girdle of plaited leather.

A yard or two away on his left, lay another prone figure, elbows on the ground and hands arched above his brow to shade his eyes, gazing out to sea. He, too, was a tall and powerful man, and when he moved there was a glint of armor from the chain mail in which his body was cased, and from the steel casque about which he had swathed his green turban. Beside him lay an enormous curved simitar in a sheath of brown leather that was heavy with steel ornaments. His face was handsome and bearded, but swarthier far than his companion's, and the backs of his long fine hands were almost black.

Sakr-el-Bahr paid little heed to him. Lying there he looked down the slope, clad with stunted cork-trees and evergreen oaks; here and there was the golden gleam of broom; yonder over a spur of whitish rock, sprawled the green and living scarlet of a cactus. Below him, about the caves of Hercules, was a space of sea whose clear depths shifted with its slow movement from the deep green of emerald to all the colors of the opal. A little farther off, behind a projecting screen of rock that formed a little haven, two enormous masted galleys, each of fifty oars, and a smaller galliot of thirty rode gently on the slight heave of the water, the vast, yellow oars standing out almost horizontally from the sides of each vessel like the pinions of some gigantic bird. That they lurked there either in concealment or in ambush was very plain. Above them circled a flock of sea-gulls, noisy and insolent.

Sakr-el-Bahr looked out to sea, across the straits toward Tarifa and the faint distant European coast line just visible through the limpid summer air. But his glance was not concerned with that hazy horizon; it went no further than a fine white sailed ship that, close hauled, was beating up the straits some four miles away. A gentle breeze was blowing from the east, and with every foot of canvas spread to catch it she stood as close to it as was possible.

Nearer she came on her larboard tack, and not a doubt but her master would be scanning the hostile African littoral for a sight of those desperate rovers who haunted it and who took toll of every Christian ship that ventured over-near. Sakr-el-Bahr smiled to think how little the presence of his galleys could be suspected, how innocent must look the sun-bathed shore of Africa to the Christian skipper's diligently searching spy-glass. And there from his height, like the hawk they had dubbed him, poised in the cobalt heavens to plumb down upon his prey, he watched the great white ship and waited until she should come within striking distance.

A promontory to eastward made something of a lee that reached out almost a mile from shore. From the watcher's aerie the line of demarcation was sharply drawn; they could see the point at which the white crests of the wind-whipped wavelets ceased and the water became smoother. Did she but venture as far southward on her present tack, she would be slow to go about again, and that should be their opportunity. And all unconscious of the lurking peril she held steadily to her course, until not half a mile remained between her and that inauspicious lee.

Excitement stirred the mail-clad corsair; he kicked his heels in the air, then swung round to the impassive and watchful Sakr-el-Bahr.

"She will come! She will come!" he cried in the Frankish jargon—the lingua franca of the African littoral.

"Insh' Allah!" was the laconic answer—"if God will."

A tense silence fell between them again as the ship drew nearer so that now with forward heave of her they caught a glint of the white belly under her black hull. Sakr-el-Bahr shaded his eyes, and concentrated his vision upon the square ensign flying from her main-mast. He could make out not only the red and yellow quarterings, but the devices of the castle and the lion.

"A Spanish ship, Biskaine," he growled to his companion. "It is very well. The praise to the One!"

"Will she venture in?" wondered the other.

"Be sure she will venture," was the confident answer. "She suspects no danger, and it is not often that our galleys are to be found so far westward. Aye, there she comes in all her Spanish pride."

Even as he spoke she reached that line of demarcation. She crossed it, for there was still a moderate breeze on the leeward side of it, intent no doubt upon making the utmost of that southward run.

"Now!" cried Biskaine—Biskaine-el-Borak was he called from the lightning-like impetuousness in which he was wont to strike.

"Not yet," was the calm, restraining answer. "Every inch nearer shore she creeps the more certain is her doom. Time enough to sound the charge when she goes about. Give me to drink, Abiad," he said to one of his negroes, whom, in irony, he had dubbed "the White."

The slave turned aside, swept away a litter of ferns and produced an amphora of porous red clay; he removed the palm-leaves from the mouth of it and poured water into a cup. Sakr-el-Bahr drank slowly, his eyes never leaving the vessel, whose every ratline was clearly defined by now in the pellucide air. They could see men moving on her decks, and the watchman stationed in the foremast fighting top. She was not more than half a mile away when suddenly came the manœuvre to go about.

Sakr-el-Bahr leaped instantly to his great height and waved a long green scarf. From one of the galleys behind the screen of rocks a trumpet rang out in immediate answer to that signal; it was followed by the shrill whistles of the bo'suns, and that again by the splash and creak of oars as the two larger galleys swept out from their ambush. The long armored poops were a-swarm with turbaned corsairs, their weapons gleaming in the sunshine; a dozen at least were astride of the cross-tree of each mainmast, all armed with bows and arrows, and the ratlines on each side of the galleys were black with men who swarmed there like locusts ready to envelop and smother their prey.

The suddenness of the attack flung the Spaniard into confusion. There was a frantic stir aboard her, trumpet blasts and shoutings and wild scurryings of men hither and thither to the posts to which they were ordered by their too reckless captain. In that confusion her manœuvre to go about went all awry and precious moments were lost during which she stood floundering, with idly flapping sails.

In his desperate haste, the captain headed her straight to leeward, thinking that by running thus before the wind he stood the best chance of avoiding the trap. But there was not wind enough in that sheltered spot to make the attempt successful. The galleys sped straight on at an angle to the direction in which the Spaniard was moving, their yellow dripping oars flashing furiously as the bo'suns plied their whips to urge every ounce of sinew in the slaves.

Of all this Sakr-el-Bahr gathered an impression as, followed by Biskaine and the negroes, he swiftly made his way down that aerie that had served him so well. He sprang from red oak to cork-tree and from cork-tree to red oak; he leaped from rock to rock, or lowered himself from ledge to ledge, gripping a handful of heath or a projecting stone, but all with the speed and nimbleness of an ape.

He dropped at last to the beach, then sped across it at a run, and went bounding along a black reef until he stood alongside of the galley which had been left behind by the other corsair vessels. She awaited him in deep water the length of her oars from the rock, and as he came alongside these oars were brought to the horizontal, and there held firmly. He leaped down upon them, his companions following him, and using them as a gangway, reached the bulwarks. He threw a leg over the side, and alighted on a decked space between two oars and the two rows of six slaves that were manning each of them.

Biskaine followed him and the negroes came last. They were still astride of the bulwarks when Sakr-el-Bahr gave the word. Up the middle gangway ran a bo'sun and two of his mates cracking their long whips of bullock-hide. Down went the oars, there was a heave, and they shot out in the wake of the other two to join the fight.

Sakr-el-Bahr, scimitar in hand, stood on the prow, a little in advance of the mob of eager, babbling corsairs who surrounded him, quivering in their impatience to be let loose upon the Christian foe. Above, along the yard-arm and up the ratlines, swarmed his bowmen. From the masthead floated out his standard of crimson charged with a green crescent.

The naked Christian slaves groaned, strained and sweated under the Moslem lash that drove them to the destruction of their Christian brethren.

Ahead the battle was already joined. The Spaniard had fired one single hasty shot which had gone wide, and now one of the corsairs' grappling-irons had seized her on the larboard quarter, a withering hail of arrows was pouring down upon her decks from the Moslem cross-trees; up her sides crowded the eager Moors, evermost eager when it was a question of tackling the Spanish dogs who had driven them from their Andalusian Caliphate. Under her quarter sped the other galley to take her on the starboard side, and even as she went her archers and slingers hurled death aboard the galleon.

It was a short, sharp fight. The Spaniards in confusion from the beginning, having been taken utterly by surprise, had never been able to order themselves in a proper manner to receive the onslaught. Still, what could be done they did. They made a gallant stand against this pitiless assailant. But the corsairs charged home as gallantly, utterly reckless of life, eager to slay in the name of Allah and His Prophet, and scarcely less eager to die if it should please the All-pitiful that their destinies should be here fulfilled. Up they went, and back fell the Castilians, outnumbered by at least ten to one.

When Sakr-el-Bahr's galliot came alongside, that brief encounter was at an end, and one of his corsairs was aloft, hacking from the mainmast the standard of Spain and the wooden crucifix that was nailed below it. A moment later and to a thundering roar of "Alhandollilah" the green crescent floated out upon the breeze.

Sakr-el-Bahr thrust his way through the press in the galleon's waist; his corsairs fell back before him, making way, and as he advanced they roared his name deliriously and waved their scimitars to acclaim him, this hawk of the sea, as he was named, this most valiant of all the servants of Islam. True, he had taken no actual part in the engagement. It had been too brief and he had arrived too late for that. But his had been the daring to conceive an ambush at so remote a western point, and his the brain that had guided them to this swift, sweet victory in the name of Allah the One.

The decks were slippery with blood, and strewn with wounded and dying men, whom already the Moslems were heaving overboard—dead and wounded alike when they were Christians, for to what end should they be troubled with maimed slaves?

About the mainmast were huddled the surviving Spaniards, weaponless and broken in courage.

Sakr-el-Bahr stood forward, his light eyes considering them grimly. They must number close upon a hundred, adventurers in the main who had set out from Cadiz in high hope of finding fortunes in the Indies. Their voyage had been a brief one; their fate they knew—to toil at the oars of the Moslem galleys, or, at best, to be taken to Algiers or Tunis and sold there into the slavery of some wealthy Moor.

Sakr-el-Bahr's glance scanned them appraisingly, and rested finally on the captain, who stood slightly in advance, his face livid with rage and grief. He was richly dressed in the Castilian black, and his velvet thimble-shaped hat was heavily plumed and decked by a gold cross.

Sakr-el-Bahr salaamed ceremoniously to him.

"Fortuna de guerra, senor capitan," said he in fluent Spanish. "What is your name?"

"I am Don Paulo de Guzman," the man answered, drawing himself erect and speaking with conscious pride in himself and manifest contempt of his interlocutor.

"So! A gentleman of family! And well nourished and sturdy, I should judge. In the sok of Algiers you might fetch two hundred philips. You shall ransom yourself for five hundred."

"Por las Entranas de Dios!" swore Don Paulo, who, like all pious Spanish Catholics, favored the oath anatomical.

What else he would have added in his fury is not known, for Sakr-el-Bahr waved him contemptuously away.

"For your profanity and want of courtesy we will make the ransom a thousand philips then," said he. And to his followers: "Away with him! Let him have courteous entertainment against the coming of his ransom."

He was borne away cursing.

LIQUOR THIEF GETS SENTENCE

Young Man Associated With Prisoner Turned King's Evidence.

Sidney Smith, the Midland baggageman, who was arrested recently by C. N. R. Detective W. H. Howard for stealing liquor from a securely locked C. N. R. car on July 18 was sentenced by Magistrate Cook to three months in gaol, with a further indeterminate term of one year.

Miss Edna Matheson, the young lady indicted and associated with Smith, turned King's evidence, thereby receiving the protection of the Court and was liberated.

As a result of certain admissions of Smith, a second charge is pending against him for trafficking with liquor. He was fined $210 in June, and admitted bootlegging for some five months.

In connection with the liquor theft on July 18, a warrant has been issued against another well-known citizen of Midland.

WHEN FOOD FAILS

Cause and Misery Follows. Defective Digestion is the

There are thousands of people who do not get the proper nourishment from the food they eat, because their digestion is defective. Food that lies undigested in the stomach is not merely wasted, but will ferment and poison your system. Flatulence and sour risings in the throat follow and unless you are careful you will become a chronic dyspeptic.

By toning up the stomach to do the work nature intended, you will remove the cause of the trouble. Nothing will more promptly restore the digestive organs than good new blood. Stomach, nerves and glands all depend on the blood, and when it gets thin and watery they are at once weakened. It is because of their action in building up and enriching the blood that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved successful in so many cases of indigestion where ordinary medicines have failed. The new rich blood quickly tones up the digestive organs; the appetite improves and you are able to eat with comfort and get full nourishment from your food.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SMOKING ALTERS WOMEN'S FACES

Heavy Smokers Lose Their Fair Complexion.

VIENNA, Sept. 13.—(Associated Press).—Women who are heavy smokers lose their fair complexion much more quickly than non-smoking women, in the opinion of Dr. R. Hofstatter, noted Viennese gynecologist, who has written a book entitled "The Smoking Woman."

The features of smoking women, he contends, are usually much sharper than those of non-smokers. The more women smoke, the sharper the nose and chin are outlined and the skin becomes very taut.

The lips, says Dr. Hofstatter, lose their rosy natural color and become pale, while the corners of the lips show wrinkles prematurely and there is a tendency for the lower lip of a female smoke addict to project further than the upper lip. Through this gradual change the features of the smoking woman become more and more masculine. Dr. Hofstatter claims to have observed that heavy female smokers have a pronounced growth of beard.

The eye of strong female smokers undergoes a change, says Dr. Hofstatter. The lid rises and falls much more slowly. There is a tendency to stare. Some women even become cross-eyed as they smoke.

Among the women who smoke heaviest are teachers, students, female physicians, actresses, artists and piano virtuosos.

U. S. DEFENSE DAY.

Observed In Great Response By Citizens—Mobilization Test.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13— "Defense Day"—The United States yesterday "mobilized' its forces of war to repel an imaginary enemy invasion. Throughout all the large cities demonstrations of military and naval strength were made, captains of industry and finance produced on paper the sinews of war; church-goers attending special service were admonished in patriotic addresses to stand ready to the defense of the United States; Admirals and Generals spoke to meetings in park and public meeting places.

A tremendous response was made by the citizenry to the request of the war department for a "test" showing of strength. In Washington, New York, Chicago and Boston and Philadelphia as in most of the other large cities enormous parades in which the mufti of the private citizen predominated over the blue and khaki were held President Coolidge reviewed the capital's strength, the parade taking over an hour and a half to pass the chief executive.

The fact that the Horticultural Societies are of particular value to the entire community is evidenced by the financial assistance given by the Provincial Governments to assist in the activities.

THE MIDDLE CLASS TOURISTS IN PARIS

Cheapness of French Francs To American Dollar Interferes.

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Somehow these Europeans who look forward to our coming and separating us from our money, can't help emitting a little sneer out of their system every now and then.

The other day a Parisian newspaper spoke of the thousands of Americans who were spending part of their summer holidays in Paris. Then it added this gracious and pretty thought:

"Many of our guests belong to the middle classes who formerly did not furnish many tourists in Europe. But the cheapness of French francs compared to American dollars has changed all that."

* * *

Every time they look at the map of the United States, British theatrical managers are filled with apprehension and British actors and actresses with anticipation and hope.

There is a reason for this thusness. Salaries for Thespians have never been as high in Britain as they are in America. And with dull business in the towns, the theatres have been having a correspondingly hard time over here. This is in contrast with the success of many good shows over in the United States.

And golden tales have filtered back here about the fat pay envelopes drawn in New York by Nelson Keys, Beatrice Lilley, Gertrude Lawrence, Lupino Lane and other London stage favorites.

The result is that every time a New York producer hits this burg, his table is filled with notes, letters and cards seeking an appointment to talk business.

Many of the very best and cleverest men and women on the British stage are elbowing each other in their eagerness to come over where the big audiences and the big salaries are.

* * *

"Tell me your name and I will tell you your age."

A French journalist announced this not long ago to Parisian women and sent a scare into the hearts of many of them. But it wasn't as serious as it sounded.

He had simply doped out that every generation has its favorites in the Christian names it gives girl babies. Hence you can usually approximately tell a woman's age.

Thus, he says, most women named Martha, Helene, Marguerite or Lucie are in their thirties. Those named Simone, Colette, Denise are now finishing their school studies.

While in the primary schools and the kindergartens there are the women of day after tomorrow—named Monique, Nicole, Jacqueline.

EVACUATION RAPID.

Nearly Half Occupied Territory Sees Departure of Troops.

ESSEN, Septembr 13. — Almost 48 per cent. of the area affected by the Franco-Belgian occupational advance of January, 1923, has already been evacuated, and the foreign troops now are virtually only occupying Prussian territory, which is not included in the provisions of the treaty The French garrisons at Bochum, Dortmund and Gelsenkirchen have virtually withdrawn altogether, and such small contingents as have remained behind are only being retained to carry out the occupation formalities.

Preparations for the evacuation of the occupied districts pursuant to the London agreement continue apace. One of the most noticeable features following the elimination of the Belgian and French customs posts in the Ruhr and near by regions is a sudden cheapening of certain wares, notably cigars and bicycles. Huge stores of merchandise which had been piling up on the border of the occupied zone, have now been released and are being hurried to their destination in fleets of motor trucks. Hence the big decrease in the general range of prices that has occurred.

Much satisfaction is being expressed at the improved train service between unoccupied and occupied Germany. Important express trains between Berlin and Cologne are now stopped less than half an hour at Voh winkel, close to Cologne, where a cursory examination is replacing the wearisome inspection of passengers' passports and baggage. It is also much easier for passengers to get through to places like Dortmund, where they were often subjected to personal examination by French officials searching for dutiable goods.

It is announced from Duesseldorf that an almost audible sigh of relief is arising from the population as the evacuation preparations progress. Already between 300 and 400 dwellings which had been seized by the French authorities have been returned to their former occupants.

PHILIPPINE TRADE GAINS.

MANILA, September 13. — The foreign trade of the Philippine Islands for the first half of 1924 amounted to $125,265,000, against $108,586,000 for the same period in 1923, acording to figures made public by the Bureau of Customs.

The exports during the first six months of this year were $75,912,000 and the imports $49,349,000, leaving a balance in favour of the islands of approximately $26,562,000.

WILL TAYLOR WINS JUDGING OF LIVESTOCK

Otonabee Young Man Will Have Trip To Ottawa Winter Fair.

EIGHTEEN ENTRIES

Competition Gets Ready Response From Young People of County.

William Taylor, of Otonabee, on Thursday succeeded in winning first place in the livestock judging competition with 400 points out of a possible 500. By virtue of his win he receives President Roland Denne's prize of a free trip to the Ottawa Winter Fair. The winner had not the highest marks in any one class, but was consistently near the top in all. Peter Mather, who had the highest total of 400, was disqualified.

The competition was an innovation at Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, and the number of entries, eighteen, was very encouraging. F. C. McRae, Agricultural Representative, Norwood, was in charge, and he had as able assistants A. A. Knight of Lindsay, Agricultural Representative in Victoria county, judging beef cattle; F. C. Patterson, of Port Hope, Agricultural Representative in Durham county, judging sheep; W. H. Smith of Brighton, Agricultural Representative in Northumberland county, judging dairy cattle; and D. McKinnon, grader in Canadian Packing Company, judging swine. C. Frey of Sarnia, Mr. McRae's assistant, was prominent in supervising the competition.

The contestants were allowed twenty minutes in each class, and during this time they had to examine four animals and write down their reasons for choosing one of the four as the best. Oral reasons were also considered.

Winners in Classes.

The following were the winners:

Heavy Horses.

1. Harvey Webber, North Monaghan, 85.
2. Kenneth Petrie, Otonabee, 83.
3. James Petrie, Otonabee, 82.
4. Harold Collins, Otonabee, 73.

Beef Cattle.

2. James Petrie, Otonabee, 86.

1. Will Taylor, Otonabee, 95.
2. Clarence Robertson, Otonabee, 93.
3. Harold Collins, Otonabee, 85.
4. Bob Martin, Otonabee, 77.

Sheep.

1. Clarence Mann, Smith 90.
2. Peter Maher, Otonabee, 88.
3. Dave Forsyth, Douro, 78.
4. Will Taylor, Otonabee, 76.

Swine.

1. Frank Graystock, Otonabee, 99.
2. Bob Martin, Otonabee, 98.
3. F. Dench, Douro, 96.
4. Dave Forsyth, Douro, 95.

Some Were Shy.

Mr. McRae remarked that there were several young men who stayed with the party all the way through the competition and might have figured in the prize list but for their backwardness. He felt also that it was a mistake to limit the competition to those only who had not previously taken part in a judging competition. "That condition," Mr. McRae said, "automatically eliminates from next year's competition all those who took part in this year's contest. Where are we going to get a new crowd every year?" Mr. McRae believes that all who have taken part merely in local competitions should have been admitted, barring young men who have judged at the Royal Winter Fair; Guelph Winter Fair; or Ottawa Winter Fair, as competitors in these Fairs are given special training.

As a tribute to the work of the Agricultural College, it is noteworthy that thirteen of the eighteen young men entered in the competition had attended either a month or a three months course, and all but two of the prize winners were College students.

On the whole, the judges thought, the competition was very successful, and the marks gained by all the contestants show a very good knowledge of the points in judging farm stock. Competitions of this kind will do more, the Agricultural Representatives believe, to further a scientific viewpoint of stocking and breeding than any other system.

NO INTERNAL CURE

The Department of Agriculture is warning farmers against purchasing internal insecticide cures for controlling the external parasites in poultry. All solutions now on the market have been tested and found ineffective.

IMPROVING CLOVER

For an improved clover crop next year, the field should be clipped or lightly pastured. This keeps down the weeds and prevents the young clover plants from blossoming later in the season. But first-year clover should not be clipped too late in the fall or grazed too closely.

DEATH FOLLOWS NEGLECT!

Neglect caused this threshing machine boiler to explode and kill four men almost instantly. It was put to use on a farm recently, after having been idle over winter and spring. Little had been done to overhaul and clean it and no inspection had been made of it.

The Farmer's Hard Lot

(By ALEX. McGREGOR.)

A number of farmers were the other day congregated in a Campbellford store which specializes in agricultural supplies. The rain was falling in a steady downpour outside, and as nearly every farmer in the group had grain still standing in stooks in his fields, an air of gloom and a spirit of pessimism depressed the gathering. Naturally enough the conversation turned on the hard lot of the farmers of the community.

First, there was discussed the question of wages. That was regarded as the great problem of the day. Dairy farmers require more help than does the man who raises grain only. The prevailing rate of wages for transient help is $2 a day, and board, this being the scale insisted upon by even inexperienced workmen who found themselves out of work in the towns. It costs $1 a day to board a husky farm laborer so that he must earn at least $3 a day before the farmer can see any profit in his services.

In manufacturing institutions a man's wages are regulated by the amount of his production, and it is no very difficult matter to keep a debit and credit account with each employee on the payroll. With farm hands it is different, calling as it does for an expert knowledge of the science of bookkeeping. The factory employer works away regardless of the weather. The farm-hand has to desert his task and seek shelter when it rains and at least for intermittent wet spells he suffers no reduction in wages.

Cost of Machinery.

The many labor-saving machines now in use on the modern farm may have helped but it has not solved entirely the farmer's problem. The present cost of his machinery, which can be operated only a few months and for the remainder of the year is left to accumulate rust ish a serious matter. The price of farm machinery in Campbellford today is as high or higher than it was before the government came to the rescue by lowering the tariff.

The Well-Paid Laborer.

The farm laborer who understands his business and in rendering his services is disposed to do the fair thing with his employer, is vastly better off, better fed and more comfortably lodged than are the majority of men working for the wages paid in town to the unskilled. The married laborer on a farm is still more fortunately situated in a good many cases. Take a local instance, for example. On a large dairy farm just outside the limits of Campbellford, a married man has been employed for over five years. His wages are $50 a month, and he is supplied with a house, rent free, that would in town cost him $12 or $15 a month. Besides this, he is furnished with fuel and a small plot of land on which he is able to raise sufficient vegetables for his own use.

That is the condition of a farm laborer who understands his business, and who is faithful in the discharge of his duties, making the interests of his employer his own. He is entrusted with the care of a large herd of valuable stock and while his case may be exceptional, there is no reason why it should be so. Other dairy farmers in the County of Northumberland County are just as ready to appreciate and reward faithful and efficient services as the employer in question.

Pay'ng For a Farm.

The question of paying for a farm came up in the course of the discussion. Of course, every man is ambitious to own his own land. There is not far from town a 100-acre farm that rents for $300.00 a year. The owner, who is anxious to sell it, holds the property at $8,000. Is the tenant better off by purchasing the farm, making a partial payment, than by continuing to pay rent? That question was discussed, and here is the way it was figured out:

If the tenant bought the farm, paying $3,000 down, and giving a mortgage for $5,000 at 6 per cent., to secure the remainder the interest charge would amount to $300, what he now pays in rent. He would, in addition to this, find himself called upon to pay the taxes, say $50 a year. In the meantime, the title to the property remains in the name of the original owner, and the former tenant is wracked with worry, fearing that the crops may fail, and that he may lose all or nearly all of his investment.

A Drastic Suggestion.

One of the farmers present, and it may be stated incidentally, that he was an ardent supporter of the U. F. O. in recent elections, offered a solution. It was that mortgagor and mortgagee divide the payment of the taxes, the former tenant paying the tax on the amount of his mortgage. To prevent any sharp practice, such as the increasing of the rate per cent., a law could be passed, the maximum charge for interest on a mortgage.

Government's New Venture.

Much interest has been excited by the recent announcement that the Federal government purposes to establish a farm along the line of the Hudson Bay Railway to demonstrate to the world that agricultural production is possible in that region of ice and snow. This, too, while farms in fertile and comparatively salubrious Old Ontario are thinly populated, and are producing perhaps not more than one-quarter of their normal capacity if submitted to intensive cultivation.

CATTLE FATTEN UP

Cavan Farmers Plough While Waiting for Grain to Dry.

CAVAN, Sept. 13.—The heavy rain of Monday evening again stopped harvesting. It is very hard to get the grain in in good condition. Several in Cavan centre have peas which they intended threshing in the field this week.

Isaac Fallis' machine was expected at Mr. Stark's on Monday evening to thresh in the field.

Ray Syer's wheat, which he threshed last week, yielded forty bushels to the acre.

The grain is almost all cut, but there is a lot of drawing in to do.

The farmers are getting considerable ploughing done while waiting for the grain to dry.

Since some of the fields have been stripped of grain the cattle have gotten onto them. The new pasture has increased the flow of milk.

A few nice days would see the harvest soon completed in this vicinity.

A TALL ONE.

An Englishman was showing an American round his estate and coming to a giant tree, proudly said:

"Well, Sam, what do you think of that tree? It will take some beating even in America."

"Rubbish; in America the trees are so tall that it takes two men to look to the top of them. One looks upward till he gets tired, then the other one commences where the first left off."

EXERCISE LIVESTOCK

Livestock that is being prepared for the fall shows should get good exercise through the summer months. This keeps them thrifty and their appetite keen. They should be exercised early in the morning, when it is coolest.

FALL PLOUGHING STARTS

Lakefield Crops Garnered in and Threshing Has Started.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 13.—Farmers in the neighbourhood of Lakefield have practically all taken in the last of the grain crop, and threshing is in full swing this week. The late crops all are assured, and dry weather will be a great aid to the work of the farmer for the next few weeks. Some have made a start at the fall ploughing, and in spite of the poor summer most of the farmers are up to the minute with all the branches of the work.

NEXT CROP IS SOWN

Cavan Farmers Have Already Planted Wheat—Peas Being Sold.

CAVAN, Sept. 13.—Among those in this vicinity who have already sown some wheat, are Wm. Pudsy, Wm. Pritchard and J. W. Perrin.

At Cavanville this week, twenty-eight cents is being paid for eggs and thirty-five cents for butter.

Drawing Peas.

Mr. Dewart, at Cavan elevator, has had a couple of motor trucks drawing peas from the farms as they have been threshed.

Many farmers have threshed in the field and sold their peas at once. He paying $1.35 for peas and $1.15 a bushel for wheat.

2000 GALLONS A YEAR

Osmaston Jenny, 8-year-old British Friesian, owned by J. Percy Fletcher of Yorkshire, Eng., is said to have produced 42 tons of milk in her life time, an average record of 10,500 pounds annually. On three occasions she gave more than 2000 gallons of milk in one year.

OVER THOUSAND BIRDS AT THE FAIR THIS YEAR

Big Classes of Popular Varieties and Fair Exhibit of Rare Specimens.

QUALITY SHOW.

School Children's Exhibit a Feature And An Innovation This Year.

During the last few years the exhibits at the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition have increased in numbers and improved in quality and the Board has been the recipient of many compliments as a result from prominent breeders who have visited the show from year to year.

In no place is the improvement more noticeable than in the poultry department. A few years ago, the poultry tent graced about four or five hundreds birds, caged in old wooden coops, the show depending upon a few local exhibitors and one or two big outside breeders for the bulk of the entries.

Now, the Peterboro, Poultry show at the fall Exhibition is known throughout the Province as a quality show, paying prize money and supplying a list of specials that is only exceeded by three autumn fairs in Ontario. Last year, there was over 1,200 entries and this year 1,050 constituting waterfowl, turkeys, rabbits, pheasants, guinea hens, guinea pigs and pigeons.

The haven of the feathered flock in their sanitary wire coops is a place of unusual interest and is always featured by the overtures of an enthusiastic lot of chicken fanciers, excited children and a staring parade of promenaders, over-awed by the wild chirps of the guinea hens, the coarse calls of the goblers and the lusty crowing of the proud males.

The muffs of the Faverollers, the crests of the Polish and the Houdans the pure white coating of the blue faced silkies the beautiful plumage of the Ring Neck Pheasants and the tail less guinea pigs are some of the unusual sighs that always allure an eager crowd of amateurs, unfamiliar with the peculiar features of these rare specimens.

There is a fair exhibit of Jersey Black Giants, a new variety, reputed for their utility qualities and only recently incorporated into the Standard of Perfection as a breed of poultry.

White Wyandottes, White Rocks and Single Combed Anconas have the largest exhibits. Throughout the entire show of the more popular varieties there are large classes. The competition was keen, several winners at the C.N.E. being among the entries and in some cases going unplaced.

Waterfowl both geese and ducks have good exhibits, there being an unusually large class of White Indian Runner ducks. The quality is good, the winners fit for any competition. There are in all 100 ducks. There is a fair entry of pigeons, a few Ring Neck pheasants, a good entry of turkeys, particularly White Holland, a variety evidently growing in favor in these parts. The Bant classes are also well filled.

Harry Lush is the largest exhibitor with 225 entries, representing a substantial portion of the entire show. Mr. Lush could stage a show of his own at any time, on his poultry plant of 23 varieties. Locally, he is the main stay of the industry. As usual he has his string of Hamburgs, no less than five varieties of them, Silver and Golden Spangled, Silver and Golden Pencilled and Black. This year he fared well, but he didn't have it all his own way. Mr. Van Allen of Stirling with 200 entries carried away his share of the prize money. Mr. Van Allen in commenting on the show said that the quality was equal to that of the C.N.E. and he came directly from the Toronto Industrial to Peterboro. Curtis Bros. of Warkworth with about 65 entries are also a big outside exhibitors, while Morgan Brown is there with a string of 59, including a fine exhibit of Columbian Wyandottes and White Holland turkeys. R. M. Patterson, Agincourt, and Lorne Hutchinson, Campbellford are other breeders hailing from distant centres who invaded the show with big exhibits.

An innovation at the Exhibition this fall is the school childrens' exhibit. The classes are fairly well filled and the quality good. Some of them would stand competition in the open classes and are a credit to the youthful breeders. In this division a pen of White Wyandottes won the American class and White Leghorns the Mediterrancan.

That old veteran George Paxman is again superintendent and has everything in great shape. He has around him an able band of assistants, to whose efforts the success of the show can be largely attributed. They constitute a delegation from the Peterboro Poultry Association and the Exhibition Board are fortunate in having experienced poultry men in charge. President James Ellis and Secretary "Bill" Nesbitt have been hustling all week along with "Billy" Stewart, Fred Holmes, Harry Lush and several others. They have artistically decorated the place and gave every attention to outside exhibits.

Horses At Fair Praised As Best Ever Exhibited

"Taken as a whole the exhibits are good", F. C. McRae, Agricultural Representative at Norwood said. "The classes of heavy horses stand out as exceptionally good considering the condition of the horse market at the present time."

W. F. Beatty, judging horses, commented favorably on the showing of heavy horses, although he did not think the Percherons as well filled out as some other classes. General purpose animals were exceptionally good, as were the yeld class, four years and over, and the team classes.

George Graham, veteran showman, was quite pleased with the showing this year, and thinks it compared favorably with other years.

MARMORA FOLK SEEK STORAGE

Garden Produce so Plentiful Cellars Are Insufficient in Capacity.

CROP REPORTS

MARMORA, Sept. 13.—Harry Campion has about finished cutting ten fields of oats and one field of barley. It is expected that about two thousand bushels of grain will be threshed on his farm. In stalk, his oats exceed the average in the district for height. One stalk measured 5-ft. 1 in. His garden contains a grand variety of vegetables, such as no passing photographer would hesitate to picture.

William Davidson has finished threshing for William Henry Derry, and Walter Foley for Patrick Doyle.

Good results were obtained at each place. The average yield of oats in this locality is 50 bushels to the acre.

Barney Callery has cut about ten tons of fine millet from four acres.

Owners of town plots are finding it a problem as to where they shall store the abundance of their garden produce after their own cellar accommodation has been taken up.

Tuberculosis Of Poultry Demands Vigorous Action

By Dr. George H. Conn.

This disease, which is becoming more common, may be introduced into the flock by the purchase of tubercular birds, or by fowls following tubercular cattle and swine.

When you know that your flock is infected with tuberculosis, it is best to destroy the flock; burn the fowls and begin with healthy stock, but not until the pens have been so thoroughly disinfected that danger of reinfection is not possible. Sometimes it is well not to try to raise chickens for a year or more, although if the ground is ploughed up thoroughly, the houses all thoroughly disinfected, and sunlight given every possible opportunity to act on the germs, you can start a new flock without having them become infected, if there are not other infected animals on the farm.

Birds affected with the disease become thin, are dull and restless and the combs turn pale. An infected bird generally wastes away and dies. Sometimes there will be swelling of the joints of the legs and wings, and the fowls are frequently lame. In a tubercular flock, it frequently happens that every few days a bird will be found dead from no apparent cause other than that it just gradually wasted away. If this happens in your flock, have a veterinarian make a post-mortem to see whether or not tuberculosis is present. The typicWal yellowish tubcular lesions will be found.

There is no satisfactory treatment. Birds lacking in vigor and vitality are most readily affected, and proper care, management and feeding all have a tendency to produce vigorous, strong birds that will not be subject to this disease.

SOUTH AMERICA CORN

Canada Will Import 2,000,000 Bushels—U. S. Product High.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13. — Local shipping officials state that between now and the end of October nearly 2,000,000 bushels of South American corn in seven cargoes will be brought to Montreal for milling-feed purposes, owing to the present high price of the American product. The first shipment arrived the other day from the River Plate on the steamer Lord Byron, which then loaded up with Canadian wheat for a continental port.

Grain exports from the port of Montreal to date are still well ahead of last year's; the amount handled locally between the opening of navigation and the middle of August being in the neighborhood of 67,000,000 bushels as against a little over 60,000,000 bushels in the corresponding period of last year.

It is good to know that success generally follows the man who is right.

STUDIED HINTS IN ONTARIO FARM CROP ROTATION

Suggested Grains To Be Planted Over Periods of Various Length.

FERTILIZER IMPORTANT

Rotation From Five To Six Duration Advised By Experts.

ROTATION "A"

(Five years' duration).

First year.—Hoed crop. When corn is hoed crop used apply manure at rate of 15 tons per acre and shallow plough shortly before planting time, turning under both clover and manure. For roots plough previous autumn.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 8 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 8 to 10 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Top dress in autumn with barnyard manure at rate of 10 tons per acre.

Fourth year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough field shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up in autumn in preparation for grain.

Fifth year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover per acre, which allow to grow to be turned under following spring when the hoed crop is corn.

This rotation has proven an excellent one on the Central Experimental Farm Ottawa. When carefully followed, and when cultural operation are well performed weeds have been kept under fair control, and crop yields have been maintained. One-fifth of the land is in hoed crop, two-fifths in grain, one-fifth in clover hay and one-fifth in timothy hay or pasture. It supplies a relatively larger proportion or grain to roots and hay than the ordinary three or four-course rotation, and for that reason would be preferable where considerable gain is called for.

ROTATION "B"

(Five years' duration).

First year.—Hoed crop. When corn is the hoed crop used apply manure at rate of 15 tons per acre and shallow plough shortly before planting time, turning under both clover and manure. For roots plough previous autumn.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 5 pounds timothy per acre. Top dress in autumn with barnyard manure at rate of 10 tons per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed. Plough late autumn.

Fourth year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 5 pounds timothy per acre.

Fifth year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed.

Though the arrangement is different, this rotation is very similar to "A" in the relative amounts of the different crops it supplies. In "A" both clover and timothy hay are provided whereas in "B" clover hay only is grown. "B" has maintained crop yields, and has given profits equal to "A" in the tests so far conducted, but, as indicated does not answer the purpose where a certain proportion of timothy hay is called for. It can, however, be very easily extended into a six or seven-year ortation to include timothy hay or pasture.

ROTATION "L"

(Six years' duration)

First year.—Hoed crop. Apply manure at rate of 12 tons per acre previous autumn, winter or spring.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 5 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed, or for pasture if needed. Plough late autumn.

Fourth year.—Grain. Seed down with 8 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 8 to 10 pounds timothy per acre. Top dress in autumn with barnyard manure at rate of 12 tons per acre.

Fifth year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed or for pasture if needed.

Sixth year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough field shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up in autumn in preparation for hoed crop.

This rotation differs from "B" in that land is left in hay for two years instead of one after seeding down with "Fourth year.—Grain." It is not likely to prove as profitable as the shorter ones mentioned above, but would serve very well the farmer who wished to change gradually from no particular rotation to a short one of proved merit.

ROTATION "M"

(Seven years' duration)

First year.—Hoed crop. Apply manure previous autumn, winter or spring at rate of 16 tons per acre.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 8 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 8 to 10 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed.

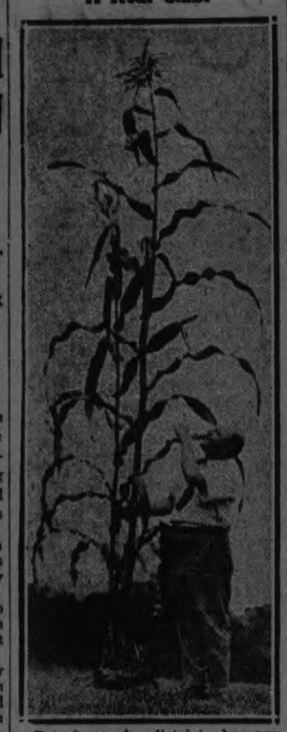
Fourth year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough field shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up late autumn in preparation for grain.

Fifth year.—Grain. Seed down with 8 pounds red clover, 2 pounds alsike and 8 to 10 pounds timothy per acre. Top dress in autumn with barnyard manure at rate of 12 tons per acre.

Sixth year.—Clover hay. Cut two crops if possible. Second crop might be used for seed.

Seventh year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough fields shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up late autumn in preparation for hoed crop.

A Real Giant



Peterborough district has produced this year some giants in corn stalks. Dozens were shown at the Exhibition. The one in the picture measures 14 feet, 9 inches.

MENNONITES BUY LAND

Prairie Acres Will Support New Settlers From Liban.

WINNIPEG, Sept, 13.—The newly organized Mennonite Land Settlement Board for the placement of settlers from Libau, who will arrive in Canada shortly, has purchased 32,063 acres of farm lands in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, according to information obtained here. The Eagle Lake farm, near Flaxcomb, Sask., comprising 8480 acres, is said to be one of the large farms obtained while extensive acreages at Harris and Hanley, Sask., and Meadows, Man., are said to be included in a recent deal.

GREATER COTTON CROP

According to the recent crop estimate by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, this year's cotton yield will reach 12,351,000 bales of 500 pounds, gross weight, provided conditions are favorable for the rest of the season. This is more than two million bales higher than last year's crop, but nearly that much less than the average for the five years from 1910 to 1914.

CHAMP GUERNSEY

Wisconsin boasts a world's champion in a grade Guernsey cow owned by Matt Domaszek of Amherst Junction. She is New Hope Lily, who has just completed a record of 17,555.7 pounds of milk and 887.74 pounds of butter fat, which is more butter fat than any other grade Guernsey has produced.

GOOD FOR CHILDREN

A form of wholesome sweet is made by toasting entire wheat bread or rye bread, spread with butter and over it put a layer of honey. Lightly dust with freshly ground carraway seeds or occasionally cinnamon. The latter should be used sparingly. A taste for spices of any kind is not ot be cultivated.

DENMARK'S MARGARINE

From 20 margarine production plants in 1910, Denmark counted 110 in 1923. But out of these only 10 establishments produced 80 per cent of the country's total product. Five per cent of the total output came from 74 of the 110 plants.

GRAIN FOR DRY COWS

Dry cows which are due to freshen about this time should be fed a little grain. Liberal feeding will result in a favorable increase in the following year's milk flow.

CAMPBELLFORD SMALL GARDEN YIELDS LIVING

James Alexander Proves by Test That Acre and Half is Enough.

CULTIVATES WELL

Huge Farms Are Unnecessary and Burdensome—Works By Hand.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13.—It is not necessary for a man to own 100 acres of land, the standard division of farms in Ontario, in order to make a comfortable living out of the soil. It is possible for him to avoid the burden of a mortgage that causes everything about his premises to creak when the payments fall due, and also to get around the vexation of endeavoring to find suitable labor in the busy season. James Alexander, of this town, has proved to a demonstration, that extends over a long period of years, that from one-and-a-half acres of land, intensively cultivated, a comfortable, and independent living, may be obtained. Mr. Alexander modestly disclaims that he lived from the produce of his garden, but asserts that he could if he choose to go the limit.

Forty-two Years a Resident.

Mr. Alexander came to Campbellford 42 years ago. His first job was as section foreman on the local branch of what was then the Grand Trunk Railway, and he stayed in that position for over ten years. He left the railway to become street foreman in Campbellford. He bought one and a half acres of land at the corner of Garry and Portage Streets, on which he erected a comfortable brick house.

He Started on the Land.

It was Mrs. Alexander who is responsible for her husband's venture which has proved so successful. She began the cultivation of vegetables and small fruits, and the business so increased that Mr. Alexander was obliged to give up his municipal position and devote all his time to his garden.

He specializes in the raising of trawberries, raspberries, and all kinds of vegetables, his produce ripening at different seasons, so that from early spring until late in the fall he has something for the market. He does all the work without paying a cent for hired labor, and does not even keep a horse. There is no cultivator on his premises, all the hoeing and weeding being done by hand, and the garden at all times of the year is perfectly clean. Any man who has had experience with the hoe in an acre and a-half plot of vegetables can form some idea of the summer tasks that confronts Mr. Alexander. The latter has never read Markam's gloomy poem on "The Man with the Hoe," and if he had, the chances are that he would regard that production with cynical and professional contempt.

The Strawberry is King.

Mr. Alexander says that while he may not have reached that point of success, he believes it is possible for a family to live on the earnings of a garden no larger than his own. If he cared to keep a horse to get his produce to market, instead of delivering it by hand, so to speak, his income would be greater. But he is satisfied to carry on as he has been doing. He has no children of his own—an only daughter having died some years ago—but he and his wife have brought up a number of the children of other people, some of whom they put through the High School, and who are now comfortably settled in homes of their own.

The best paying crop that a man can raise in a market garden, Mr. Alexander says, is strawberries. At 10 cents a box there is good money in that luscious fruit, and the price seldom falls below that figure. If he cared to plant all his land to strawberries he is satisfied that he could show as much profit at the end of the season as many a man on a hundred-acre farm; but to do so would thrust him into the labor problem, and he prefers to do everything by himself.

Some Cold Figures.

This year, Mr. Alexander had a patch of strawberries 38 yards long by eight yards wide, or 304 square yards. From this he sold 800 boxes at an average price of 10 cents, the total cash return being $80. It would take sixteen such plots to make an acre, and sixteen times $80 is $1,280. Growing strawberries evidently pays better than raising wheat, even when the latter yields 50 bushels to the acre.

Some Disadvantages.

Mr. Alexander does not carry on his business without handicaps. The tariff on fruits and vegetables, for instance, affords him no real protection, for the market gardeners of Brighton and Cobourg bring their produce to Campbellford by the wagon and truck load and peddle their wares from door to door without let or hindrance. But while Mr. Alexander feels that this freedom in trade is a detriment to himself, yet it is a benefit to the public at large and he is not disposed to complain.

His annual tax bill is about $75 a year, as much as is paid on a hundred-acre farm in the township. His property is close to and within the town limits. If he lived on the other side of the boundary his yearly earnings would show a larger credit balance.

COLORING COMPETITION.

Entries are being received daily for the Examiner coloring contest. The picture to be colored appeared in the last Farm Page, and the competition is open to all children.

PRISON PITCHER FACES GALLOWS

Three Convicts Offer Their Lives For His In Loyalty To Their Team.

GIVEN REPRIEVE.

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., Sept. 13.—From San Quentin prison comes proof of the proverb that there is some good in the worst of men. Three of the convicts have offered to go to the gallows in the place of one of their comrades-in-stripes. They pleaded to be allowed ot trade their lives for him.

But it isn't so much for love of their fellow convict as from loyalty to their penitentiary. The condemned man has been pitching his prison to baseball victory since he was granted a temporary reprieve from the hangman a few days ago, and is hailed as the greatest pitcher San Quentin ever held. The inmates now declare that they cannot afford to lose him, and to prevent that catastrophe befalling the institution three of his admirers have demanded that one of them be allowed to keep his engagement on the gallows. Two of them are fellow members of the team and the other is a loyal fan.

The baseball hero of San Quentin is Clarence "Tuffy" Reid, aged 19, who was to hang two weeks ago for killing a man in the hold-up of a gambling house. After the State Governor had refused a reprieve, the trial judge was instrumental in securing the stay of execution on the ground that new evidence had been discovered.

During the last two weeks Reid has twice pitched the "home team" to victory in games against teams from San Francisco banking houses. In the first he scored the 1-0 victory, striking out twelve men, and allowing only three hits. In the next game he struck out nine men and allowed only five hits.

"He's the best pitcher San Quentin ever had," a deputation of convicts told the Warden after the second trial, "and we can't afford to let him go. We want a winning team and are willing to pay the price." Then the offer was made that one of the three volunteers be allowed to give his neck for the honor of old San Quentin.

The proposal has been brought to the attention of the Governor.

J H THOMAS TO VISIT OTHER DOMINIONS

Finds South Africa a Good Country For Settlers With Money.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—J. H. Thomas, British Colonial Secretary, who with Senator Boyer, sailed for home Friday, after touring South Africa with the Empire Parliamentary delegation, declared in an interview that the South African Union's participation in the proposed Empire conference in London must not be taken as abrogating the rights of each Dominion or of delegating to someone else what was and must remain a Cabinet responsibility. The conference, he said, was being called to explore the whole Empire situation.

Mr. Thomas said he was more than satisfied with his all too brief visit. He considered South Africa a good country for settlers with money, though there seemed to be no scope for the manual laborers. He said he intended to visit the other Dominions though he did not commit himself as to which one he would visit next. Referring to the Irish bill, Mr. Thomas stated that his secretaries would join him at Madeira to acquaint him with the developments. He declared that something must be done for the residents on the Island of Tritan da Cunda in the South Atlantic, who had sent a deputation to lay their grievances before him.

LIQUOR IN WEST.

REGINA, September 12. — The first definite pronouncement from the provincial government regarding the new liquor legislation for the province of Saskatchewan came yesterday, when Premier Dunning told a delegation of 250 that any hope for any vested interest in the liquor business, was vain.

The hotelmen strongly urged the adoption of the Alberta system of the sale of beer by the glass in licensed houses. The premier replied that while the aim of the government would be to provide easy access to the milder forms of intoxicants rather than hard stuff, he could see no practical means of acceding to their request.

C.G.E. Girls Lose Pitcher Meet Toronto Next Year
